This calls to mind a particular friend of mine, Mr. Angus Woodbridge, whose summer home is about three miles from where I live, located on the north shore of Lake Erie. He has less than two acres, but the fifth year the shrubbery was planted there were over seventy birds' nests around this lovely home, twenty different varieties, a pair of mourning doves being so bold as to build on the window-sill and raise their young there. The brown thrasher, who has such a beautiful imitating voice, could not resist the temptation and built his home in the wild grape arbor that covers the path in the little ravine that wends its way down to the sandy beach. My chief reason for mentioning this fact is to make it plain that these beautiful creatures will come clear across the continent to you, if you will go a few steps towards them.

CHAPTER XIII.

The Swallow Family.

This is, to my notion, the most valuable family of birds we have in America, as they live entirely on winged insects. And while I am writing on their value, I want you to keep your eye on their intelligence.

Over twenty-five years ago we built an extra large drying shed at our tile factory. It is two hundred feet long, and two stories high; then with the addition of one hundred feet of machine shed, we have over three hundred feet of the very choicest place for the old-fashioned, fork-tailed barn swallows.

During that time I read the first game law I have any knowledge of ever being published. I found it in Deuteronomy, twenty-second chapter, verses six and seven, which reads as follows: "If a bird's nest chance to be before thee in the way in any tree, or on the ground, whether they be young ones, or eggs, and the dam sitting upon the young, or upon the eggs, thou shalt not take the dam with the young: but thou shalt in any wise let the dam go, and take the young to thee: that it may be well with thee, and that thou mayest prolong thy days." I read, and tried to analyze the meaning, but my eyes were too weak to see the point.

Finally, to my delight, when I went over to the factory one morning here was the pair of long-looked-for swallows darting around near the south end of this shed. Now the machinery, where ninety per cent. of the work is done, is at the extreme north end of the shed; the south part is used for drying purposes only. And the next morning this pair of birds had some mud stuck up at the points of the third pair of rafters from the south end. They were building just as far from us workmen as they possibly could and still be under the same roof. How this pair of birds did keep those two verses of Scripture fresh in my mind.

The next morning, before I had my working harness sufficiently buttoned to avoid an embarrassing accident, I took a peep out the window to see what the bird house looked like in daylight, and really my breath was almost taken from me, for here was a pair of martins hovering around the house, and when the schoolboys went by they shouted "Uncle Jack," and as they shook their little dinner pails and laughed heartily they said, "there are two blackbirds around your martin house."

In less than a month there were thirteen rooms occupied. This, of course, taught all of us children, old and young, what a purple martin was. In August I counted sixty-three hovering around the house at one time.

Now I have built two of what I call "martin castles," but it took me three years to induce the birds to come to them. To-day they have almost discarded the frame house, and are in the "castles;" the fact that the "castles" are warmer in the spring and cooler in the summer possibly accounts for this. But the brick house is altogether too expensive.

BAXTER PRINTS ARE EXPLAINED

Mrs. N. H. Sutton Gives Interesting Paper to Art Study Club.

"Baxter Prints," was the subject of a very interesting paper given by Mrs. N. H. Sutton at the last meeting of the Art Study Club of the Women's Art Association.

There are about 370 prints of this type and of one of these alone, the "Holy Family," there were 700,000 copies, with 3,000,000 prints as the total output. Mrs. Sutton spoke of the fascination of making a hobby of these old prints, from old books and old music, like the Baxter print of Jenny Lind on the "Deutsche Lieder" Valse, on old work boxes, on old scrap books, at auction sales, in old advertisements and Sunday school cards, and pictures of the Great Exhibition at the Crystal Palace. One rare treasure was alluded to, in the ladies' wire card basket which had a copy of the Duke of Wellington print forming its centre.

"Aroused by the interest of an exhibition of Baxter prints held in Ottawa in 1921, a pair of prints entitled Charles Chubb and Maria Chubb, were discovered, tucked away in a long neglected parcel. Such a pair were sold in London not long after, for more than $3000.

"At recent auction sales in London during 1917 and 1918, prices realized for prints ran all the way from five pounds to sixty eight pounds for the famous Coronation pictures."

George Baxter was born in 1804, and died in 1867. He was born into the printing craft, being the second son of John Baxter, the son of a farmer and himself a printer, wood engraver and publisher in Surrey, England. Upon the completion of his school days, George entered the same business. Showing talent for artistic work, his father allowed him to develop along that line, and at 19 years of age, he did his first serious work by illustrating with engravings a history of Surrey, which his father was publishing. In 1837, he went to London and set up in business for himself. Later, he married Mary Harrild, daughter of a man who proved to be a life-long friend, Robert Harrild, proprietor of a large London Publishing company.

In carrying out his ideal of perfect work with inadequate equipment, George Baxter showed the dominant characteristics of his life his artistic ability, his patience and his perseverance. However, he was unable to profit financially by his work, and in 1865 his entire plant was sold by auction. He died two years later after an accident. To-day, costly books concerning his work are issued. A Baxter Society holds frequent exhibitions, Baxter prints are permanently shown in several public galleries, a monthly Baxter Times is published and a bi-monthly sale takes place at a famous auction room, all signs of a growing Baxter boom.

Mrs. Sutton went on to describe the characteristics of the Baxter method, and alluded in closing to the very fine collection of Baxter prints possessed by Walter H. Millans of Standish Hall, in Hull, Quebec.

Drive with confidence---There are Dominion Tire Depots everywhere

THIS is the era of the chain store. Immense networks of grocery stores, hardware shops, drug and departmental stores, and gasoline stations, have spread like magic across the land.

Co-operative methods in the merchandising and servicing of tires had to come. We are proud to be connected with the pioneer organization in this field.

Away across the length and breadth of Ontario and Quebec spreads our network of depots. Scarcely a town but you will find a shop with the distinctive orange and blue front. The map above shows the location of depots in this locality.

Each of the hundreds of depots offers the most expert and courteous tire service obtainable in its locality. Although each is independently owned, all are links in this great chain of service shops which is sponsored by the largest rubber organization in Canada.

So now, you can drive with confidence — wherever you motor. There are Dominion Tire Depots everywhere.

STEAMER HELD UP BY ICE IN STREAM

SAULT STE. MARIE, Mich., April 12.—Beleaguered by ice from above and below the grain-laden steamer James B. Eads, with a crew of 20 men and one woman, lies helpless in St. Mary's River half way between the Sault and Detour with food and coal running short and tugs blocked by extensive fields of ice from coming to her aid.

The Eads weighed anchor in the West Neebish rock cut last week after wintering in the cut. She proceeded half a mile down stream and was forced to a stop crosswise of the channel with further progress blocked by ice eight to 12 inches thick.

The supply of fuel which she took to keep her boilers steamed up during the winter is running low and no coal can be taken over the broken ice-fields. Likewise the food is running short. The Eads hoped to break through to a Detour coal dock to take on fuel and food supplies.

It is really a Band!

The audience is clamouring for an encore. A boy in uniform displays a placard reading "By Request". The "March King" raises both his arms. A moment of silence—and the trumpets and trombones break into the martial swing of some world-known Sousa march. Magnificent playing—this!

Tonight . . . tomorrow . . . whenever and as often as you wish, you may hear this band in your own living room, through the new Orthophonic Victrola. Not "something like Sousa", but Sousa, exactly as you would hear him in concert. Not Sousa only, but the foremost artists in every field, symphonic, operatic, ballad and dance, are ready to sing and play for you always. In no other way can you hear them with such realism, for this amazing instrument is based upon "Matched Impedance", Victor's exclusive principle of natural music for the home. New beauty and depth—full, round, mellow, life-like. Bass and treble—all there!

Beautiful cabinets, smart designs, rare woods. Electric drive, if you wish at slight additional cost. All instruments self-stopping. Prices from $1400 to as low as $115 on convenient payments at all His Master's Voice dealers. Hear them today!

"Safe and Sudsy" R.R. 4, Peterborough Mrs. Hunt

"When I saw how many women were praising Rinso, I thought I'd try it, too. I'm glad I did! Why, it's my best friend! Floors, linoleum, tiles—everything is spick and span in no time! And as for the wash, Rinso is so safe, and so sudsy in our water that the clothes become snowy and spotless without the least bit of hard rubbing! Even boiling isn't really necessary. Another thing: my hands look ever so much better now for not being in the hot suds so long."

Mrs. Hunt, R. R. 4, Peterborough.

THERE is now an easier, quicker way of doing the washing—thanks to Rinso.

This new way is as different from grandmother's way as your own styles are different from hers.

And millions of women have proved that this new way is far better.

For them the old days of hard rubbing and boiling are over. Yet nobody has whiter, brighter clothes than they.

Rinso will soak clothes clean. It is a granulated soap which makes rich, quick-cleansing suds, even in hard water.

Simply let clothes soak in the Rinso suds, then, with no boiling even the most soiled parts become spotless with little or no rubbing.

Rinso will save you hours of hard work each wash day. Use it in hard or soft water, wash-tub or machine. Your nearest grocer has Rinso.

WOMEN FROM ALL PARTS OF THE DOMINION TO GATHER AT OTTAWA FOR CONVENTION

HEAVY PROGRAM.

Resolutions Committee Will Hold Meeting Before the Formal Opening.

OTTAWA, Ont., April 12 (Canadian Press). — Five hundred women from all parts of Canada will meet here on Tuesday for the First National Assembly of Liberal Women.

Delegates from Montreal have chartered a special train to arrive the morning on which the convention opens. Fifty Liberal women are coming from Toronto alone. From Western Ontario a trainload of delegates is expected.

Prince Edward Island was the first province to choose its delegation, thirteen women from Charlottetown. From New Brunswick and Nova Scotia 45 delegates are expected; from Quebec 150; from Ontario, 250.

The Western provinces will send about fifty representatives and British Columbia 12.

Many Prominent Figures.

Many prominent names figure in the list of delegates, especially from the West. The two women members of Provincial Legislatures, Hon. Mary Ellen Smith, of British Columbia, and Mrs. Edith Rogers, member of the Manitoba House, will be present, and will address the convention. Mrs. Mary McCallum Sutherland, formerly secretary of the Grain Growers' Association, is a delegate. Mrs. Sutherland accompanied Hon. T. A. Crerar when, as leader of the Progressives, he made a general election tour in the West. Prof. Carrie Derrick will represent the Women's Central Liberal Club, Montreal; Mrs. R. F. McWilliams will be a representative from Winnipeg; Dr. Grace Ritchie England will be a delegate from Montreal, and address the convention.

In the list of delegates, the prefix "Miss" seldom appears. Nine out of ten of the delegates are married women with families. The majority, it is intimated, are paying their own expenses.

Representation From Quebec.

The representation from Quebec is unexpectedly large. Convenors here are asking themselves if this is because the women of Quebec are feeling a definite desire for the franchise.

An echo of the famous Bagot by-election is found in the name of Madame A. D. Morin, representing the women of Ste. Pie.

Even such outlying points as St. Phanphile, Amoui, and Montmagny, in Quebec, are sending women representatives. From the West, the greater number of the delegates are from rural districts.

The program is a full one. Before the formal opening on April 17, a preliminary meeting of the Resolutions Committee will be held. Thirty-five resolutions are now ready for the committee covering questions of technical organization, methods of protecting the health of women and children, the criminal code, and the cost of living.

The three chairwomen are Mrs. C. H. Thorburn of Ottawa, Mrs. P. F. Casgrain of Montreal, and Mrs. W. R. Motherwell, wife of the Minister of Agriculture.

Strict rules of parliamentary procedure governing debates will prevail. Closure will be applied even more rigorously than in the House of Commons for main speakers are to be allowed but ten minutes each, the others three. To all working committees, one additional member is to be added from each of the nine provinces, while Ontario and Quebec, because of their larger population, are each allowed two members.

The convention will be in session two days. It will close with a banquet to Premier King.

ASK MAYOR TO LAY CRIMINAL CHARGES

Commissioners Decline To Suspend Manager of L. and P. S. Railway.

LONDON, Ont., April 12 — A strenuous seven-hour session of the London and Port Stanley Railway Commission yesterday afternoon and evening brought out Mayor G. A. Wenige's long-promised charges against the administration of the road and threw on the Mayor the onus of personally laying criminal charges against the persons, he claims, who flouted the law in handling liquor shipments.

The Commission at first inclined to the Mayor's plan to suspend Manager Richards and have a probe conducted by Crown Attorney Judd, but conferred with City Solicitor T. G. Meredith and embarked on a totally different plan. The meeting stands adjourned on the call of Chairman Senator E. S. Little, the Mayor promising that he would lay criminal charges against certain individuals. If this course fails, then Commissioner J. P. Moore, K.C., and Chairman Little will press to have the whole matter aired before the County Judge.

Suspension Was Asked.

The Mayor in moving the suspension of Manager Richards stated that the suspension was asked for by Crown Attorney Judd. He said that the Crown Attorney was as familiar with the evidence collected as he was himself, and that the Crown had recommended the suspension of the Manager as a first step. Then, he said, the Crown Attorney would launch a satisfactory probe.

Commissioners Burdick and Wright were disposed to accept this plan, but Commissioner Moore held that a more complete probe could be looked for from the County Judge, who had authority to command the attendance of witnesses and to hear evidence on oath.

Senator Little regarded the matter as a variance of opinion between the Crown Attorney and Commissioner Moore, both lawyers, and proposed that City Solicitor Meredith be called. Mr. Meredith rather concurred with Commissioner Moore's opinion, but at length had a telephone conversation with Crown Attorney Judd. Mr. Meredith returned to inform the meeting that Mr. Judd had stated that the Mayor was in error in believing that the Crown Attorney had asked for the suspension of the manager. It was felt by the majority of the Commissioners in that event that it would be unfair to scandalize any employee without a trial, and it was left to the Mayor to lay his charges and to prosecute those whom his investigation had seemed to incriminate.

Mine Stocks Easier As Trading Slackens

TORONTO, April 12 (Canadian Press).—With some slackening off in activity, though trading was over the million share mark, stocks showed an easier tendency on the Standard Mining Exchange this morning. The great proportion of stocks, however, were steady with yesterday. Barry Hollinger at 135, Bidgood at 106, the Kirkland Lakes and Noranda at 18¼ were among the unchanged issues. Argonaut, again an active leader, eased fractionally to 7⅜, and Howey lost three at 112. Moffat Hall lost another four points at 26, Vipond eased 2½ at 60, and Sherritt softened five at 7.30. Tough Oakes, gaining three at 57, was one of the comparatively few stocks to record a gain.

Page Hersey Is Leader Active Toronto Market

TORONTO, April 12 (Canadian Press).—Page Hersey was the chief feature of a very active session of the Toronto Stock Exchange this morning, gaining another point at 104 after the large advance yesterday. The rest of the list, however, generally tended easier, with Massey-Harris losing nearly a point at 45 and International Nickel losing a quarter at 92¼. Steel of Canada eased back five at 229. Fanny Farmer [illegible] arance between 39 and 40, closing at noon at the lower figure, while Orange Crush firmed on its opening prices yesterday. Canada Dry Ginger Ale was the strong leader of the curb market, gaining to 68¼, with British American Oil improving at 37, and the liquor issues all gaining slightly.

MINERAL EMPIRE IN CANADA NORTH

TORONTO, Ont., April 7.—(by the Canadian Press)—"The main idea I am taking back to New York with me," said Arthur Hunt Chute, author and magazine writer, who made an extended trip recently along the Hudson Bay railway to Hudson Bay and beyond in search of material for a book which he intends writing, "is that Canada's empire of minerals is probably going to supplant her empire of wheat to the south. Her empire of minerals is pushing the map up to the north. The discoveries to the north are giving Canada depth. While I was up there, there was a discovery of silver and nickel along the new railway."

Mr. Chute characterizes the Hudson Bay railway as a "dream railway," which set out to be a grain route but will end by being a mineral high road. Referring to railway builders in the Hudson Bay district the writer says: "They're not talking about the great days of Canada in the past. They're making great days for the future. Klondike was a hit-and-miss affair to this northern Manitoba business. It's more industrial mining. Take Harry MacLean, the railway builder up there. He builds a mile and a half of line a day. On January 3 he started the Flin Flon line, and by March 16, when I left, he had 53 miles completed. The whole affair gets bigger and bigger. They thought Flin Flon would involve the expenditure in that part of the country of $50,000,000. Now its running to $100,000,000.

Arthur Hunt Chute has been an able seaman before the mast, and during the war he served with the Canadian artillery. He is a member of the Authors' Club of New York. He was a war correspondent during the Balkan war of 1912-13, and was in northern Africa during the French campaign. He was also at Vera Cruz when the American force landed there in 1914.

NOT W. S. MERRELL.

To the Editor of the Examiner:

Sir: In connection with the report of the police court proceedings in yesterday's Examiner, in which the name of W. H. Merril was mentioned, I wish you would make the statement that the party mentioned is not W. S. Merrell of H. LeBrun & Co. I made a correction some time ago but it seems necessary to do so again as confusion evidently still exists in the minds of some of our citizens. W. S. Merrell.

METROPOLITAN LIFE EXECUTIVES.
A. F. C. Fiske, 2nd Vice-President, and Henry E. North, 3rd Vice-President in charge of Canada.

Metropolitan Life Insurance representatives in this district, as well as those from practically all of Ontario, will assemble in Toronto from Thursday to Saturday of this week for a series of conferences on various phases of the company's work. This will be one of the most important conventions held by the company in some years. A. F. C. Fiske, Second Vice-President of the company, will come to Toronto representing the President. He will be accompanied by other officials, including Mr. Henry E. North, Third Vice-President in charge of Canada; Dr. J. N. Coolidge, Assistant Medical Director, Canadian Head Office; Mr. N. L. Burnette, Assistant Secretary, in charge of Welfare Work in Canada; Hon. Dr. H. S. Beland; Agency Supervisors George C. Jepson and D. W. Kelly; Miss Alice Ahern, in charge of the company's tree nursing service in Canada; Field Supervisors C. Corriveau and J. Kyle, and Mr. A. G. Bradley, Manager Publicity Division, Canadian Head Office.

The business sessions during the day will be devoted to the work of the field staff. Two banquets will be held at the King Edward Hotel, on the evenings of April 12th and 14th, and will be outstanding events. They will be attended by a large and distinguished gathering, including field representatives, officials of the company and many prominent citizens. In addition to the field men from the Toronto territory, those from such outside points as Hamilton, London, Kingston, Windsor, North Bay, St. Catharines, Niagara Falls, Peterboro, Oshawa, Barrie, Guelph, Kitchener, Brantford, Stratford, Timmins and Smith's Falls will be present.

The delegates will number over 400.

The Metropolitan Life is the largest insurance company in the world, and its Canadian business is the largest in Canada of any company. It wrote last year over $194,000,000 new business in the Dominion and has insurance in force in Canada of $769,114,229, as at December 31, 7927. Metropolitan investments in Canada alone exceed $153,000,000, its holding in purely government and municipal bonds being more than $99,000,000. There are 97 branch offices of the company in Canada, in addition to Canadian Head Office in Ottawa, and some 2500 persons make up the personnel.

The day he bought his first camera, one of the small Brownie box variety now almost obsolete, Lewis R. Parks hung out his shingle as a photo developer. To-day he is a member of the Master Photo Finishers' Association of America, operating what Kodak men have described as one of the best equipped and most efficient photo finishing plants in Eastern Ontario, with a staff of five, including himself, and a maximum output of 40,000 prints a month.

Half of Mr. Parks' business is from outside of Peterborough, converging from a territory extending as far as Smiths Falls on the east to Lindsay and Port Hope ,also down through Campbellford, and Stirling. For the convenience of his agents in those places Mr. Parks has special miniature mail bags in which rolls of films are easily mailed to Peterborough, and as an example of the exactness of the detail of his service he is able to promise delivery in specified times. For instance, he delivers the finished prints in Lindsay nine hours after they were mailed from Lindsay, and the same expeditious circuit to Smith's Falls requires only 18 hours.

Prepared For Future.

On Monday, April 2, Mr. Parks received 100 rolls of films from out-of-town, developed them and turned out 966 prints in ample time to catch the noon trains of that day. And his plant is geared for a much larger production than it has yet attained.

"We have a capacity for more than a year's steady growth," Mr. Parks told the Examiner yesterday in his studio at the corner of Park and Townsend streets opposite the C.G.E. company's immense factory.

Mr. Parks is exceedingly modest about his achievement. He admits that it is only comparatively recently that he realized he had a flourishing and successful business on his hands. When he bought the Brownie camera he did not strike an Alger pose of determination and prophecy, and announce his intention of becoming a photographer and photo finisher. He was only another boy attracted by the mystery of that little black box ,and once again the "boy was father of the man." His father kept a grocery store at that time around at the Rubidge street corner of Townsend street, and upstairs the boy temporarily converted the bath tub into a developing tank. Rather, it was his workship, with the tub as a general receptacle for smaller extemporized baths for the films and prints. Afterwards he worked for a time at the Duffus' garage, and served five profitable months with the late Charles Matthias, from whom he gained considerable valuble experience. One of the memorable dates Mr. Parks readily recalls is December 16, 1918, the day of his discharge from the Air Force, and another is February 16, 1919, the day he posted his business sign at the corner of Park and Townsend streets, the site of his recent expansion.

Gradual Development.

In the subsequent years he struggled along, working hard making the most of many a print that bore indelible evidence of utter disregard or ignorance of the canons and elements of photography, even amateur, Brownie No. 2, photography. In going about the country with a new camera which he had bought Mr. Parks took photographs of hundreds of scenes which he used for picture post cards, wholesaling them to local dealers in nearby towns and villages. Gradually his business grew, but as he remarked in his retrospect of that slow process, it was not until several years ago that he perceived the possibilities of his business. From that complete realization dates the development and elaboration of the equipment and studio which has earned the praise of visitors competent in the craft.

A Compact Plant.

The top floor of the Parks studio is a compact arrangement of ample rooms through which the rolls of film are moved from the time they are received and registered until the films and resulting prints arrive back for delivery. Eighty rolls of film can be developed at once. Next to the developing room with its tall tanks, is a laboratory in which the chemicals of photography are kept and mixed. Nearby is a drying room in which the developed films are dried by gas heated air forced by an electric fan. Next comes the cutting of the rolls into their individual sections, which presently are passed on to the printing tables. A few seconds' exposure to a bright, enclosed light suffice for that stage of the work, and the operator places the emerging picture on an endless belt of cloth, which carries them to the developing tray where they are automatically submerged in the developing solution.

When the pictures are clearly and fully brought out on the sensitized paper they are lifted into a basket of heavy wire which obviates the necessity of manual attention in the washing process. The basket is dipped into a "gang rocker short stop." The short stop means a solution of acetic acid and water, which fixes the photograph or picture, that is, it stops the developing which was begun in the preceding tank. Alongside the fixing bath is the wash, which is simply ordinary water in which the baskets containing the saturated prints are gently moved back and forth. The water is kept fresh by automatic syphoning.

Works on Schedule.

The time required for the several baths is fixed by an electric buzzer which sounds automatically every seven and one-half minutes. Its switch is closed as soon as work begins in the morning, and every time the buzzer sounds, the prints are moved forward from one bath to the next.

Drying the prints is the last stage. They are placed on ferrotype plates, which are run through a power driver "squeegee," which is simply a set of rollers which squeeze most of the water out of the prints. They adhere to the plates, which are next set in a drying cabinet, and practically fall off when the hot air has done its work. Remains only the assembling of the prints and their negatives, which are placed in envelopes ready for their owners.

Mr. Parks has not only an artistic talent, but also an inventive, mechanical faculty, which has enabled him to build almost his entire equipment at a saving of thousands of dollars. He roughly estimated the value of his plant at $5,000, and the most of the work he did himself. The machinery involving the long cloth belt conveyer for the prints was fabricated by Mr. Parks from parts of a sewing machine, cream separator, and an old washing machine and wringer. In this efficient contrivance there was a very considerable economy, and the same "handy" inventiveness is seen throughout the entire developing and finishing plant and enlarging room. And as a further aid in producing his own machinery, Mr. Parks set up a complete machine shop in the cellar. It includes a lathe, several drills and circular saws, which comprise an exceedingly useful plant as an adjunct to the various departments of the studio. Here Mr. Parks also turns out display cases which he distributes among his agents in the various towns from which he receives the thousands of rolls of film that arrive through the mail.

Portrait Studio, Too.

Such, in brief, is the thriving business that has been built up behind the original shingle Mr. Parks hung out as a boy when he bought his first Brownie camera. His inventiveness suggest that he might have made a big success in some branch of engineering. However, he has followed the practical phase of the art of photography, and as a further outlet for this talent he has installed within the last year a portrait studio on the ground floor, and has already many satisfied patrons whose posed pictures, some of them at least, are shown in his accumulating gallery. Mr. Parks' chief assistant is James Benson, who has been with him during the last five years.

It is all the story of a young man's successful effort, the fulfilment of a vision that has gradually sharpened and grown clearer as its business potentialities unfolded themselves and revealed their promise. Quality of workmanship, prompt service, industry, and plain hard work, together with the helpful and directing guidance of his several talents have been the elements of Mr. Parks' present accomplishment. He has built up a business that is known throughout Central Ontario, and is now in a position to reap the fuller rewards of sound expansion.

TRUTH VS. ERROR.

The reverence of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom. Psalms 111: 10.

Holy and reverend is His name. Psalms 111: 9.

A certain class of men appropriate to themselves the name "Reverend" which belongs to Jehovah God, and make the blasphemous assertion that God punishes His creatures with conscious torment, eternal in duration, and with the same breath tell us this is "good tidings of great joy." Can these men have even the beginning of wisdom? Surely we must answer —no.

Many shall run to and fro, and knowledge shall be increased. Dan. 12: 4.

The knowledge of God is surely increasing. The god of this world has the minds of vast multitudes still blinded, but the teachers that are wise understand, and are instructing many. II. Cor. 4: 4; Dan. 12:10:11:33.

Those who preach that the Almighty is a fiend Who tortures billions of His creatures for ages without end, surely cannot have the beginning of wisdom.

Those who have their eyes partially open and reverence Jehovah God as He is represented in Psalms 103: 8, 9, must go on further by surrendering and consecrating their lives to Him, if they would be teachers who are wise. Dan. 12: 10.

The time is coming when the earth shall be full of the knowledge of Jehovah, as the waters cover the deep. Isa. 11: 9.

And in that day shall the deaf hear the word of the book, and the eyes of the blind shall see out of the obscurity and out of the darkness. Isa. 39: 16.

The last enemy to be destroyed is "death"—not some imaginary something. I. Cor. 15: 26.

Death is cessation of life, not endless torments; if it was endless torments, endless torments will be destroyed; if moral death, moral death will be destroyed or abolished.

'He shall see of the travail of his soul and be satisfied. Isa. 53: 11. Imagine Jesus seeing billions of men and women suffering untold, endless torment, and saying, "I am satisfied." The wise understand, but the foolish are blind.—M. T. BUTCHER.

WAS SO NERVOUS and SHORT OF BREATH COULD HARDLY SLEEP

Mrs. Louise Baglin, Golden Lake, Ont., writes:—"For several years I was greatly troubled with my heart. I was so nervous and short of breath I could hardly sleep at night, and if I did sleep for a while I had bad dreams.

"I managed to keep at my work, somehow, until I began to have dizzy spells which got so bad I had to give up. I used many kinds of medicine, but found no help until I got a box of MILBURN'S HEART AND NERVE PILLS. After the first box I found a great change, and after two boxes I was as well as I could be.

"I told my mother, who had choking sensations, about them and they helped her greatly."

Spring

Grandmother was a wonderful housekeeper in her day and generation. Every spring, up came the carpets; down came the pictures and heavy lambrequins; out went the furniture, and in came soap and water and scrubbing-brush. Soon the floors and woodwork gleamed like new; the carpets were replaced after a beating that sent every particle of dirt swirling away in a cloud of dust; the furniture was cleaned and returned to its accustomed place. Everyone was miserable, including grandmother—but it simply had to be done.

Women are better housekeepers than grandmother ever was or ever could be, for they have the modern conveniences to make them so. They have learned, through advertising, of the many utensils that make housework lighter and do it better. They have learned, through advertising, of better foods and how to prepare and serve them more attractively. They have bought, because of advertising, the many time and labor saving devices that we have come to regard as every-day necessities.

Because of advertising, women have more time for relaxation and the social amenities. They look younger. They are younger—by years—than grandmother at the same age. Advertising has made that possible.

LAKEFIELD MEN WIN FILM PRIZE

K. Hamilton and K. A. MacKenzie Awarded $500 in Amateur Competition.

PHOTOPLAY MAGAZINE.

That movies, with scenario, directors and actors are being "shot" within a few miles of Peterborough—or to give credit where credit is due—at Lakefield, is evidenced by the announcement of Photoplay Magazine, of New York, that in its recently closed competition for amateur movies of 400 feet in length, Messrs. Ken. Hamilton and K. A. MacKenzie of Lakefield, had been awarded first prize ($500.00) though there had been entries from all over the world.

Entering the competition equipped with a Cine-kodak, and using scenes around the Grove School as their "set," the Lakefield young men had pictured a play taken from Thomas Hood's "Eugene Aram," the photographer (Mr. Mackenzie) doing especially good work, according to the wording of the announcement. Mr. Hamilton as the main actor, has been requested to come to New York.

EASTER AT CAVAN.

Church Congregation Favored By Special Choir Music and Sermon.

CAVAN, April 12.—The service in Cavan Church on Sunday morning was appropriate to the Easter season. The pastor, the Rev. J. O. Totten, in his sermon endeavored to show what the Resurrection of Christ meant to the world. The choir contributed suitable music. "Easter Bells" and "One Day" were the anthems given. The Sacrament of the Lord's Supper was observed at the conclusion of the service.

In St. John's Church, at Ida, on Sunday morning, the Rev. Mr. Howard conducted the service.

The weather and roads were very disappointing. Saturday morning had been so pleasant, that the cold weather on Sunday and Monday seemed a great contrast.

Personals

Mr. Vance Wood, of Hamilton, is spending the Easter vacation with his uncle, Mr. E. Touchbourne.

Mrs. R. S. Staples visited friends at Springville on Friday.

Mr. Ralph Staples visited Mr. Archie Matchett over the week-end.

Messrs. Lang and Tinney shipped hogs from Cavan on Monday.

Miss Olive Perrin returned to Toronto on Monday morning.

Miss Norma Staples returned to Toronto on Monday afternoon.

Famous Flier Falls.

LONDON, April 11 (Canadian Press).—An Exchange Telegraph despatch from Lisbon said Major Sarmiento Beires, noted Portuguese flier, was reported to have crashed in the south of France. The plane was wrecked but he was not injured.

EASTER AT KEENE.

Three Churches Had Good Congregations and Special Services.

KEENE, April 12.—All three local churches report good congregations for Easter Sunday. The Rev. Father Finn, of Peterboro, had charge of the services in St. John's Catholic Church in the morning.

At the Presbyterian Church, the Rev. Walter McCleary preached his last sermon until September. He will be in the western provinces during the summer. Special music was given by the choir, assisted by Mrs. Walter Wood, of Toronto. Two anthems, "Why Seek Ye", and "By Early Morning Light", were given, with the solos parts taken by Hugh Renwick. A quartette, composed of the Rev. Walter McCleary, Messrs. Harry, Hugh and John Renwick, also sang.

At the United Church the Rev. J. Archibald preached a fine Easter sermon, and his usual boys and girls story being much enjoyed by the younger folk. The special soloist for the day was Mrs. C. H. Byers, of Oakville. Mrs. Byers, has just returned with the Mendelsohn choir from a tour across the line, where solo "Know that My Redeemer Liveth," by Handel, was much enjoyed. Two anthems, "Christ is Risen," and "He comes the Victor Comes" were sung by choir, the solo parts being taken by Miss Margaret Bryce and Miss Jean Knowles, by request, a quartette, composed by Miss Margaret Bryce, Mrs. F. A. Eason, and Messrs. D. D. Brown and A. E. Fletcher sang, "The Old Rugged Cross."

OMEMEE CHOIR GIVES CONCERT

Mrs. Henderson, Mrs. W. Moncrief, Mrs. C. Corneil, and Misses Rutherford and L. Race were appointed to canvass for the bazaar. A vote of thanks was extended by Mrs. Bradburn and Mrs. J. Bushnell to Miss Dunoon and Mrs. Irvine, of Lindsay, for their splendid assistance.

A social halfhour was enjoyed with Mrs. P. Race, Mrs. Overholt and Mrs. R. H. Williamson as hostesses.

Church Services

In spite of inclement weather on Sunday, splendid congregations attended the Easter Services in Christs' Church and Trinity Church. Only a morning service was held in Christ Church when Holy Communion was administered. The Rev. A. L. Weir delivered an appropriate Easter message and the choir sang "Christ is Risen" with solo parts by Messrs. W. G. Stephenson and L. A. Southworth. The church was beautifully decorated with Easter lillies and carnations.

At Trinity Church, Easter hymns and special music together with the Easter sermons and beautiful cut flowers, the annual gift of Lady Eaton, made bright the services of the day. At the morning service, the Rev. E. W. Rowland spoke from the words found in Pslam XXX-5 "Weeping may endure for a night but joy cometh in the morning". The choir gave two numbers, "The Garden of the Lord", and "Father this Easter Day." The Rev. Mr. Rowland's evening text was taken from. 1 Timothy 1-15, "This is a faithful saying and worthy of all acceptation," after which the responsive Easter Leaflet was used. A reading entitled "As I have loved you", was given by Mrs. H. Lamb.

Miss E. Dunoon, the president of the Lindsay Presbyterial was a visitor at the meeting and delivered an Easter message to the gathering Her address was listened to with pleasure by about forty ladies.

A vocal solo "Open the Gates of the Temple," was sweetly rendered. Four appropriate hymns and four anthems by the choir, a ladies' quartette, and a solo. "The first Easter Morn" by Miss Mary Lowe comprised the music and were exceedingly well given.

When a young woman telephone operator was married in Des Moines the other day, the ceremony was performed over the telephone by a clergyman in Oklahoma, more than 500 miles away.

"But a woman's work is never done"

WHAT a fresh, wholesome, healthy-looking class of women the farm housewives are! They fly from one task to another with the quickness and suppleness that so many women lose with their first youth.

Yet, if you ask, most of them will confess that often their backs are lame—their feet and ankles aching with fatigue.

We inquired around among farm housewives to find out what they do to relieve the aching and stiffness in overtired muscles, and to take care of the countless small hurts that are always happening around the farm home.

324 of them said that they found Sloan's the very best remedy they can use.

Used everywhere for muscular pain

In one out of every three homes you'll find Sloan's Liniment the standby for every kind of muscular ache, for rheumatism, for colds and chest congestions and for all kinds of minor injuries.

Read this letter from a farm housewife telling of quick relief from an injury:

"I fell out of a cherry tree. The branch I was on broke and I fell fourteen feet. I hurt my hip and I suffered agony. I used Sloan's, and I don't even feel it any more. I think Sloan's is splendid."

And this—telling the help that Sloan's gave to a persistent case of muscular pain:

"I could not sleep or do my work, but now I sleep well, walk and do my work with ease. I used Sloan's Liniment only once and it relieved me of my pain. It is just wonderful."

Sloan's works by the quickest, most effective method known for relieving pain. It stirs up the circulation—sends a healing tide of fresh, germ-destroying blood direct to the spot that hurts—gives you quick, positive relief.

Always keep a bottle of Sloan's Liniment on hand. At your druggist's you can get one that lasts a long time for 35 cents. Use it for:

Rheumatism — Lame muscles
Sciatica — Stiff neck
Lumbago — Colds and Neuralgia — congestions
Sprains and bruises

The farm housewife has learned that she can ease tired, aching muscles with Sloan's

A doctor whose practice takes in numbers of men and women who work hard under all kinds of trying conditions, says of Sloan's: "People whose work exposes them to strain or to damp and cold usually suffer from a good deal of muscular soreness. We find that Sloan's gives them quick, positive relief."

COMMUNITY HALL FOR YOUNG'S POINT

Deputation From Village Asks Smith Council To Take Necessary Steps.

The Rev. R. T. C. Dwelly and Mr. Young, of Young's Point, were present at the meeting of the Smith township council, held on Saturday, in the County Council Chambers, and presented a petition from the ratepayers of S. S. No. 8, township of Smith, requesting the council, under the provisions of section 7, sub-section 1 of the "Community Halls Act of 1920" to pass the necessary by-law for the erection of a community hall at Young's Point, Ontario; and that in accordaice with section 7, sub-section 2 and 3 of the said act to arrange to finance the erection of the said community hall, costing approximately $1,500. The council promised due consideration in the matter

By-law No. 856, repealing by-law No. 833 and making changes in the boundaries of polling sub-divisions numbers three and four, was passed. By-law No. 856 takes all lots and parts of lots in the tenth concession east of the road between lots numbers twenty-four and twenty-five out of polling sub-division three, and places them in sub-division number four; this being the only change from the old boundaries.

Messrs. B. J. Weart and W. E. Chamberlain presented a petition from seven ratepayers on Wolsley street, asking the council under the provisions of the Local Improvement Act to arrange for the building of a concrete sidewalk five feet wide and five hundred feet long on the north side of the street with crossing. The council agreed to give this matter due investigation and consideration. If the work is proceeded with the arrangement of terms for financing it will be in the hands of a committee consisting of Reeve Middleton, Deputy-Reeve Coons and Councillor Mullen.

Mr. Plaxton, representing the Globe Indemnity Company of Canada, was present to explain rates and to ask for the renewal of policy No. 102336 protecting the town ship against public liability. The council decided to renew the policy for one year.

John Johnson asked the council to open the roadway known as the quarter line connecting the fifteenth concession line and Lovesick lake between lots numbers forty-two and forty-three. Council will investigate on the annual road inspection tour.

By-law No. 857, for closing up an allowance for a road between lots numbers twelve and thirteen in the eighth concession of Smith township and for disposing of it, was passed.

The clerk was instructed to remit to Herbert Girven the sum of $12.40, being rebate on taxes of 1927, he having been assessed twice.

The following accounts were ordered paid: The Peterborough Examiner, $9.37; W. A. Sidey, 50c.; Percy T. Udy, $189.39.

LITTLE BOY HURT IN FATHER'S BARN

Is Kicked in Forehead By Horse—Seven Stitches Needed.

BETHANY, April 12.—The little four-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Norman Moorhouse, near Yelverton, met with a serious accident on Tuesday when he was kicked by a horse. The little lad had followed his father to the stables, where one of the horses which Mr. Moorehouse had let out, was rolling on the barn floor. It is thought that the child got too near the horse, for Mr. Moorehouse did not know that the child had followed him until he heard the screams of the child, and hurried to see what was the matter. He found that the little one had received a nasty cut just above the eye. Dr. Hamilton of Bethany was called and he found it necessary to put in seven stitches to close the wound.

FINE IMPOSED FOR RELEASING MAN FROM JAIL

Campbellford Man Pays $25 Twenty Months After Alleged Jail Break.

PRISONER TESTIFIES.

Man Who Escaped Does Not Remember Who Helped Him Get Out—Was Fined Later.

COBOURG, April 12.—After a lapse of twenty months, Judge O'Connor found Herbert Leonard guilty of the offence of jail-breaking and fined him twenty-five dollars in the County Court here yesterday afternoon. W. F. Kerr, K.C., appeared for the Crown. Leonard appeared for his own defence. Three witnesses were called, and one of them, A. V. Light, police officer, was recalled by the Crown. After hearing the evidence, Judge O'Connor said that he could not help but find Leonard guilty on the statements of the witnesses as well as the defendant's own evidence. The charge, as laid, had been proved in court. There was, however, the possibility that the whole story had not been heard, and the testimony of another witness which Leonard had said he was unable to summon, might make some difference. It was the opinion of His Honor that the liquor in Campbellford possessed the faculty of reducing persons to a state of coma. He also considered Leonard a bright young business man and had no desire to make a jail bird out of him.

The offence was, however, a serious one and detrimental to the administration of justice. He did not think that Leonard had purposely made untrue statements. If he so believed, he would be severe in his judgment. Regarding the statement which Leonard claimed was made as a joke, the Judge considered it a serious subject for humorous remarks. The Campbellford jail building, said His Honor, was more or less of an invitation to any prisoner to effect an escape, more particularly so when the person confined had a "little fire water inside." The penalty for the offence of which the prisoner was guilty was a prison term of five years, but Judge O'Connor found in Section 1035 of the Criminal Code, that he was able to impose a fine; in the event of non-payment, the prison term to be imposed. He therefore imposed a fine of $25, with the option of three months in prison. Leonard elected to pay the fine.

Chief Light, the first witness called, stated that he was constable when the offence had been committed on the night of August 17, 1926. On this date he had arrested a local business man for being intoxicated in a public place. After placing the prisoner in the cells, locking the cell door and the partition door, Light left the building, fastening the lock on the outside door. The prisoner was still confined when he re-visited the jail about an hour later. In his opinion the prisoner could not free himself. Returning about nine in the morning, Light found the cell and partition doors open and a window broken in the outer room. The glass from the window was all inside. Apparently none of it had fallen outside the building. He recovered the prisoner later at the corner of Front and Bridge Streets, and laid a second charge against him. The prisoner was found guilty and fined on the two counts.

The second witness called could not give much evidence as he had only seen the two men for a few minutes early in the morning. He could not remember the exact time. Questioned by the Crown and by Leonard, witness said that he had believed the liberated prisoner to be the worse of liquor, but could not say whether Leonard had been drinking or not. He reminded the court that he had seen the two men for a very short time.

The third witness called was the prisoner of the eventful night. He was unable, owing to his intoxicated condition, to remember much. He did not recall his arrest, but supposed he had been arrested since he woke up in jail. Leonard was standing near the partition and the partition and cell doors were open. Something was said about home, but the prisoner did not know how he left the jail as his next memory was of sitting in the vacant lot outside the building. Questioned by Leonard, witness admitted that he could only remember a few things but was telling the court exactly what he could recall and nothing more. He did not hesitate to admit his intoxicated condition when he was arrested and for some hours after. This completed the case for the Crown.

In a sworn statement, Leonard said that he had been playing for a dance on the night in question and had met the prisoner, talked with him and left him, going directly to his home. He had not seen him again till the following morning. He had passed a remark in a joking manner that he had liberated the prisoner, but had not meant it to be taken seriously. This statement had been reported and the result had been a court action. Asked by the Judge, Leonard declared that he was strictly sober. To Attorney Kerr, he stated that he did not remember meeting Light at four in the morning, and that he had been at home at that time. He had arrived home shortly after one o'clock, he claimed.

Chief Light, recalled to the stand, stated that he had seen Leonard twice that night, and on the second occasion had accompanied him as far as his store on Front Street. He had held conversation with him at the same time. In reply to Leonard's questions, Light detailed the occasions, and repeated some of the conversation which passed. This completed the case for the defence.

To Judge O'Connor, Leonard admitted that he had been previously convicted on a breach of the Liquor Control Act, said he was a married man, thirty-five years of age, with no family, and kept a gents' furnishing store. All this, and the fact that Leonard had not previously appeared before him, was considered by His Honor and led him to impose what he considered a very light penalty.

OBITUARY

MRS. HARRY G. FITZGERALD

LAKEFIELD, April 12.—The death occurred suddenly to-day of Eleanor L. McDonald, wife of Harry G. Fitzgerald, at her home on Queen street. While Mrs. Fitzgerald had not been in very good health for some time, she had been going about as usual and was in her place in St. John's church choir on Sunday at both morning and evening services, so that the news that she had died in her sleep shocked the entire community.

Mrs. Fitzgerald was born in Manitoba and lived most of her early life in Portage La Prairie, afterward removing to Winnipeg. Since her marriage to Mr. Fitzgerald about twenty-eight years ago, she has resided in Lakefield. She was prominent in the work of St. Johns church, being a member of the choir for more than twenty-five years and holding the office of president of the Chancel Guild for nearly twenty years, resigning last year because of poor health.

She is survived by her sorrowing husband; one son, A. M. Fitzgerald, at present of Peterborough; two sisters, the Misses McDonald of Winnipeg, and a brother, also of Winnipeg. Funeral announcement will be made later.

over the Atlantic to be done to-morrow."

At that he stretched the time, however, and it was nearly midnight before he went to bed in a room next to that of his eight year old daughter, "Pat," who has been holding nothing of her father's intentions.

"She doesn't give a hump about it. She would like to go with me if I'd let her," the Irishman told the Associated Press, with a characteristic touch of slang which may be copied all over America next week if he succeeds in this venture.

Danger in Take-off.

The preparations for the Bremen's departure had a sombre note which might have influenced even the gay Fitzmaurice had he known. The Irish colonel participated in the first stages of getting the plane ready, and when he went to bed at midnight everything was in readiness for the trundling of the man-made bird from its hangar.

But he did not know of orders that had been issued for fifty men armed with axes, hatches, crowbars and fire extinguishers, who will be stationed the full length of the 2,000 yard runway ready to jump into immediate action should disaster occur during the take-off. This action was taken at the behest of the Irish Free State officials and Saorstat Air Corps officers, some of whom claim that their greatest fear for the outcome of the flight is that the Bremen, never tested with a full load of gasoline, may not take to the air as lightly as if might. These have studied the Bremen closely and have been seen to shake their heads dubiously at a peculiar landing gear construction.

Fitzmaurice's Message.

Before Colonel Fitzmaurice's fellow officers rushed him off to bed for a few hours' sleep last night, the aviator gave the Associated Press a special message regarding his flight.

"Tell them," he said, "that for several years as chief of the Saorstat Air Corps it has been my ambition to make the east-west Atlantic crossing in the interests of advancement of science and aviation.

"Here in the Irish Free State we have watched the progress of aviation in the United States with admiration. If it should fall to me to be able to contribute something to the fund of human knowledge and experience which will eventually conquer the air, I shall be very proud.

"It is needless to mention how deeply I appreciate the generosity of Baron Huenfeld in inviting me to make the Atlantic flight with him and the honor I feel in acting as a co-pilot with Captain Koehl. I believe the Bremen represents the best science can produce in a machine for Atlantic crossing.

"I have never been in America, but I am looking forward to an American welcome to a Saorstat Air Corps man on Friday afternoon."

With midgets all the fingers are of equal length.

She was a victim of modern life, modern foods! Nearly always tired, depressed, headachey — never just sick, never entirely well. Sluggish internal conditions allowed poisons to form in her system—kept her vitality at a low ebb.

Laxatives were drastic, sickening and lost their power quickly.

Then a friend—a bright-eyed, clear-skinned, young-looking woman brimming with good health—told her own health secret. Simply a dash of Eno in a glass of water every morning.

To-day—this lady will tell you she has just begun to enjoy life.

Eno's "Fruit Salt" is universally used as a pleasant, gentle and effective means of maintaining inner cleanliness . . . vigorous health. Eno acts safely and naturally—a wonderful, non-habit forming regulator.

Laura Secord

The Woman Who Made Confederation Possible

An Essay Contest for Boys and Girls

To develop a greater interest among the boys and girls of our schools in the wonderful events in Canada's past, it is made possible through the courtesy of Laura Secord Candy Shops to offer $600.00 in prizes, with a Grand Prize of $250.00 for the best essay on this startling exploit of Canada's heroine, entitled "Laura Secord, The Woman who Made Confederation Possible."

The devotion and loyalty of Laura Secord, the heroine of 1813, is the high-water mark in womanly courage and bravery in the history of Canada.

The contest is open to everyone up to the last year in High School. It is divided into two classes, one for the Public, Separate and lower grades of Private Schools, and the other for High Schools and Collegiate Institutes and the higher grades of Private Schools.

What a chance to delve into the wonderful secrets of her daring exploit and give it the proper place in history. The conditions are easy, the prizes are worth-while, and it is hoped that every school boy and girl in Canada will try for one.

The Judges who have kindly consented to act in this contest are as follows: Mr. Gregory Clark, of the Toronto Star Weekly; Mr. George Locke, Chief Librarian of the Public Library, Toronto; Mr. Aegidius Fauteux, Librarian of St. Sulpice Library, Montreal; Mr. Adjutor Savard, Foreign Editor of La Patrie, Montreal.

We have prepared a little booklet, which can be obtained at any Laura Secord Candy Shop, or by mailing your request to the Laura Secord Essay Contest Committee at 11 Leader Lane, Toronto, or 507 Viger Avenue, Montreal.

Avoid GRAY Hair

YES, GRAY HAIR can be avoided—if you know Kolor-Bak, the clean, colorless liquid which brings color back to hair, whether blonde, auburn, brown or black. So gently and gradually that others can't detect the change, Kolor-Bak brings back a natural appearance without harming the finest hair or the most tender scalp. Wise men or women won't use dangerous hair dyes which so often produce weird colors worse than gray; Kolor-Bak is a very different proposition! No worry over shade—the one bottle is right for all. No uncertainty—you needn't experiment on even one lock of hair—Kolor-Bak is sold on a money-back guaranttee.

DRESS
By MARY MARSHALL

Blue and white dotted chiffon was the material chosen for this frock used plain for the blouse and pleated for the skirt. A blue kid belt dotted with white is placed at a slightly lowered waistline.

"I love a dot," I overheard one woman say to another in a department store the other day. "Any kind of a dot—just so long as it's a dot."

Most of us are not so broad-minded in our taste for dots, still there is something rather nice about dots after all the stripes and modernistic designs we have had within recent seasons.

There are cotton prints showing neat dots in three colors—white ground with dots in green, rose and blue—or gold, red and blue—or red, blue and green—and prints showing dots of several different sizes. There are dots as neatly arranged as trees in an orchard or dots just sprinkled around like daisies in a field.

Clipped dots, overlapping dots, dots used in connection with floral designs, dots in sombre effect shading from vivid tones at one side of the material to faint ones at the other side. There are ring dots made up of circles of very small dots—dots within dots—coin dots, pin point dots, cire dots, embroidered dots, woven dots, printed dots, metallic dots, dots made of applied felt on lighter material—dotted tulle, dotted taffeta, dotted satin, dotted crepe de chine, dotted foulard and dotted linens.

Surely the world of fashion seems to have gone dotty!

If you are planning to trim your new frocks with hand embroidery—try this trick. Stamp the material or apply the transfer in the usual manner and then adjust your sewing machine so that you have a long stitch with fairly loose tension. Try it out on a scrap of material to be sure that you have a flat, smooth stitch. Then work up and down where you are going to do the solid embroidery with this stitch, and it will be all padded and ready for the final satin-stitch embroidery.

The Stars Incline, But Do Not Compel

(Copyright, 1928, McClure Syndicate.)

FRIDAY, APRIL 13, 1928.

Adverse aspects rule today, according to astrology, which finds Friday the thirteenth rather a menacing day.

It is well to avoid one's superiors or employers while this rule prevails, for contacts may not be lucky.

There is a sign indicating a critical and even an irritable condition of mind on the part of persons who exercise authority.

Families may suffer from this planetary government which makes men and women discontented and fault-finding.

The aged will be less susceptible to evil influences today than those who are younger and for that reason it is wise to seek their aid or advice.

Labor should benefit to a certain degree under this direction of the stars.

It is well to be exceedingly careful in driving automobiles or in making journeys in airships.

Warning is given to beware of infection from new forms of influenza. Cities should take measures to insure sanitation.

Drastic penalties for spitters and for those who do not cleanse glasses and cups at soda fountains is recommended by the seers.

A new cult for the nude may be introduced into this country from Europe, those who read the stars announce.

The penchant for going without clothes as far as possible is to be followed by return to conservative modes, it is foretold.

Persons whose birthdate it is should be wise in avoiding trouble through the coming year.

Children born on this day should be fairly successful all through life, although they may resent dictation from superiors.

PLANES USED BY POLICE.

GARY, Ind., April 12.— (Canadian Press.)— A sham bank robbery was staged here yesterday to demonstrate the use of airplanes as added police protection. The plane spotted the car half an hour after the robbery.

NO TRACE OF VESSEL.

HONOLULU, April 12.—(Canadian Press.)—Naval officials at Pearl Harbor announced that no trace of the missing British vessel, Asiatic Prince, had been found by three naval boats which searched a wide area north of the Hawaiian Islands.

OPEN MEETING HELD BY ST. JAMES' BAND

Members of Mission Band Entertain With Delightful Program.

The open meeting held on Saturday afternoon by the Mission Band of St. James United Church, was largely attended and much enjoyed by all. Easter flowers, and the light frocks and bright faces of the children made the Sunday school hall very attractive, indeed. The president, Mabel Copson, presided, and with her at the table were Dorothy Drysdale, secretary, Dorothy Dudgeon, treasurer, and Jean Rose, secretary treasurer of Sunshine Bags.

The meeting opened with an Easter hymn, followed by the 23rd Psalm repeated in unison. Mary Welch, Pearl Welch, Vera Davis, Eleanor Gibson and Jean Rose each offered short sentence prayers, after which the different reports were given. Mrs. Elliott, the superintendent, took charge of the business and several new members were added to the roll.

A letter was read from the supply secretary, asking for articles to be made by the Board to be ready for Christmas gifts. It was moved by Jean Rose, and seconded by Eleanor Gibbons that the band buy material and get supplies ready.

The names of the children having sunshine bags were called by the treasurer, and each child brought her offering to the table.

Recitation: Kathleen Seaward; song, Dorrie Elliott; chorus by the older girls, Dorothy Drysdale, Vera Davis, Mary Welch, Pearl Welch, Edith Patterson, Margaret Patterson Alma Welch, Jean Rose, Eleanor Gibson; recitation, "My Sunshine Bag," little Margaret Grose; vocal duet, by Irene and Dolly McAdams; vocal duet with ukulele accompaniment, Jean Rose and Eleanor Gibson; recitation, Edith McLaren; exercise by ten little girls, with candles, Dorothy Williams, Florence Outram, Thelma McLaren, Jean Matchett, Irene McAdams, Dolly McAdams, Aileen Doig, Phyllis Wagar, Violet Watkins Audrey Doig, violin solo, Arthur Copson with Mabel Copson at the piano; solo, Dorothy Dudgeon.

Mrs. Woodley, president of the Women's Missionary Society, was the speaker of the afternoon and delighted the children with stories and Mrs. Payne, former superintendent, said a few words, and closed the meeting with prayer.

Refreshments were served by the older girls and Miss Mae Ritchie, the assistant superintendent, assisted by Mrs. Fife Mrs. Copson, and Mrs. Spurway.

Miss Aileen Rose contributed piano selections during the tea hour which were very much enjoyed by all present.

LYRICS OF LIFE

THE CROWDING DAYS

How fast the days come crowding!—
Monday, and Tuesday, too,
And here it is a Thursday now,
With Wednesday's work to do.
For women have their children,
And men have their affairs,
And there is much of selling goods
And sweeping down of stairs.

Last night we slept the stranger,
Today we change the cot,
So much to do that yesterday
Is very near forgot.

Each day we have our troubles,
Our little griefs and all,
And yet it seems there isn't time
Our troubles to recall.

How fast the days come crowding!
I'd rather have it so
Than watch the hour hand on a clock,
A hand that moved too slow.
And when some labor's finished,
O Lord, some labor send—
It's better than to sit and think
The day will never end.

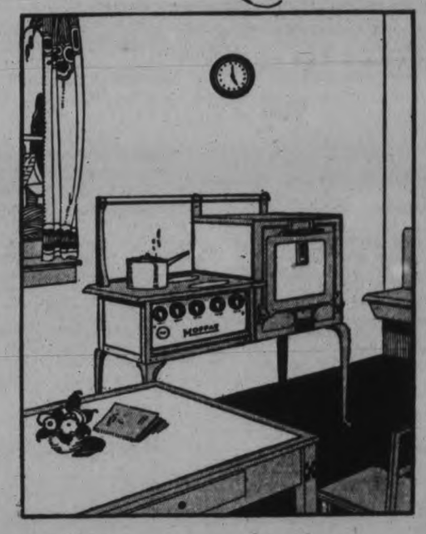
Color— in the Kitchen



Moffats Gold Medal Electric Ranges are the first in Canada to be Electra Porcelain Enamelled in Color. New models can be had in Nile Blue, French Grey, Oriental Green, Yellow, Fawn and Red.

the most used room in the house

MOFFATS have for many years struck the leading note in efficient, durable, economical range building. Their reputation for service has gone ahead of them to all parts of the world.

Now, along with leadership in mechanical construction, and electrical engineering, comes leadership in beautification.

Moffats took the initiative in adding beauty of line and a graceful symmetry to the design of their ranges, because they were quick to realize that women wanted nice things to look at, as well as use, in the Kitchen—Remember, the Kitchen is the most-used room in the house.

But this was only one step in that direction, color was the next. Moffats have now introduced an unusually beautiful color harmony into the Kitchen.

Are you interested in a beautifully colored Range for your Kitchen? If so, write us for full particulars.

YANKEES TAKE FIRST VICTORY OF THE SEASON

Defeat Athletics 8-3 in Opening Game of American League Season.

RUTH SCORES THREE RUNS.

Cleveland Wallops the Chicago White Sox 8-2 Before Crowd of 30,000.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., April 12 (A.P.).—Lefty Grove could not stop the New York Yankees in the opening of the American League season yesterday, and the world champions won from the Athletics 8 to 3.

About 20,000 shivering spectators saw the Athletes' crack southpaw fill the bases on three passes in the second and permit his rival left hander, Herb Pennock, to drive two runs in with a single. In the next inning, the Yankees bunched hits to score three more. That finished Grove, and two recruits, Shores and Powers, pitched the remainder of the game.

Babe Ruth scored three runs without the aid of a homer. He walked twice and hit a triple. Ty Cobb, starting his 24th year in the major leagues, single on his first appearance at bat and drew two passes. Tris Speaker, in his debut as a Philadelphia player, failed to hit safely. Bing Miller, playing left field in place of the sick Al Simmons, had a perfect day at bat with two singles and a double.

CHICAGO, April 12 (Canadian Press)—Cleveland walloped the Chicago White Sox 8 to 2 in the opening game of the American League season yesterday before a crowd of 30,000. The weather was chilly but a warm sun from a cloudless sky beamed on the playing field.

The Cleveland sluggers tagged Ted Lyons and Connally, who relieved him in the eighth for thirteen hits, while George Uhle, although touched for nine safeties, was seldom in danger, due to faultless support.

The White Sox played a ragged game in the field, committing four errors which helped Cleveland in their run-getting. Cissell, Chicago's new $135,000 shortstop, contributed three hits, including a double, but was guilty of two errors.

Tigers Lose Out

DETROIT, Mich, April 12 (Canadian Press).—The St. Louis Browns invaded the Tiger lair in the inaugural game of the American league season for the two teams here yesterday to defeat the Detroit team 4 to 1. Haskell "Josh" Billings, former Brown University pitching star, was relieved by Stoner in the eighth after the revamped St. Louis team led by former Tiger players had pounded out six hits for a total of four runs aided by two costly Detroit errors. More than 40,000 persons witnessed the game.

Chabot Improving.

MONTREAL, Que., April 12 (Canadian Press).—Lorne Chabot, goalkeeper of the New York Rangers, who received a serious eye injury in the second game of the current Stanley Cup series, was out of bed yesterday for the first time since the unfortunate accident. Chabot is still in hospital, however, and is being kept in a subdued light, while the injured optic is still covered.

SOFTBALL ENTRIES

Entries for the City Softball League are to be handed in at association meeting slated for Friday night.

Local schoolboys who participated in the public school soccer last Fall will look forward to the next competition because the senior association awarded Eversharp pencils to the Prince of Wales team as a souvenir of their activities on the field of sport when they won the championship.

The local softball association will hold their second meeting of the season on Friday night, at the Chamber of Commerce rooms. Team officials would do well to note that all entries must be handed in at this meeting.

* * * * *

The C.G.E. soccer team have made arrangements to play the Davenport team during the season, and have requested the association to leave an open date in their schedule.

* * * * *

Official opening of the local soccer season will be held on Saturday, April 21st, when the De Laval and Thistle meet at King Edward Park with the C.G.E. and Quaker Oats clashing on the following Saturday. There are only four teams entered under the jurisdiction of the local association this year.

Suffers Attack of Illness.

MONTREAL, Que., April 12 (Canadian Press).—Bill Cook, right winger with the New York Rangers, is suffering from a severe "charley horse" as a result of a bump he received in Tuesday night's Stanley Cup game against the Montreal Maroons here. It is expected, however, that Cook will be able to take his place on the Ranger line-up for the fourth game of the series here to-night.

ARE YOU SLEEPLESS?

Some Hints on How to Overcome This Serious Trouble.

Some people lie awake for hours before they can fall sleep. Others wake suddenly and worry over trifles, while some doze fitfully all night and never feel rested on rising. Sleeplessness is caused by a disordered condition of the nervous system. It means that the nerves are not receiving proper nutrition, and in the quiet of the night, when the muscles relax and heart settles down to repair the system, the nerves grow restless and cry out for the nourishment the blood cannot supply.

It is very unwise—more, it is dangerous to rely on narcotics. What is needed is a good tonic to build up the blood. For this purpose no other tonic is so highly recommended as Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. This because they assist the digestive organs to take blood-making ingredients from the food, and so supply the nerves with the nourishment they need. With satisfied nerves sleep comes easily and naturally.

Not only do Dr. Williams' Pink Pills help the nerves. Their main function is to enrich and increase the blood, and as the blood supplies the whole body, new life is given to the entire system. Better sleep, steady nerves, improved appetite, increased vigor—all these can be yours by taking Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Begin them to-day. Sold by all medicine dealers, or by mail post paid at 50c a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

GIANTS WALLOP BOSTON BRAVES

Andy Cohen Stars in New York Club's 5-2 Victory.

REDS WIN 5-1.

NEW YORK, April 12. — Andy Cohen outplayed the famous veteran he succeeded, Rogers Hornsby, yesterday as the New York Giants walloped the Boston Braves 5 to 2 before a shivering crowd of 35,00 fans.

While Hornsby was held to a solitary single, Cohen sparkled around second base and led the Giant attack with his sensational hitting, scoring two runs and driving in two others. The young Jewish star was given an ovation and carried from the field by a crowd of admirers.

Brookyn Defeated.

BROOKLYN, N.Y., April 12. Canadian Press. — Jimmy Ring twirled a consistently good game yesterday, and was given good infield support in Philadelphia's four to three opening day victory over Brooklyn. The recruit Philly infielders, Kelly and Whitney not only fielded sensationally, but figured in the run-scoring off Jess Petty, crack southpaw, who gave way to a pinch hitter. Brooklyn's first tally was a homer by Hendrick and the other two runs were the result of Pinch Hitter Bressler's double with the bases full. Cold weakened the crowd down to 12,000.

Win from Pirates.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., April 12. Canadian Press. — The St. Louis Cardinals got off to a flying start in the 1928 National League pennant race by walloping the Pittsburgh Pirates, last year's flag winners 14 to 7 here yesterday.

The opening day of the League's fifty third season was perfect. The weather was fine and a crowd estimated at 21,000, attended. The game was a rout for the Pirates. Their star pitcher, Ray Kremer, was knocked out of the box and two of their second string hurlers were badly pounded by McKechnie's men, who got a total of sixteen hits, including two home runs and five doubles.

Defeat Cubs.

CINCINNATI, Ohio, April 12. — Canadian Press. — The Cincinnati Reds inaugurated the race for the National League pennant by trimming the Chicago Cubs 5 to 1 yesterday. Hargrave and Dresson started the action in the fifth and both scored when Gabby Hartnett overthrew the third base while trying to frustrate a double steal.

The two unearned markers gave the Reds a margin for victory for the only Cub score was tallied on Maguire's circuit drive into the left field bleachers in the sixth.

NO MORE PILES

Pile sufferers can only get quick, safe and lasting relief by removing the cause—bad blood circulating in the lower bowel. Cutting and salves can't do this—an internal remedy must be used. Dr. Leonhardt's Hem-Roid, a harmless tablet, succeeds because it relieves this blood congestion and strengthens the affected parts. Hem-Roid has a wonderful record for quick, safe and lasting relief to Pile sufferers. It will do the same for you or money back. McDermid & Jury, Bond's Drug Store, and druggists anywhere sell Hem-Roid with this guarantee.

Rookie Players Held a Big Share Of Opening Major League Spotlight

(By the Associated Press

Rookies held a big share of the opening major league spotlight as cold weather chilled the enthusiasm of the veterans.

Newcomers such as Andy Cohen of the Giants, Whitney of the Phillies, Cissell of the White Sox, and Purdy of the Reds were stars at bat, while Heilmann, Cobb, Cuyler and Hornsby found trouble getting the range.

Paul Waner, National League batting king, got off to a flying start with three hits, including a double, off Cardinal twirling. Babe Ruth didn't collect a homer but banged out a triple, walked twice and scored three runs.

Heres what the "Big Six" of 1928 did on opening day:

	AB	R	H	Pct.
P. Waner, Pirates	5	2	3	.600
Ruth, Yankees	3	3	1	.333
Cobb, Athletics	3	0	1	.333
Cuyler, Cubs	3	0	1	.333
Heilman, Tigers	4	0	1	.250
Hornsby, Braves	4	0	1	.250

DUNDEE TO DEFEND BOXING CROWN

Wants Tune-up Battle Before He Meets Ace Hudkins.

NEW YORK, April 12. — Joe Dundee is looking for an opponent who will give him the sort of tuning up bout he needs to get himself into shape to defend his world's welterweight title in a big summer bout—which as things look now will be against the hard-hitting Ace Hudkins.

It looked as though the champion phia. But at the last moment Lew Tendler as an opponent in Philadelphia. But at the ast moment Lew listened to friends who had nothing but his interest at heart and decided to pass up what was intended to be the farewell bout of this grand old hero of nearly 170 hard battles in his home city.

Lew has been doing some milling from time to time but he has not met an opponent anywhere near as formidable as the title holder. Against Joe he might have endangered his life, or at least run the risk of serious injury, while at the same time the prospects that he would perform in a sastisfactory manner against the champion were not good. So Joe's intended workout went flooey.

If New York does not get the Dundee-Hudkins plum then all the gossip one hears along the Great White Way is hopelessly erroneous. But admittedly the reports are based on the say so of the managers of the two boys. There are others who must be heard from before the bout may be set down on the schedule—the New York boxing commissioners for instance who might be influenced by the California board which is sore because of the way in which Dundee walked out of a Hudkins bout in Los Angeles several months ago.

Anyway Dundee wants a tune-up battle in the east and if there are any promoters who have rugged boys qualified to make the champion travel they are likely to be treated by Joe's manager with every manifestation of enthusiasm.

DEMAR ENTERS BOSTON MARATHON

165 Runners Have Entered the Race Which Will Be Held on April 19.

BOSTON, Mass., April 12 (Canadian Press).—Clarence H. Demar, of Melrose, America's premier Marathon runner, yesterday entered the Boston marathon for the tenth time. The veteran has won the annual grind five times, in 1911, 1922, 1923, 1924 and 1927. He has never finished worse than third in his other four attempts.

To date 165 runners have entered the 26-mile 285-yard race from Hopkinton to Boston which, as usual, will be held on April 19. This year the Boston classis will be the final Olympic marathon try-out. Twenty-odd Canadians are entered.

Demar, in former years, one of the first runners to send in his entry, delayed until yesterday to obtain a higher number. Race officials have given him Number 158, and he will wear those numerals on his back during the race. Last year he wore Number 17.

Race officials predicted that more than 200 runners would be on the starting line. Three clubs, the Finnish-American A.A. of New York, the Montreal North Branch Y.M.C.A., and Illinois A.C., all of which have sent large delegation every year, have not yet sent in their entries.

BRITISH RUNNER GAINS ON LEADER

Gavuzzi One Mile and 25 Minutes Behind Payne in Bunion Derby.

BRIDGEPORT, Okla., April 12 (Canadian Press).—Holding his lead in the cross-country foot race as it approaches his home town of Claremore, Okla., Andrew Payne again yesterday raced a dead heat with Peter Gavuzzi, Southampton, England, his most persistent runner-up.

Yesterdays run from Clinton to Bridgeport, 35.4 miles, was negotiated by Payne and Gavuzzi in 5 hours, 28 minutes and 30 seconds. Tuesday the two men came in together after a 50-mile run in 8 hours, 21 minutes 40 seconds.

Payne's elapsed time of 240:52:29 for the 1,421 miles from Los Angeles gives him approximately an hour and twenty-five minutes lead over Gavuzzi, who has pressed him for first place since the runners entered Oklahoma three days ago.

In third place, more than twenty hours behind the leaders, was John Salo, Passaic, N.J., who also finished third in yesterdays run. His time for yesterday was 5:55:28, with an elapsed time of 260:37:52. Ollie Wantinen, New York, fourth in elapsed time, came in fourth in yesterdays trek in the time of 6:05:32. His elapsed time is 275:35:44.

BOY BADLY HURT IN FALL FROM TREE

Morgan Bigelow Alights On Shoulder, Causing Dislocation and Fracture.

BETHANY, April 12.—Morgan Bigelow, son of Mr. and Mrs. Herb Bigelow, narrowly escaped what might have proved a fatal accident on Monday, when he was cutting some small trees for his father to boil sap. A tree lodged in another tree, and he climbed up with the intention of loosening it, when the limb he was on broke and he fell heavily on his shoulder. The doctor was called and gave first aid, and then brought him to the clinic at Peterborough for an X-ray, where it was found the shoulder was dislocated and a bone broken.

Harry Bigelow is the first man on the land this spring; he was able to plow on Good Friday and reported the ground in fair condition. Many others planned to commence on Monday but the unexpected cold snap and freeze-up prevented it. It is hardly to be expected that the warm weather has come yet because so far no one in this district has heard the frogs sing, and it is thought by some that the frogs must thraw out and freeze up three times before the real warm weather can be looked for.

By a margin of seven points, practically the same majority by which the other games were won, the local basketball team which has been playing against the Lindsay Monarch Athletic Club, won its third straight victory of the season last night in the Lindsay Collegiate Gym. The locals came out on top by a score of 35-28. It was one of the closest games played in Scugogville this season, and the small crowd of fans present had plenty of excitement. A game between the Monarch Girls and L.C.I. Girls resulted in a 11-all tie previous to this.

As in the other struggles between the same teams, the Petes met with plenty of opposition, the count being tied four times during the two periods and being 20-19 for the visitors at the end of the first. However, they counted fifteen to the homesters' nine in the final chucker to make it safe. There was little to choose from between the two outfits. Dr. Hugh Logan of Lindsay handled the game quite satisfactorily. The teams:

Lindsay—Forwards: Brandon 5, O'Leary 4; centre, Wood 3; defence, Lyons 4, Brien; subs., Spratt 8, Peel, Forbert 4.

Peterborough—Forwards, Sturgeon 19, Ellis 4; centre, Ecobichon 12; defence, McLeod, Menzies.

Uncle Wiggily

By HOWARD R. GARIS

To-day's Bedtime Story

(Copyright, 1928, McClure Syndicate.)

UNCLE WIGGILY AND THE NARWHAL

Uncle Wiggily was so surprised, when Dustie, the ox, trotted toward him and wanted to know if the rabbit gentleman had brought any with him on his visit to the North Pole, that, for a moment, Mr. Longears did not know what to say.

"Any what?" he asked after a while. "What does he think I brought when Bunty, Vallie and I sailed away from Italy in our airship?" inquired Uncle Wiggily of Eski, the North Pole rabbit boy. "What does Dustie want?"

The shaggy, brown musk ox, whose thick coat of hair was fringed with white, on account of which he was named, stamped his feet in the snow, bellowed again, blowing his white breath out on the frosty air, and said:

"We had better hurry away from here!"

"Moss is what I'm looking for! I'm hungry for moss which grows under the snow. But though I've pawed and pawed until I'm tired, I can't find any moss to eat and I'm hungry. I went in that cave," and he pointed to the hole in the side of the snow hill, out of which he had rushed a few minutes before. Eski had told Uncle Wiggily that in the cave were some warm sealskin garments for the visiting rabbits.

"But there wasn't any moss in the cave," went on Dustie. "Did you bring any with you?" he asked Mr. Longears.

"I'm sorry to say I did not," was the answer. Baby Bunty and Vallie were looking curiously at Dustie. They had never seen such a queer animal before. He was something like an ox, something like a big sheep and something like a giant goat. "The last place we came from," went on Uncle Wiggily, "was the volcano Vesuvius and it was so burning hot there that no moss would grow. I'm sorry."

"So am I," sighed Dustie, again pawing in the snow, for that is the way the musk oxen of the North Pole find the moss they must eat. "I don't know what I'm going to do, I'm so hungry."

Just then, farther off over the fields of ice, appeared a herd of reindeer. Bunty and Vallie, seeing them, exclaimed:

"Oh, Santa Claus must be coming!"

"Not yet. It isn't the time of year for him," said Eski with a smile. "But he has reindeer just like those. And I think these reindeer have come to bring good news to Dustie."

"I hope so," bellowed the musk ox and, surely enough, one of the reindeer bleated out:

"Come with us. We have found a place where much moss grows under the snow. There is enough for all of us to eat!"

"Good!" bellowed the musk ox. Then, flipping his tail in the air, stamping with his feet and jumping around for joy, Dusty ran off to join the herd of reindeer. "I'll see you again, soon!" called Dustie to Uncle Wiggily, Vallie and Bunty.

"I hope so," murmured Bunty. "I want to ask him why he eats moss and if he likes it here at the North Pole," said the little orphan rabbit.

"Moss is about the only thing that will grow under the snow for musk oxen to eat," explained Eski the Eskimo rabbit boy. "As for Dustie liking it here at the North Pole, I think he does for he has been here a long time. The only bad thing about it are wolves."

"Wolves!" exclaimed Uncle Wiggily looking anxiously around.

"Don't be afraid," said Eski, "there aren't any wolves now. And when a pack of the hungry wolves chase a herd of musk oxen there is always a fight. The big muskoxen form a circle, with their horns pointing out, and inside the circle the little muskoxen are safe. If the wolves try to bite the little muskoxen the big fellows jab the wolves with their horns. Or else some of the muskoxen jump themselves up in the air and fall down hard on the wolves."

"It must flatten the wolves out like pancakes," said Uncle Wiggily, for he could see that a muskox was a heavy animal.

"It does," said Eski. "Once a muskox falls on a wolf that wolf can't bite anybody for a long, long time. But now we'll go over to the cave, since Dustie is out, and get you some warm clothes."

There were many warm, sealskin garments stored away in the ice cave, and, once they had put on these soft jackets and cozy skin boots, Uncle Wiggily, Bunty and Vallie were as warm as toast.

"Would you like to ride in a kayak, asked Eski, after the visiting rabbits were snug and warm.

"What's a kayak?" asked Bunty.

"Come, and I'll show you," offered the Eskimo rabbit. He led the way over some ice hills, or hummocks to a little bay of open water. As they reached the shore which was of solid ice, something long, round and twisted was thrust up out of the water.

"Is that a kayak?" asked Bunty.

"No, that is a narwhal!" exclaimed Eski. "Oh, dear me!"

THEATRES

AT THE REGENT.

NOW PLAYING AT THE REGENT.

Rin-Tin-Tin has been growing in popularity ever since he made his spectacular screen debut in "Where the North Begins." Warner Bros. have been especially fortunate in the vehicles they have given the star who now holds the undisputed title of "The Greatest Dog in the World." But never has he had so great an opportunity to demonstrate his almost human intelligence and his amazing courage, as in "A Dog of the Regiment," which in many ways portrays his own early life in devastated France.

We first see Rinty in peace times, when he is the chosen pal of young Dick Harrison, an American, and Marie Hoffman, a beautiful German girl. Then the war clouds break and Harrison returns as an aviator. It is in the midst of a terrific bombardment that his plane hurtles to the ground pinning him under the blazing ruins. Rinty rescues him. Rinty, being a dog, does not realize that "scraps of paper" can change friends to enemies. Once a pal always a pal, is dog logic, and Rinty lives up to it.

QUILT MAKING PIONEER CRAFT

Is Still Practised in Rural Canada—Many Famous Patterns Used.

TORONTO, Ont., April 12 (Canadian Press).—Anne Elizabeth Wilson, writing in "The Chatelaine" on Canadian patchwork quilts, says:

Quilt-making is a proud and courageous sort of needlework. The older quilts of poineer workmanship represent individual industry that, amid the daily hardships of the time of their making, is a monument to women's fortitude and patience. While in the old world their sisters were engaged in the Victorian vagaries of wool mottos and antimacassars, the women of the new world still clug to this dignified, useful and notably sociable form of handicraft. (A quilting bee was and still is in many parts of Canada, a rural event.)

An all-over white quilt, enriched only with stitchery pattern, is a poem. Of old, in the colonies, that needlewoman of some pretensions often had artists or architects, tracing an exquisite bas relief with her needle. There is sometimes something very personal about her needle. There is sometimes something very personal about quilt names. Intricate quilting was, as a rule, not so much practised among the farm women of Upper Canada as the women of the Maritimes, but occasionally an ambitious worker would undertake to autograph a quilt with her own name or initials; or a quilting party would identify the work in some other way. Occasionally such notes as Mrs. Jones' Choice or Molly's Favorite will be stitched into the coverlet, either in white quilting stitch or a darker outline. There are many common quilt names of the same genre. Gentleman's Fancy, and Widower's Choice always impressed me as particularly piquant. Touching too are Crazy Anne, Lady's Delight and Old Maid's Puzzle.

Itching Piles

What CAN a Man Believe?

By BRUCE BARTON

Author of "The Book Nobody Knows," "The Man Nobody Knows"

XXII—Buddha

THERE was uncertainty as to the date and place of Buddha's birth until 1895, when an English archeologist discovered a pillar erected by the Emperor Asoka, that splendid prince whom H. G. Wells regards as one of the six greatest men who ever lived.

This discovery fixed the date at about 560 B. C., and the place as near Kapilavastu, whose ruins lie in the wilderness beyond the British borders of North India. The little brown boy, whose coming brought so much happiness to a very wealthy father and mother, was named Siddhartha Gautama, but his subsequent title of Buddha, "the enlightened," has displaced his own name in much the same way that the title Christ has displaced the name of Jesus.

Many years later a vast body of tradition gathered around Gautama, and this has been added to through the centuries until it is difficult to find the truth.

It was said that his mother had been impregnated by the light of a star, and that earthquakes marked his entry into the world, and miracles of healing.

Gentle rains fell in seasons that according to the calendar should have been dry; flowers bloomed in abundance where summer heat should have withered all plant life, and the normal course of events was generally upset.

Thirty-two Portents

His rajah father, ambitious to have his son succeed to the family estates, was disturbed by the thirty-two portents that accompanied the birth and, fearing that the lad would be a monk, sought by every inducement to make him a permanent part of the life to which he had been born.

The boy grew strong; he was pre-eminent in athletic contests, as well as in his studies. One of the stories of his youth may be legendary, but it is so much in harmony with his later character that it deserves preservation.

His cousin shot a swan, which fell among the roses in the garden. Gautama rescued the bird and pulled the arrow from the wound. He had never known pain; to learn its nature he pricked his own wrist with the arrow and felt the sting and saw the flowing blood, and his heart went out toward all suffering of man and beast.

Then and there he dedicated himself, in an early and pre-enlightened fashion, to the relief of pain.

Right to Save Life

The story says that his cousin demanded the bird, but Gautama refused to give it up. Whereupon they submitted the question to the wise men of the district, and one aged man, who had never been seen among them before, announced that if the power to destroy life might be assumed to give the cousin a right to the swan, much more did the power and will to save life confer the ownership on him who had preserved it.

When the other wise men looked around to see who it was that had spoken they could not discover the prophet, but a snake glided away. Thus the gods sometimes disappeared when they had performed their mission.

It was Gautama's skill in archery that won the willing heart of the Princess Yasodhara, to whom he was married at the age of nineteen. The father provided three luxurious palaces, one for each of the three Indian seasons, and there would seem to have been nothing for the young people to desire.

Yet Gautama was not happy. Passing along the road one day, he saw four appalling sights—a decrepit old man, a man loathsomely sick, a corpse and a monk. The last was in some respects the most terrible of all, a religious ascetic intent only on achieving his own salvation through self-discipline and utterly undisturbed by the sorrows of the world.

Destined to Death

Gautama became distressed at the thought that he, and all mankind, were destined to the miseries of sickness, old age and death, and that the current philosophies were powerless to give peace.

He made his decision. Slipping away at night from his beautiful wife and his new-born child, he renounced his throne and fortune, and fled on his white horse Kantaka, accompanied by a single servant. The prince of evil, Mara, sought to restrain him, but he was proof against temptation.

On the farther side of a stream he dismissed his servant, sent back his horse, and went forth in beggar's clothes to find a solution of life's enigma.

Taught Asceticism

It is said there were sixty-two schools in India at that time, most of them teaching the attainment of holiness by asceticism. Gautama went to Alara Kalama, whose fame was wide.

"Thus vowed to homelessness and seeking the highest, even the way of peace, I went where the ascetic Alara Kalama dwelt and thus addressed him, 'Friend Kalama, I would lead the life of a recluse as your pupil and follower.' And very swiftly I learned, O disciples, what he had to teach."

What he learned was the "eight stages of meditation"—self-mortification raised to the nth degree. He gave it a thorough trial.

"Like wasted withered reeds became all my limbs, like a camel's hoof my hip, like a wavy rope my backbone, and as in a ruined house the roof-tree rafters show all askew, so sloping showed my ribs because of the extremity of fasting. As in a deep well the watery gleam far below is scarcely to be seen, so in my eye-sockets the gleam of my eye-balls far sunken well nigh disappeared, and as a severed gourd becomes rotten and shrunken when left out in the sun and uncooked, so hollow and shrunken became the skin of my head. When I touched the surface of my belly my hand touched the backbone, and as I stroked my flesh, the hair, rotten at the roots, came away in my hands."

Modern Women Demand Fresh, Clean Clothes

TODAY they are more valuable . . . . washed oftener. Safety in the wash is more important than ever before. Therefore the harmless, complete cleansing, insured by Surprise Soap, is more necessary now than ever.

Today—remember—cheap dangerous soaps may look safe. Their poor quality is hard to detect until after the damage is done.

You know Surprise can be trusted. Over forty years have proved it. Housewives of fastidious standards hold it in higher esteem than any other soap that is made. No low grade ingredients have ever been used in making it. Its quality has never been lowered; always improved.

KLAN BURNED MEN AT STAKE

Former Members Tell of Brutalities Ordered By Chiefs of Order.

DENIAL ALSO MADE.

PITTSBURGH April 11. — Men burned alive at the stake, with Imperial Wizard Hiram Wesley Evans at times directing the torture, the bombing of their own meetings to increase membership and arouse antagonism against Roman Catholics, the tales of atrocities committed by the famous "Night Riders" featured the hearing of the suit and counter suits of members of the Ku Klux Klan in Federal court here yesterday.

The suit is the outcome of the banishment of five men of local Klans by the Imperial Wizard Evans and the counter suit seeks to bar the Klan from the State of Pennsylvania, also demanding an accounting of approximately $20,000,000 paid in to the order by over 300,000 members in this state.

Practically all the testimony given yesterday dealtwith brutalities practiced by the order. From far away Dallas, Texas, came a lurid story of men being burned at the stake while hundreds of klansmen in their regalia unmoved. watched the victims' dying agonies.

The narration of these atrocities was given by Clarence Ludlow ,an overseas veteran, who now resides in this city. Ludlow was a resident of Dallas in 1920-21 ,and at that time was a member of Klan 66 of that city.

He told Emperor Evans presided at some of the kanagroo courts.

That the infamous "Night Riders" the flogging and burning division of the former hooded order, were frequently ordered by higher authorities of the Klan to kill, burn and destroy was the testimony of Captain J. F. Ramsey, of Dayton, O., himself a former member of the infamous night brigade, but now one of the Klan outcasts.

Harry E. MacNeel, kleagle and exalted cyclops of Kittanning ,added several facts to those already told of the fatal Carnegie riot.

MacNeel declared all klansmen at the meeting, men from Ohio, Pennsylvania and West Virginia were armed with revolvers and sawed off shot guns. MacNeel later became a victim of Rich's antagonism, and on the latter's orders, his home was raided, letters and receipts with money and gold pieces were confiscated. He also stated that under the command of Rich, he (MacNeel) with others burned a cross in front of St. Mary's Catholic church at Kittanning.

Klansmen Deny.

DALLAS, Tex., April 11.—(A.P.) — Rangers, Klan officials, county officers and newspapermen interrogated in various parts of the state yesterday, denied any knowledge of the burning of a man by the Klan at Terrell, as testified to by Clarence W. Ludlow, former Texas Klansman, in a Klan injunction suit trial at Pittsburgh, to-day .

WEDDING BELLS

TULLY—NOLAN.

Old St. Andrew's church, Toronto, was the scene of a very pretty wedding yesterday morning at half-past ten o'clock, when Kathleen Breta Nolan, second daughter of Mrs. Nolan and the late J. A. Nolan, of Calgary, Alberta, became the bride of John Dalton Tully, B.Sc., only son of J. A. Tully and the late Mrs. Grace Tully of Toronto and brother of Miss Dorothea L. Tully of 36 Maitland avenue, Peterborough. Rev. Dr. Munro performed the ceremony.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her cousin, Harold V. Serson of Toronto, wore a travelling costume of rose-beige crepe romain, with picture hat. Her sister, Miss Lillian Nolan, was bridesmaid, and wore a gown of French blue crepe, with blue hat.

After the ceremony a wedding breakfast was served in the Palm Room of the King Edward Hotel, when the following guests were present: Mrs. J. A. Nolan and Miss Lillian Nolan of Calgary, mother and sister of the bride, J. A. Tully and Miss Dorothea Tully of Peterborough, father and sister of the bridegroom, Mr. and Mrs. P. J. Fuller of Peterborough, Mr. and Mrs. John B. Bick, Mr. and Mrs. A. Victor Bick, Mrs. W. E. Moodie, Mr. and Mrs. H. O. Serson, Rev. Dr. and Mrs. Munro, and Miss A. Gillgrass, all of Toronto. Later, Mr. and Mrs. Tully left for Montreal and New York, en route to Bermuda for their honeymoon. On their return they will live in New York city

The bride was a popular member of Calgary's younger set and the bridegroom was a graduate of Calgary's Central High School prior to his graduation after an engineering course at Queen's University, Kingston. Since then he has been connected with the Bethlehem Steel Company, and at present is assistant manager of the Railroad Department of that corporation, with head offices at New York city.

IN MEMORIAM

DEGEN—In loving memory of our dear son, William E. Degen, who passed away three years ago today, April 12, 1925.
There is someone who misses you sadly
And has found the years long since you went.
There is someone who misses you daily,
Though she tries to be brave and content.
Time moves on and we're reminded
Of a day our hearts were crushed;
When God took you, oh, so quickly,
And we all in our gloom were thrust.
Time may come and bring many changes,
Fresh with every coming year.
But your memory we will cherish
In the hearts that loved you here.
—Sadly missed by Father and Mother.

IN MEMORIAM

DEGEN.—In loving memory of our dear brother, William E. Degen, who passed away three years ago today, April 12, 1925.
Days of suffering, nights of pain,
Waiting for the cure, but all in vain;
Till God above did think it best
To ease your pain and give you rest.
The flowers we lay upon your grave
May wither and decay;
But our love for you, dear brother,
Will never fade away.
—Sadly missed by Brothers and Sisters.

NEW OFFICERS ARE INSTALLED AT ANNUAL GENERAL MEETING HELD BY CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

Varied Agenda of Business Disposed of By Directorate.

MOTION PICTURES SHOWN.

Plans For Holding First of July Celebration in City Are Discussed.

Formal installation of the 1928 officers and directorate of the Peterborough Chamber of Commerce, and disposal of a varied agenda of business, followed by moving pictures, featured the annual general meeting of the Chamber, held last evening in the auditorium of the Public Library. Though the entire meeting with its particularly entertaining conclusion, was one of profit to everyone concerned. The 1927 president, G. A. Gillespie presided during the fore part of the evening while the president elect, James Dutton assumed the chairmanship following the installation by his worship Mayor Denne.

G. A. Gillespie

Following adoption of the treasures report, G. A. Gillespie gave his annual report as follows:

I will say "to go forward" will be the policy of the Chamber of Commerce for year 1928. During the year which has just passed the Chamber has endeavored to carry on the various activities pertaining to the Chamber of Commerce work and has succeeded in closing the year with a balance budget due to the policy adopted by the executive of putting on the publicity and community drive with the help of the American City Bureau. This campaign should create more interest in the Chamber of Commerce by enlisting the larger membership and by community work which the executive will put on through the many varied committees which will be organized throughout the coming year.

The Chamber of Commerce has always lent its co-operation to all bodies interested in the building of the City of Peterborough and community such as the City Council, Trent Waterway Association, Peterborough Automobile Club, Horticultural Society, Retail Merchants Association, Peterborough Industrial Exhibition and the different service clubs of the City.

During the year just closed we have added to Peterborough several new industries and the expansion of many of our former manufacturing concerns, which shows a healthy growth, and I believe indications are that Peterborough, during the present year, will share in the prosperity which is indicated by all financial institutions writing or commenting on the subject.

The Tourist Traffic.

That the publicity efforts of the Chamber of Commerce, in co-operation with allied organizations, have been well directed is reflected in the tourist revenue to this district during 1927, which reached the surprising total of $507,000.00, better 100 per cent. increase over the revenue in the year 1925. That the tourist field is far from exhausted is revealed in this report just issued by the Department of National Revenue, indicating that over 3,000,000 cars entered Canada from the United States last year.

Highway Extension

The Chamber of Commerce has been most active in the promotion of sentiment calling for better motor connections with other parts of the province, and our representations to the Government, endorsed by allied organizations, may be said to have resulted in (a) the Provincial Government taking over and improving the Lindsay-Peterborough Road (b) improvements to the Peterboro-Port Hope Highway; (c) improvements to the Chemong Road; (d) a promise, made by the Prime Miister, that during 1928, a section of the roadway east of Peterborough would be taken over by the Government with a view to making a start towards construction of a highway to Ottawa; (e) a promise, made by the Minister of Lands and Forests, that during 1928 his department would improve the Lake Catchacoma to Gooderham Roadway.

Diamond Jubilee of Confederation

The members of the Chamber of Commerce, I am glad to say, were most active in Peterborough's celebration, and it should be most gratifying to everyone concerned, that the efforts of Peterborough people were so strikingly crowned with success.

Of interest to this district was the disbanding, last year, of the Tourist Association of Ontario, in Cleveland, Ohio, and Pittsburgh, Penn., we had an inexpensive avenue of distribution for our tourist literature which is now closed to us, and this fact should supply the necessary incentive to bring about an enlargement of our advertising program.

Our committee on transportation made several contracts during the past year with the officials of both railways, with a view to improving passenger and freight service. The

Dog Saves Master's Life During Fire

OTTAWA, Ont., April 13.—(Canadian Press.)—An Airedale dog probably saved his master, W. R. Keyes, from being burned to death early yesterday when fire wiped out the Keyes general store, the library, post office and two small merchant shops in the nearby village of Inkerman. Damage was placed at $30,000, partly covered by insurance.

PARKING TIME TO BE LIMITED IN CENTRE CITY

Special Committee Fixes Time On George Street at Twenty Minutes.

ONE HOUR ON OTHERS.

Angle Parking On One Side of Street Only To Be Recommended To Council.

A by-law including many new arrangements in the parking system of the city, has been under consideration of a special committee appointed by the city council. For the committee decided to have by-law prepared to provide.

"That a special parking area be established bounded on the north by Brock street, on the south by Sherbrooke street, on the east by Water street and on the west by Aylmer street with the streets mentioned, above included: that on the streets running north and south in this area, parking shall be at an angle as shown by painting on the pavement, and on the east side only and no parking permitted on the west side and on streets in this area running east and west, parking shall be at an angle as shown by painting on the pavement, and on the south side only, and no parking permitted on the north side; On George street in this area, no car shall be parked longer than twenty minutes and on the other streets in this area no longer than one hour; except that no car shall be parked on Aylmer street between Simcoe and Charlotte streets and that no vehicle that is longer than 18 feet including its load, shall be parked in this special area; and that Louis street shall be a one-way street, cars to go south only on it, and Chambers street to be a one-way street, cars to go south only upon it.

On streets outside of the special area, cars shall be parked within six inches of the curb on the edge of the roadway and no car shall be parked on any such street longer than a reasonable time

The following streets are to be designated through streets:

Rubidge street from Albert street to Charlotte street; Hunter street from the west side of Rubidge street to Aylmer street and Hunter street east from Water street to Armour road.

Signs of metal shall be hung on poles at each end of each block in the special areas showing length of time parking is permitted on the block and the kind of parking permitted and giving information at each end of the one-way streets and also signs at the intersections of the through streets.

The special committee on motor parking met again on Wednesday, April 11, to consider a by-law drafte by the city solicitor in accordance with instructions of the committe.

It was decided to recommend that: No parking be allowed on Chambers street.

That sections 19 of bylaw number 2662 be replaced.

That on streets in the special area other than George street parking be allowed, not longer than one hour between 8 o'clock a.m. and 6 o'clock p.m. on days other than Saturday, and that on Saturday no cars be parked on such other streets longer than one hour.

This by-law will probably be introduced at next Monday night's meeting of the City Council.

MAN GOES OVER FALLS.

Passengers and Crew of Trolley Car Saw Him Early To-day.

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., April 13 (Canadian Press).—A. Mannette, conductor on a trolley car running between this city and Chippawa, reported to the authorities to-day that between 6 and 7 a.m. he and passengers on his trolley saw a man go over the Horseshoe Falls.

FIRST TO FLY WESTWARD ACROSS ATLANTIC

The Junkers monoplane Bremen, manned by German and Irish aviators, made the first direct flight westward across the North Atlantic. It hopped off from Baldonnel, Ireland on Thursday morning at 12.58 (E.S.T.) and was sighted at Kingport, N.S., at 9.30 (E. S. T.) to-day. No. 1 shows Baron Gunther von Huenefeld, the backer of the flight, who is said to have staked his last pfenning on its success, and who, with a monocle in his eye, acted as cook, oiler and general handyman on the trip. No. 2 shows the Bremen; No. 3, Captain Herman Koehl, its pilot; No. 4 is another view of Baron von Huenefeld, and No. 5 is Col. James Fitzmaurice of the Irish Free State air service, co-pilot.

HOBBY SHOW EXHIBITS INDICATE WIDE RANGE OF BOYS' INTERESTS

All Classes Well Filled With Articles Boys Make or Collect.

FORMAL OPENING.

Boys Manage Show, With Elders Serving in Advisory Capacity Only.

The hobbies that are declared by up-to-date psychologists to have such a beneficial effect on the minds and general health of their devotees are having an inning this week at the Y.M.C.A., where the Boys' Hobby Show got away to a good start last night. Anything and everything may be a hobby, whether it happens to be a fondness for ping-pong, or a desire to collect funny strips from newspapers. The various likings of boys of the city make an interesting and splendid exhibit in the gymnasium and several of the large rooms at the Y.M.C.A.

With a brief speech of introduction from F. G. McNeely and a pithy short address by Dr. J. J. Craig, the Show was opened officially last night at half-past seven o'clock, the program to continue through to-day and until tomorrow night.

Mr. McNeely paid a tribute to the boys, thirty-six in number, who did the hard work necessary to put the show over, and Dr. Craig, who is honorary president of the Board of Directors of the Show, went on to emphasize the value of hobbies, in their development of character and their provision of a normal outlet for the creative genius and acquisitive energy which animates the growing boy. They also satisfy that inner craving for a place in the limelight which Dr. Craig said was inherent in the normal individual and the system of placing in order of merit gives the boy the satisfaction of knowing that he is doing something to follow out the desire of the Lord in making the most of the talents which have been entrusted to him.

Scoutcraft and Campcraft

In the boy's game room, the hobbies in connection with Scoutcraft and Campcraft are on view. Here, on a small table, are placed precisely, models of a Morse signaller, a hand-made leather holder for a Scout's hatchet, and a natural wood tooth-brush holder that reveals a touch of vanity in the tiny oval mirror which is inset.

Evidently even a Scout likes to know whether his hat is tilted at the proper angle and his scarf is just right.

Here are examples of slip knots of various sorts, with ropes twisted into queer shapes that include the "sheep shank knot," the "bowline bight," and "Tomfool's knot." There are natural letters in wood. Scout staves carved in a fashion that resembles a totem pole, and a long bow and arrows that reminds one of the "yew wood, the true wood" that made English bowmen famous in the long ago. There are tiny Scout huts of hewn logs and moss-covered roofs, and a miniature Scout camp, with real grass for a base.

Against the wall are placed replicas of Scout emblems of the different patrols, the "lion" with a smiling countenance; the vicious - looking "rattlesnake" and the mighty "elephant." Maps of hikes and a collection of flags also have a place here.

In the gymnasium, the mechnical models are exceptionally interesting. An adult exhibitor, G. G. Thomson of 537 Sherbrooke street, shows an

MAYOR DENNE'S APPEAL

Editor of The Examiner.

Sir,—I have been pleased with the publicity you have given to the Empire Shopping Week, April 21st-28th.

I hope that the manufacturers, merchants, and citizens generally will enter into the spirit of this campaign and heartily co-operate to make it a success.

Especially it should bring to the front the manufactures of Peterborough. There are a large number of articles made in this city, such as are used in all households, and this is a good opportunity for any of our citizens who do not know their good qualities to become acquainted with them.

The goods manufactured in Peterborough, in the Dominion, and in the Empire should be known to all of us, in order that we may, so far as possible, provide for our wants with goods made within the Empire.

Yours truly,

ROLAND DENNE, Mayor.

Seven Fliers Lost Lives In Attempt To Make Westward Flight Across Atlantic

If the Bremen succeeds in its flight across the Atlantic, it will be the first to complete the perilous Westward passage.

Three Previous Attempts

Capt. Charles Nungesser and Major Francois Coli, attempting flight from Paris to New York, took off May 8, 1927, in the White Bird.

Princess Lowenstein-Wertheim, Captain Leslie Hamilton, and Frederick F. Minchin, attempting a flight from Upavon, England, to Ottawa, Ontario, took off August 8, 1927, in the St. Raphael.

Captain Walter R. G. Hinchliffe and the Hon. Elsie MacKay, attempting a flight from Croydon Airdrome, Eng., to New York or Philadelphia, took off March 13, 1928, in the Endeavour.

Three planes made the Eastward flight to Europe from New York and four fliers crossed the North Atlantic from Newfoundland to Ireland and England. Three planes were lost in the attempt.

The successful flights:

Captain John Alcock and Lieut. Arthur W. Brown, from Newfound to Ireland, starting June 14, 1919.

Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh, in the Spirit of St. Louis, from New York to Paris, starting May 20, 1927.

William S. Brock and Edward F. Schlee, in the Pride of Detroit from Harbor Grace, Newfoundland, to England, starting August 27, 1927.

The three unsuccessful attempts:

Captain Terry Tully and Lieut. James Medcalf, Canadians, in the Sir John Carling, attempting flight from Harbor Grace, Newfoundland, to Croydon, England, took off September 7, 1927.

Mrs. Frances Grayson and three companions lost between New York and Harbor Grace, Newfoundland, on first leg of flight to Croydon, England. Left New York December 23, 1927.

TIE-BREAKER PUZZLE.

Monday, April 16th is the Last Day in the Examiner Contest.

We wish to remind the contestants in the tie-breaker puzzle that Monday, April 16th, is the last day of the contest and therefore, all solutions should be in the mail on Monday night, or if contestants wish to bring them into the Examiner personally, we will receive these on Tuesday, but this will be positively the last day. We ask all contestants to refrain from telephoning for any results of the contest until the announcement is made, as considerable checking of the solutions has to be done before we can be sure of the winners. This will take at least a week or possibly longer before accurate results will be obtained, but we can assure all contestants that the contest department will make every effort to give the results as soon as possible, after the contest ends no information whatever will be given over the telephone until the final results are announced.

ACCIDENTAL DEATH VERDICT RETURNED IN GAULD INQUEST

Conduct Investigation Into Death of Youth Shot on Saturday.

GUN HAD FAULTY LOCK

Recommend Shooting of Firearms in Public Parks be Made Illegal.

A verdict of accidental death was returned last night by the Coroner's jury empanelled to enquire into the death of John B. Gauld, who was shot in Jackson Park last Saturday afternoon and died on Sunday in Nicholls Hospital. The jury laid no blame on Philip Marocco, the boy who was carrying the rifle at the time it was discharged, but recommended that the discharging of fire arms in the public parks be made illegal and the offenders be prosecuted. The inquest was held by Corner Dr. T. W. H. Young and the inquiry conducted by Crown attorney G. W. Hatton K. C.

Four boys George Gauld, 20, John Gauld, 14, Maurice Hynes, 15, and Philip Marocco, 16, left home early Saturday afternoon to go on a hunting expedition. The boys were eqdipped with a 22 rifle and while on the Canadian National tracks in Jackson park they started to shoot at a tin can. During this shooting John Gauld was shot by Philip Marocco when he went to take a cigarette out of the later's mouth.

A stern warning was issued to parents by Coroner Dr. T. W. H. Young against allowing their boys to carry fire arms in parks and other public places. Jackson park is a most dangerous place for men and boys to carry fire arms and discharge them. It is full of hills and dales and you cannot tell where the bullets will go. It is a great risk to others in the park and to those travelling through on trains. The thing must be stopped not only to protect the safety of those who are in the park but to protect all bird and animal life there", said Dr. Young.

He emphasized the fact that in this case the boy had taken the gun, knowing that it had a faulty lock and he had been told not to by his father.

Shooting at Tin Can.

Gordon Gauld, a brother of the deceased and one of the party that went out last Saturday afternoon to hunt ground-hogs was the first witness called. He told the jury that the four boys had one gun between them that afternoon and while walking up the railroad track in Jackson park they found a couple of tin cans he told his brother to set one of the cans on a post and that they would try their marksmanship. Hynes took the first shot and missed the can completly, John Gould was the next to try his skill and he knocked the can off the post. While John was putting the can on the post Morocco who was smoking a cigarette at the

SHANK SETS RECORD

Available Records Show He Made Endurance Mark For Light Planes.

ST. PAUL, Minn., April 13.—(Canadian Press.) — Forced down by a blinding snow storm, Gene Shank landed his 90 horse power biplane at 9.18 a.m. to-day after establishing a world's record for sustained flight of a light airplane, as shown in the records available here.

Has Since Been Reported at Yarmouth, N. S., and Popham, Maine, Flying Towards New York—German Steamer Reported It At Sea.

CAPTAIN OF VESSEL SAW PLANE VERY HIGH; ANOTHER MAN REPORTS HEARING ENGINE

Aviators Patrolling Maine Coast in Hope of Meeting German Plane—Rumored That Plane Has Reached New York.

A report was received by F. G. Oke & Company over the stock exchange circuit that the plane had landed at New York, but this could not be verified through Canadian Press.

As the crow flies, it is 480 miles from Yarmouth, where they were reported at 11.40 this morning. The Bremen, making good time, would take five hours to reach New York, or not before 4.40 p.m., as it is driving in a strong head wind.

HALIFAX, April 13 (Canadian Press). — The only apparently authentic report of the Junkers plane Bremen, since it hopped off at 1.38 a.m., Atlantic standard time, on Thursday from Baldonnel Airdrome, Ireland, for Mitchel Field, New York, up to noon to-day, was that of Captain Barkhouse, master of the cutter Aerras, now at Kingsport, Nova Scitia. At ten-thirty to-day, Captain Barkhouse reported to the authorities that he had seen a monoplane flying very high in a west-south-westerly direction over Kingsport. The sky was clear, but the plane was at such an altitude that its markings could not be ascertained. The fact that it was a monoplane led Capt. Barkhouse to believe beyond all doubt that it was the Bremen. Officials of the Marine Service at Halifax place every confidence in the captain's judgment.

Another man in Kingsport said he had not seen the plane, but had heard it distinctly for five minutes.

If the report was correct, there is little likelihood that the plane will be reported again in Nova Scotia. Capt. Barkhouse, from his nautical experience, said he would judge that the plane he saw was on the direct course for Cape Cod, and he was not surprised when, three and one-half hours later, no further reports had been received of the plane being sighted.

First Reported at Kingsport.

KINGSTPORT, N.S., April 13. — (Canadian Press.)— A plane, flying very high and proceeding west southwest, was sighted over Kingsport at nine-thirty o'clock, Eastern Standard time, to-day by Capt. Barkhouse, of the Canadian marine steamer Arras. Capt. Barkhouse said it was too high to distinglish any markings, but he was sure it was the German plane Bremen. He said several other persons saw and heard the plane.

Carence Patterson, an overseas man, said he heard a plane for five minutes while working here, but could not see it. The weather was clear. Both Captain Barkhouse and Mr. Patterson said no other plane was known to be operating in the district and both men were convinced it was the Bremen.

No Plane in District.

OTTAWA, April 13.— (Canadian Press.)— Officials of the air force here state that as far as they know no Canadian plane is in the air in the vicinity of Kingsport, N.S.

Plane at Yarmouth

HALIFAX, April 13 (Canadian Press).—The Evening Mail says an airplane was seen by several people at Yarmouth, N.S., at 2.40 this afternoon (Atlantic Standard time), flying well out over the sea. No identification was possible owing to the distance. The Canadian Press is trying to confirm this.

Steamer Reports Plane

BELFAST, April 1. (Canadian Press).—The German steamer Derflinger, which put into Galway today, reported she had picked up a message yesterday from a steamer further out to sea that the Junkers plane Bremen had been sighted by that vessel. The name of the steamer was not known, and no details were given.

Seen by Coastguard

BATH, Maine, April 13 (Canadian Press)—Coastguardsmen at Popham Beach at the mouth of the Kennebec River, reported that they heard the whirr of an airplane at about 1.20, Eastern standard time this afternoon, and finally sighted one flying very high and headed west. They said the plane was so far off they could not get any distinguishing marks.

Patrolling Coast.

CONCORD, N. H., April 13. Canadian Press. — Robert Fogg left here in a monoplane for Old Orchard, Maine, with the intention of cruising up and down the coast in the hope of meeting the German plane Bremen.

After waiting two weeks in Ireland for favorable weather, the Bremen took off at 12.38 o'clock Eastern Standard time yesterday morning

Lord Mayor Unable To Visit United States

LONDON, April 13.— (A.P.)— London's lord mayor and his gilded coach will not visit New York this year. Sir Charles Batho said yesterday that he greatly regretted the fact that he was unable to accept an invitation extended some time ago by Mayor James J. Walker to come to New York and bring his ancient coach and gaily-liveried footmen.

"I have too much to do and it is impossible to get away even for a few weeks," said the lord mayor. "I am booked for banquets nearly every night of my term of office which has eight months yet to run."

PEOPLE WARNED AGAINST FLOOD

Reeve of North Monaghan Notified of Danger—Valuables Cared for.

Notice was sent to the Reeve of the Township of North Monaghan to notify all persons residing near the banks of the river that a flood was on its way from the north. As yet farmers who were notified can notice very little difference in the height of the water. All valuables have been removed from the cellars and buildings on low land. The county road east of Frazerville school is closed to traffic, being covered by a depth of several feet of water and at places along the River Road a short distance from Peterborough the water has almost reached the level of the buildings. At the T.A.S. park the river has overflowed its banks and spread half a mile inland.

Although the river is high the surface water has had time to get away this year earlier than usual and there is now very little lying on the land.

GEORGE FOWLER RECEIVES GIFT AT MILLBROOK

Has Served Many Years as Superintendent of Sunday School.

AUXILIARY MEETS

Mrs. J. H. George Tells United Church Women About Work.

MILLBROOK, April 13.—On Easter Sunday afternoon, following the regular session of the Saint Thomas' church Sunday School, George Fowler, who recently resigned from being superintendent after many years of efficient service in the office, was made the recipient of gifts from the teachers and pupils, including a handsomely-bound hymn and prayer book, a Waterman's Eversharp pencil, and a copy of Milton's poetical works.

The address was read by Miss M. B. Turner, B. A., secretary of the Sunday School, two boys from the primary class, E. Abbott and H. Howson, offering the gifts. The rector the Rev. Canon Allen, signed the address on behalf of the entire school; Miss Ella Grandy for the teachers, Miss Turner for the officers and Margaret Russell for the scholars.

Mr. Fowler made a suitable reply, giving assurance of his continued interest in the school's welfare though his connection, in an official capacity, had been severed, and also expressed his gratitude for the kindly remembrance and the words of appreciation accompanied the gifts.

E. H. Barnes, who is closely associated with the boys of the school in his capacity as Scoutmaster, of the local troop of Boy Scouts, has been appointed superintendent in Mr. Fowler's place.

SILVER PRESENTED

Mrs. L. Cuthbertson is Leaving Havelock to Reside at Sulphide.

HAVELOCK, April 13.—The Knox Ladies' Aid, having in mind the loss the Society will sustain by the removal to Sulphide this month of one of its oldest members, in the person of Mrs. L. Cuthbertson, took advantage of the opportunity offered at the regular meeting on Wednesday afternoon to wish her Godspeed and to present her with a handsome silver service, suitably engraved, as a tangible token of their appreciation of the efficient and loyal services which she has so willingly given during the fifteen years she has been a member, thirteen of which she has held the office of treasurer.

Mrs. Stanley Barlow presented the gift while Mrs. John Howe read the accompanying address which was signed, on behalf of the Aid, by Bervie Hoffman, president; Hazel Hubel, secretary; Anna Thompson, Lucy Hitchins, and Mary J. Howe.

After the presentation, Mrs. A. Anderson spoke a few words, paying tribute to Mrs. Cuthbertson's qualities of friend and co-worker and expressing regret at the loss of her most intimate friend. "I think," she said, "that Mrs. Cuthbertson has left a good impression. I have learned a lesson from her during the fifteen years of my association with her and I have never heard her make an excuse for not attending a meeting of either the Ladies' Aid or Missionary Society. She was always in the proper place at the proper time. She has been a friend of mine through joy and sorrow and I think Sulphide will be benefitted and honored by having a couple like Mr. and Mrs. Cuthbertson become citizens of their village."

At the close of the meeting lunch was served to about fifty ladies in attendance.

May Import Cattle For Feeding In Bond

OTTAWA, Ont., April 13 (Canadian Press).—Cattle may now be imported into Canada temporarily for the purpose of feeding or pasturage in bond, provided certain regulations are complied with by the importer. These regulations covered by order in council have been made as the result of applications for permission to bring cattle into Canada for feeding and pasturage conditional upon their being again exported. The time allowed for cattle to remain for such purposes is one year.

The possibility or danger of these animals bringing in disease is, it is intimated, well guarded against by the Department of Agriculture. All such animals coming from the United States must be accompanied by a tuberculin test chart signed or endorsed by an officer of the United States Bureau of Animal Industry. The usual quarantine regulations will apply to all shipments.

ICE BREAKING ON GREAT LAKES

OPEN APRIL 20TH.

SAULT STE. MARIE, Mich., Canadian Press. — Prospects for the near opening of navigation, which were dampened by the cold spell of the past week, seemed to be in the ascendance again yesterday when rain set in again with scattered falls of soft wet snow. The ice has held its own ranging from six to 15 inches in the St. Mary's River. In Whitefish the windrows are still solid in the bay while outside the point the big fields move back and forth. In an effort to get to the steamer Eades Wednesday, the tug General of Detour was forced back by 15 inches of solid blue ice above Pipe Island in the Lower St. Mary's River. Making another attempt yesterday she suffered severe injuries to her bow plates, which will probably put her out of the ice bucking proposition for the Spring. The Eades slid out west Neebish cut where she had been held in all winter, when the first ice began to move several weeks ago. Landing below the Cut in Lake Munoscong she threw her anchor to await opening of the channel But in her new position she become confronted with the probability of running out of fuel and supplies and it was with this purpose the General made the attempt to reach her from below.

With the General out of commission the owners have ordered tugs from the Soo to break through to her. The tugs will leave the Soo today.

DON'T SUFFER THE TORTURES OF RHEUMATISM

Just because you have tried a lot of so-called rheumatic remedies or treatments without getting any lasting relief, that is no reason why you should say, "Nothing can help me", because there is something that will give you quick results and that is RHEUMA.

Rheuma will absolutely end all your rheumatic misery or it will not cost you one penny. So if you really want to get blessed relief from those awful stabbing knife-like pains—if you really want to drive those dull, grinding, numbing aches completely out of your system, just step into your druggist's and ask for a bottle of Rheuma.

It matters not whether you are tortured with pain, suffering with sore, inflammed joints or distressed with occasional twinges, Rheuma is sold by McDermid & Jury, and all good druggists with guarantee to end rheumatic suffering, or money back.

BRIDGE BILL PASSED.

Committee Will Report St. Lawrence Measure To Commons.

OTTAWA, April 13.—(Canadian Press)—Bill authorizing the construction of a bridge from Brockville to Morristown, N.Y., was approved by the railways and canals committee of the House yesterday. The company empowered to build the bridge is to be known as the St. Lawrence River Bridge Company, with a capital of three million dollars. The measure will be reported to the House for final reading. Little discussion took place in the committee on the measure.

Discuss Proposals To Curb Stock Frauds

BUFFALO, New York, April 13. —(Canadian Press.) — Proposals designed to curb international stock funds were discussed here yesterday by officials of New York State and the Province of Ontario.

A law, similar to the Martin Anti-Stock fraud law of this state already has been passed in the province but it was said at the conclusion of the conference that certain additional regulations would be necessary before enforcement of the law becomes effective. The new law in Ontario will be in effect about May 1.

Fake stock dealers, particularly those selling Canadian mining stocks it was said, have been operating extensively on both sides of the International border. Their dealings amounting to $65,000,000. With enforcement of the Ontario law, officials of the Province and this state will be provided with a double check on such stock selling schemes.

At yesterday's conference were Donald S. Dudley and Richardson T. Anderson, state deputies, attorney general and William B. Common of the Ontario Attorney-General's department.

Another conference will take place soon in Toronto.

BOOSTER CLUB ELECTS OFFICERS

D. E. Bell is Chosen to Head Marmora Organization This Year.

MARMORA, April 13.—D. E. Bell was elected president of the Marmora Booster Club at the annual meeting held in the council chamber on Wednesday evening. J. P. Marrin presided over the meeting and the treasurer, C. W. Gladney, presented the treasurer's report which showed a slight deficit. Prior to the election of officers, J. P. Marrin, who has had the presidentship for two years, said that he could not accept the presidency for another year.

METHOD DOCTORS ADVISE ENDS COLDS OVERNIGHT

Endorsed as Ideal Way to Stop Head Cold, Cough, Chest Cold —Pleasant for Home Use.

No longer is it necessary to guess in choosing the quickest way to get rid of a stuffy head cold, bad cough or deep seated chest cold. For doctors have endorsed a hospital tested method for home use which is giving hundreds of Peterborough people the same quick relief that came to C. J. Wrenn and so many others who have tried it.

Mr. Wrenn developed a bad head cold which nothing seemed to relieve. He couldn't sleep except to doze off a few minutes and wake up with the feeling that he was being choked. Then he called his doctor who advised Ayer's Cherry Pectoral —a concentrated mixture of wild cherry, terpin-hydrate and other ingredients which have relieved even the most extreme hospital cases.

With the first swallow he felt its comforting, healing warmth—from his nose passages deep down into his chest. Relief began instantly and the cold was clearing up noticeably in two or three hours. He continued the pleasant doses, and in another day or so, doctors report, there was no trace left of the cough or cold.

Note: See other cases reported daily—all certified to this paper by a member of the hospital.

Doctors find that this hospital medicine does far more than stop coughing instantly. It penetrates and heals inflamed lining of the breathing passages. Absorbed by the system it quickly reduces phlegm, helps allay that "feverish", grippy feeling and drives out the cold from the nose passages, throat and chest.

Just a few pleasant spoonfuls of Cherry Pectoral now and you'll feel like a different person tomorrow.

ALIGN WITH THE LEAGUE.

To the Editor.

Sir,—The League of Nations organized to abolish war, is an acceptance of the co-operative principle, and a reversal of the competitive system.

Armaments are pyramided because of ambition, fear, greed, hatred, pride, and prejudice, or because others are thought to be so imbued. Then may we earnestly cultivate in ourselves and immediate circle, the qualities of peace, goodwill, generosity, and appreciation of others.

Big business has made astounding development, but its underlying principle is the same old ruthlessness which underlies war, and sends captains to the wall, while the essential producer may make a living from a lifetime of toil. In some lands millions barely exist in a world of plenty. The League has come into line with science and invention, inspired by brotherhood to evolutionize world conditions.

Surely we may analyze and evolve a social order in keeping with the considered practice of the Christian religion, before it takes another sixteen million young and less blameworthy lives to realize that our system of political economy is not in accord with the teachings of Christ, but a promoter of wars—international and industrial—or the impoverishment of body, soul, and spirit, worse than extinction.

I confidently assert that were the use of money as a basis of exchange to be abolished, replaced by service of adults, be it in production, fabrication, distribution, or education, for equal distribution to all who labor, and their dependents, that the common people who served so faithfully and sacrificed so heroically in the war, would serve just as honestly and enterprisingly, with greater reason for keeping up with their fellows, than now. That would be complete co-operation, eliminating the envy, jealousy, friction, and waste of today.

I respectfully assert that what I have but barely outlined would remove the complexities, the injustices, and inequalities men now labor under, and would set every fit man to constructive work, and every fit woman to be the keeper of the house, where under their own vine and fig tree or apple tree, they would make home. Do you believe in the innate honesty and industry of human kind? The Great Master did, and greatly loved the common people.

Will it require another convulsion to give that virility which will remake society into the mind of the Master or submerge it in the physical and material? The war was won for Democracy, but we have not yet advanced to consolidate what the people's sacrifice shows them fitted for. If the League is "Each for all and all for each," why foster, day by day, a system of commerce which basically is "Every man for himself, etc."? Christ Who said "I, if I be lifted up, will draw all men unto Me," has not been so lifted up. We are promised "a new heaven and a new earth," doubtless when we show faith and fitness in united action to bring such conditions. Not only "seek peace,' 'but "ensue it."—Yours,

JOSEPH S. BELL.

THE ENGLISH AND THE DOMINION

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear sir:

For the past few years I have written to the leading press of Canada letters with such headings as "Why Should Englishmen Take a Back Seat?", "Are Englishmen on the Job?", Mail and Empire, April 21st, '26, and Nov. 9th, '26, respectively; "Makers of Canada", Globe, July 1st, '27; "Ye Men of English Breed", Evening Times-Globe, St. John, N.B.; April 23rd, '27; and also "This England", Gazette, Montreal, April 23rd, '24, hoping thereby to awaken the English, in the broad, to their position and outlook in Canada.

We English have not been doing our share in the "Bigger Things" of this country, i.e., church, statesmanship, education, journalism, banking, managers of transportation, thoroughbred farming, etc. See letters referred to.

Here are some of facts for the English to solemnly ponder, and, more, to rise nobly to the conditions here in Canada that confront us. After the last Dominion election the Mail and Empire makes known there were eight Scotsmen and one Englishmen in the new Cabinet. Yet there are double as many English as Scots in Canada. Thank God for Scotsmen. But what is the matter with the English?

How about Premiers of Ontario, this British Province? What does history tell us? Turn to the Presidents of Universities in Canada. How many can the English point to? Scarcely any.

Who represent Canada in other countries? (Taken from the Daily Press). Why is it so?

Mr. Roy is mentioned to represent Canada in Paris;

Mr. Gerughty is Publicity Commissioner to Great Britain;

Mr. Bruce Walker, Immigration Representative, London, England;

Mr. Patrick Larkin, Canada's Viceroy at London, England;

Mr. McKinnon represents Canada at Wembley Nation Fair;

Mr. Dandurand upholds the Rights and Privileges of Canada at Geneva League of Nations;

In Manitoba Chief Justice Mather dies. Hon. Justice MacDonald succeeds him, and Justice Kilgour steps up to MacDonald's place. The English are not in the game.

In Ontario, at Osgoode Hall, Toronto, within four years, Messrs. Grant, Raney and McEvoy have been appointed judges, and the Hon. Justice Riddell was raised to the Appellate Court.

County Judges appointed—Messrs. Kerr, O'Connor, Boyle, Ross, etc. All worthy men. In law the English don't seem to count. Rather strange!

Sir Joseph Flavelle becomes Chairman of the Research Board (excellent indeed), while on the Alcohol Control Board—Hanna, Manion and McClenaghan dispense the law.

Ontario Cabinet Ministers—Hon. Messrs. Ferguson, Price, Henry, Martyn, Finalyson, Carr, McRae, Monteith. How many English? Not "Legion", at any rate.

Leaders in Saskatchewan—Martin, Anderson, Craig, McMillen, about all Scotch. Do the English produce leaders in Canada? It is assuredly upon to question.

British Columbia—Hon. Mr. McLean, Premier, and Hon. Mr. Sutherland, Minister of Mines.

Ontario—Leader of Opposition, Mr. Sinclair, while the Hon. Mr. Ross is Lieut.-Governor of the Province. Much the same can be said of the Western Provinces. What is the matter?

For two generations and more the English have failed to do their part for Canada in the "Bigger Things." History confirms it since 1845.

Turn to the Nursing Profession. Who represent it so ably? The Misses Snively, Gunn, Smellie, Fairleigh, Rayaide, Mathieson, Cowan, Campbell, etc., Have the English lost the art?

In Sir William Mulock's article in Mail and Empire of March 3rd, 1928, "Federation of Colleges with University of Toronto," note the men he calls upon to tell of the success attending said Federation, but one Englishman among the number. Simply unbelievable!

The English have played, and are playing, all too poor a part in higher education in Ontario and throughout the Dominion. Our position will be lost if we fail to equip ourselves for high places in church, state, education, banking, journalism, agriculture, transportation, etc.

During 1917 I advocated "St. George's Society Scholarship Foundations" at each Provincial University in our country (See "Sons of England Record"), in order to stimulate the English to fit themselves for the higher walks of life. The English must turn out leaders or they will go down. The Empire demands it. It is our job.

By whatever means, the English should seek to do their share in the bigger things of Canada, and beyond. The field is open to all.

Will Canada remain British? Not at all likely, if the English lose the stamina to produced leaders for the higher walks of life in large numbers. Dare we falter? We must face the facts.

English education has failed us in this country. It lacked confidence and drive. The English should endeavour to take every advantage of higher education for leadership in Canada and the Empire.

Yours truly,
THOMAS WICKETT.

WEDDING BELLS

DOHERTY—HOW.

Masses of ferns and palms and Easter flowers made a setting for the wedding which took place in St. George's Anglican Church, Toronto, on Wednesday afternoon, when Rosena Grace, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred D. How, was married to Mr. Alfred William Doherty, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Doherty. Rev. T. J. Dykes conducted the ceremony, assisted by Rev. W. Wright. The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a graceful wedding gown of white Duchess satin, made in early Victorian style, and exquisitely embroidered in seed pearls and brilliants in rosepoint design. The long court train was lined with white georgette, and embroidered to match the gown, and the veil was of rosepoint and tulle, an heirloom in the family. She carried a white satin Prayer Book. Mrs. Foster Hewitt, sister of the bride, was matron of honor and wore a period frock of rainbow tulle, with a large French blue bow at one side. Her hat was a large model in pale blue mohair, with blue velvet bow, and she wore blue shoes and carried a shower bouquet of variegated sweet peas. The bridesmaids were Miss Helen Thompson of Peterborough, Mrs. Martin McGill and Miss Betty Blackwell. They wore period frocks of rainbow tulle with large bows at the side, and their wide pink mohair hats had blue velvet bows. They carried show bouquets of variegated sweet peas. Four little flower girls—Marion and Stephanie Dyke, Hetty Burke and Viola Beauchamp were frocked alike, in rainbow tulle, and carried sweet peas. Mr. John Hawthorne, Jr. was best man, and the ushers were: Mr. Ormsby Doherty, Mr. Allan Hambly, Mr. Foster Hewitt, Mr. Martin McGill and Cadet J. E. How. Following the ceremony a reception was held at 40 Montclair Avenue, when Mrs. A. D. How assisted the bridal party in receiving, wearing a smart French gown of chiffon in rose and a plantinum fox fur. Mrs. Doherty wore a striking gown of beige lace, with matching hat and fox fur. Later, Mr. and Mrs. Doherty left for New York, the bride travelling in a brown ensemble, with brown squirrel trimming, matching hat and alligator shoes.

A woman in Indiana says that for 47 years she has carried a potato in her pocket as a charm against rheumatism.

no auxiliary, it is felt that an organized effort should be made to add Associate Helpers to the roll; on motion, it was decided to allow three points for each name secured. According to the present schedule, five points are allowed for a new annual member; twelve points for a life member; two points for a visitor, and one point for groups, the convenors are to keep tally each month.

The Easter responsive service was used throughout, Mrs. F. H. Smith convenor of the group in charge, being in the chair. Mrs. C. W. Richards read an Easter meditation by D. L. Moody, and Mrs. John Rowland's reading was "A new beginning." Mrs. G. W. Sayles sang, "Who Could it be but Jesus."

Mrs. F. H. Howard took charge of the business session when it was decided to arrange for the supplies for the bale at the May meeting; the quilting will be done before and after the formal program, and sewing the clothing required. Group G, Miss Mary Widdis, convenor, will have charge and refreshments will be served at the tea hour.

The treasurer reported nearly $75 on hand from the Easter thanksoffering with a number of envelopes yet to come in. The meeting was closed with the prayer of dedication by Mrs. Howard.

Personals

Mrs. R. J. Doak, and son, Albert, are spending the Easter holidays with her daughter, Mrs. B. H. Price, of Orillia.

Mr. Nelles Rowland, of the Bank of Toronto staff, Toronto, spent the Easter week-end with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Rowland, Cedar Valley.

Mr. and Mrs. E. G. Britton, and son, Peter, have moved into their home on Centre street, coming here from South Porcupine, where Mr. Britton was manager of the Bank of Toronto; he occupies a similar position here replacing Mr. H. J. Grassett who was moved to Petrolia.

Mr. Harold and Miss Jessie Fallis, of Toronto, were guests of their mother, Mrs. David Fallis, over Easter.

Mr. and Mrs. E. Hill and baby boy, of London, are spending the Easter week with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thorndyke.

Mrs. J. C. Kells is visiting her daughter, Mrs. H. A. Sims, of Barrie.

Mr. Eric Lefroy, of Toronto, has been visiting his uncle, Mr. W. T. Wood.

Mrs. C. Johnson, of Oshawa, spent the Easter week end with her mother Mrs. R. Lowery, Fallis Line.

Mrs. Fred George, of Baltimore, was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. George, Anne street, over the Easter week-end.

Mrs. W. Fred Fallis returned home this week after a month's visit with relatives in Mars, Iowa, and Chicago.

Mr. L. Charlebois of Peterborough was a recent visitor at the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Richards.

ST. JOHN'S W. A.

Regular Business and Devotional Meeting Held By Ladies.

The monthly devotional and business meeting of St. John's Women's Auxiliary was held on Tuesday, April 10th, at 3 p.m., with the president, Mrs. A. W. Turner in the chair. The president opened the meeting and conducted the devotional exercises after which Mrs. G. S. Cameron continued her very instructive discourse on Africa, which the members have followed very closely this season. All branches reported satisfactory progress. The Dorcas Secretary announced that the annual bale will be ready for packing in about two weeks time. The contents will be on exhibition at a tea and sale of home cooking, the date and particulars to be announced later.

Mrs. George Evans of Toronto, late secretary of the W.A., was a welcome guest and read her own board note.

At the close of the meeting tea was served by Mrs. H. Lemmings and her refreshment committee.

SAVING THE ROADS.

Among motorists there is a strong tendency to blame the breakdown of many of the provincial roads upon heavily-laden motor trucks, and perhaps these big machines are the chief offenders.

They are not, however, the only ones—owners of pleasure cars have much to answer for, too, and they have not even the excuse that the damage they are doing is a consequence of attempting to carry on business as usual as the truck companies are attempting to do.

As a matter of fact, time and money would both be saved if all motor traffic over these roads were barred at this season of the year.

Left to themselves the roads would soon be available for use, but under the present system not only do the trucks that operate every day continue their routes but at the first opportunity every owner of a pleasure car seems to feel an irresistible urge to get out on the road, and the result is usually extensive damage requiring weeks to repair.

If heavy trucks were kept off and owners of pleasure cars confined their driving to the pavements the roads would in a short time after the break-up each spring be in their normal condition and much unnecessary expense and annoyance would be avoided.

NO SUPPORT HERE.

It is stated that only eleven rural school trustees out of the six hundred attending the Ontario Educational Association favored the township school board bill.

If this figure is correct, Mr. Ferguson has a long way to go before he can feel that public opinion justifies the passing of this measure.

So far as this year's convention was concerned the delegates decided to shelve all resolutions dealing with the matter, to arrange a debate to take place some time before the next convention between advocates and opponents of the plan, and for the present to go on record as opposed to the bill.

Unfortunately, the Premier did not discuss the legislation before the trustees, and he thereby lost an opportunity to explain the township board policy to an audience composed of those who are in complete opposition to the change.

Judging by the attitude of the rural trustees, if the Premier is to delay the passing of his pet bill until rural Ontario approves of it, the present system of administering country schools is going to remain in effect for a long, long time.

The trustees from the little old red school-house districts are not showing any signs of weakening.

LEARN TO KNOW THEM BETTER.

Mayor Denne's letter endorsing the Empire Shopping Week campaign and appealing for the hearty support of Peterborough's merchants and manufacturers, will help to concentrate public attention upon this very important matter.

As His Worship points out, we are not very well acquainted with the products of our own Peterborough factories, and the Empire Shopping Week will help us to gain some knowledge of what we make at home, what is made and produced in the Dominion, and what we can buy from one or other of the countries comprising the British Empire.

Reports from different sections of Canada indicate that the Empire Shopping Week scheme is being enthusiastically embraced by manufacturers and merchants and that displays are being arranged on a scale that will bring Empire products prominently before the people during the week of April 21-28.

Peterborough is expected to fall in line with the same interest and enthusiasm as other centres are showing, and the energetic committee appointed by President James Dutton of the Peterborough Chamber of Commerce to supply leadership to the local effort can be counted upon to use every effort to make the local drive a success.

It is good business to buy goods made in Peterborough, goods made in Canada, goods made in the Empire —therefore, it is good business to encourage such buying.

WHY WE MUST SAVE THE FORESTS.

Clearing land in Canada was once an industrious habit. Eastern Canada was a forest, and the first thing to do was to clear land to grow wheat, potatoes and hay. The forest was the enemy to be routed. To-day, the people of Canada are awaking to the fact that the forest they once regarded as an enemy is Canada's second best asset, and furthermore, that it is a rapidly-disappearing asset.

White pine was once the most commonly used lumber in this country, and a generation ago it was comparatively plentiful and cheap. Not so to-day. The original stands of white pine are nearly gone. For sawmill timber we now depend chiefly on spruce and fir. Seventy per cent. of the timber in Canada of saw-mill quality stands in British Columbia! Eastern Canada, once a forest, is now buying lumber from the Pacific slope.

The accessible forests of Northern Canada to-day are chiefly valuable as sources of spruce pulp for paper-making. How long they will last, subjected to the present rate of exploitation plus the ravages of forest fire, has been calculated, and the resulting figure is not at all reassuring. In twenty-five years, unless Canada wakes up soon, her forest industries, her lumber mills and paper mills and wood-working factories, will be closed up. Because her forests will be gone.

Canadian Forest Week calls attention to this situation and to the obvious remedy. If we can prevent forest fires, the natural growth from year to year, forestry men say, will provide for the demands of axe and saw. The Canadian people as a whole must realize the great and increasing value of the forests of Canada which remain, and each individual must do his or her best to prevent forest fires. Carefulness and good management will save Canada's forest industries in perpetuity.

Hon. Charles Stewart, Minister of the Interior, views forestry work as one of his most important tasks, and not the least important part of his effort is to make the people of Canada realize that forest fires can and must be prevented.

MORE BANK FAILURES IN THE U. S.

(From The Hamilton Herald.)

Mr. Woodsworth, the Labor member of Parliament from Winnipeg, has for years been advocating the nationalization of the Canadian banking system and trying to convert Parliament to his view. He regards with apprehension the concentration of the "money power" in the hands of a comparatively few big banks. If not bank nationalization, then he would like to see introduced in Canada some such system as the American Federal Reserve Board, which exercises a general supervision over the principal banking institutions of the United States. This system, he thinks, would make for financial stability and at the same time act as a curb upon the towering and dangerous ambitions of the banking capitalists.

But Mr. Woodsworth heard some testimony taken by the Banking and Commerce Committee of Ottawa the other day which ought to have convinced him that perhaps his apprehensions are not altogether reasonable, and his desire for the grafting of American banking methods upon the Canadian system is not more reasonable. The committee heard some expert opinion and exposition offered by G. P. Harding, governor of the Federal Reserve Bank at Boston. Mr. Harding very frankly told the committee that "a Federal banking reserve system, organized on the same basis and along the same lines as the United States system, would be almost impossible in Canada." Moreover, he said it was unnecessary here. The Federal Reserve Board is useful largely because of the great number of small local banks in the United States. And yet it has not been able to prevent the bankruptcy of many of these small banks. Mr. Harding told the committee that there have been more bank failures in the United States in the last five years than in any other period in the banking history of the country, and that it has been chiefly among the small banks that the failures occurred. "You cannot legislate sense and prudence into any man," was his caustic comment.

Upon the whole, Mr. Woodsworth and his radical friends in the house received but small aid and comfort from the testimony of this able representative American banker in their plans for making over the Canadian banking system.

VETERANS FOR PEACE.

It is a hopeful sign when veterans of a great war come together to work for peace. These men know what war is, and have no illusions as to its being a romantic occupation. It is reported that representatives of fifteen million men who fought on both sides in the great war will meet in Luxembourg City and discuss means of preventing future conflicts. One of these will be to make the rising generation realize the horrors of war.

No doubt the movement will be criticized as discouraging the spirit necessary for defence. Almost every war is represented as one of defence for both sides. If the Frenchmen and Germans who are to meet in Luxembourg began wrangling over the question of the rights and wrongs of each in the late war there would be no end to the debate, and no good result. But when men who have been fighting to the death come together and seek means for keeping that curse away from the rising generation some substantial gain may be hoped for.

Wars used to be blamed on kings and on men of military ambition like Napoleon Bonaparte. Now it is said that democracies are warlike. But it is to be remembered that in Europe war is an old habit, and that the traditions of thousands of years are not easily effaced. Russia got rid of one tyranny only to be ground down under another. Italy, which so long won the sympathy of the democratic world in its struggle against Austrian oppression, is now governed so that Austrian rule looks liberal by contrast. The work of maintaining peace is most difficult in a continent where so many influences are favorable to war—traditions of violence and bloodshed among large populations occupying small territories, the possession of which is regarded as vital to existence. On the other side, as an influence for peace, is the fact that in Europe the terrible ravages of war are brought home even to non-combatants in a way that w in Canada and in the United States find it difficult to realize. We have had no such experience in Canada for more than a century, and our neighbors have been free for more than sixty years from the kind of war which means ravaged homes and fields. Southern Europe knows those conditions well, by actual experience, or by traditions handed down from generation to generation.

Continental Europe as a whole is skeptical about plans for preventing war. It is regarded as inevitable, as barbarians used to regard diseases which have now yielded to medical skill. Something striking and sensational is needed to uproot this settled opinion, and the gathering of old foes to promote peace may have the desired effect.

War memorials in Canada have been objected to as glorifying war, and justified as testifying to love and remembrance of the dead. The controversy is not very profitable, because so much depends upon the feelings which these memorials arouse. A monument erected by the congregation of St. James' Cathedral, Toronto, bears a beautiful inscription expressing hope that hatred and strife may cease. A Toronto newspaper gave prominence to a letter denouncing this Christian saying as a slur upon the dead, as if it were impossible to praise heroism without perpetuating hatred. Heroism is worthy to be glorified, hatred to be buried and consigned to oblivion.—London Advertiser.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

Empire buyers are Empire builders.

Mayor Thompson of Chicago is showing the same speed in resigning as he demonstrated in cleaning the crooks out of the Windy City.

Tommy Church, M.P., talked the Bell Telephone bill out the other night. The well-known Toronto member doesn't always get the wrong number.

The Prince of Wales has had twenty-nine falls from his horse this year, but at that he does not take the chances some of our motor car drivers do.

Jack Dempsey says that he is through. Many people thought he was after his two fights with Tunney.

Human nature is hard to understand. Some people grumbled yesterday because it didn't rain when the "probabilities" said that it would.

Just to keep the record straight, it is next week you join the League of Nations Society and the following you decide to buy Empire goods and save the forest.

CATTLE, GRAIN AND PRODUCE

TORONTO LIVESTOCK

TORONTO, April 13. — A run of 304 hogs and a small bunch of calves comprised the whole of the fresh receipts for yesterday's market. A few cattle were left over from Wednesday, but the total offering is light, and though trade is slow, the market will probably clear for over the week-end, at prices practically steady with Wednesday's decline of 25c on the best grades of butcher cattle. Trade very slow for medium and common steers and heifers.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE.

MONTREAL, Que., April 13 (Canadian Press).—The export trade in Canadian grain here yesterday was dull. There was some inquiry from the United Kingdom for Canadian Western oats, but as the prices bid were out of line with local exporters' views, no new business was done.

A firm feeling prevailed in the domestic market for cash grain and some further business was done in oats, but the volume was not large.

The undertone to the market for Spring wheat grades of flour continued firm and a moderate amount of business was done. A stronger feeling prevailed in the Winter wheat flour situation and although no actual change in prices were announced the prospects were that they would be advanced in the very near future. There was an improved demand.

Prices for all lines of millfeed were firmly maintained under a good demand from all sources. The market for standard grades of rolled oats was firm with a small trade passing.

The egg trade continued fairly active and values were unchanged. The receipts were 3,341 cases.

Little business was done in potatoes and the undertone was easy, but there was no further change in prices.

The condition of the market for imported beans was unchanged, prices being firmly maintained under a fair demand.

Owing to the steady increasing receipts of fresh made butter and the continued disappointing demand, a weaker feeling developed in the market and prices declined ½c per pound. The jobbing prices were reduced one cent per pound to 40c per pound for solid packages, and to 41c per pound for 1 lb. blocks. The receipts were 480 packages.

The cheese trade was without any new feature to note, the demand being purely of a local character. The receipts were 53 boxes.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

CHICAGO, April 13 (Canadian Press).—Storms of dust reported as prevailing from Texas to Nebraska did a good deal yesterday to send wheat upward to above $1.50 a bushel. May delivery went ⅛ cent beyond that price, and the market as a whole rose to about 8 cents over last week's bottom figures. Big speculative buying continued, based largely on chances of a short crop of domestic Winter wheat.

Closing quotations on wheat were unsettled, ⅝ to 1⅜ cents net higher, with corn ⅞ to 1⅝ cents off; oats ⅛ to ¾ cent down, and provisions unchanged to a setback of 2 cents.

Fluctuating at a rapid rate, but almost exclusively above yesterday's closing prices, the wheat market yesterday overtopped all high records, with July and Septemebr deliveries had heretofore established this season. Setbacks from advances proved to be of only a transient sort and were in general ascribed to an immense volume of profit-taking sales. Public participation in the market took the form mostly of buying of the July delivery. Hoisting of May wheat to $1.50⅞ was apparently due, however, to purchases from mills.

Complaints of crop deterioration in the West and Southwest were numerous, especially from sections of Nebraska, but including also parts of Kansas and Oklahoma as well as the Texas Panhandle. Meanwhile unofficial advices at hand from the Central States indicated that damage set forth in the Government crop report would turn out to be to a great extent irreparable. Reports from railroad sources telling of rapid progress of Spring wheat seeding Northwest were largely offset by trade summaries pointing to a moderately favorable moisture situation for Spring wheat in general.

Corn and oats lacked any adequate support from buyers. Spread traders were active at times in selling corn against purchases of wheat. Talk was current, too, that considerable corn being sold from Western markets is to come to Chicago.

Provisions reflected steadiness of hog values.

A Thought

MERRY-GO-ROUND MINDS.

Take a boy to the circus and before the big show is half over the lad will wish he was at the ball game. The child mind is never satisfied with its present situation.

Drop a man with a small mind off at Chicago and he will then want to be in Detroit or Denver.

Infant intellects crave frequent changes. Small minds cannot seem to concentrate on what is taking place.

Little minds are always expecting, but seldom realizing. Little men are always looking ahead or casting regretful eyes backward. Their minds are a merry-go-round.

The successful man settles down and develops an opportunity. The failure flits from here to there.

The small mind wastes so much time getting located. The small man acts like a lively Boston Bull pup that turns around two or three times before he lays down to rest.

The small mind with the wanderlust is as dependable as a watch without wheels. He is the will-o-the-wisp chaser—the wild goose hunter and is always wiring home for more money. If you have a steady job—stick, for in that job is your opportunity.

GOD'S MINUTE

Mine eyes shall be upon the faithful of the land.—Ps. 101:6.

Almighty God, our Heavenly Father, in Whom we live and move and have our being, we Thine unworthy children, come to Thee with humble minds and hearts to offer our prayer and thanksgiving. Pardon, we beseech Thee, the sins we have committed against Thee in thought, word and deed, and make us truly sorry for them with the godly sorrow that worketh repentance unto Salvation.

Bless us and our relations, friends and neighbors, and give us all things necessary both for soul and body. May Thy Holy Spirit guide Thy church, and all who minister therein, that Thy Kingdom may come, and all may do their duty in their vocation and ministry.

Have pity on the sick and dying and on all sinners. May Thy Holy Angels dwell within this place to preserve us in peace. Into Thy hands O God, we commend our bodies, souls and spirits. May we enjoy such refreshing sleep as will fit us on the morrow to go forth to our duties and responsibilities with vigor of mind and body. Our Heavenly Father, we thank Thee for all Thy many and great blessings and mercies to us and to all mankind.

Through Jesus Christ our Lord, Who with the Father and the Holy Ghost livest and reignest, ever one God, world without end. Amen.

"The Store That Satisfies"

WATER SYSTEM IS DESCRIBED

William Gore, M.E.I.C., Tells Engineers About Toronto Waterworks.

EXTENSIONS PLANNED.

The manufacturing plant which puts out the greatest tonnage in the country at the lowest cost was described by William Gore, M.E.I.C., to the Peterborough branch of the Engineering Institute of Canada last night. Mr. Gore was speaking of the Toronto waterworks system, for which his firm, Gore, Nasmith and Storrie, are consulting engineers. This, he said, is truly a manufacturing plant, taking in raw material and putting out a finished product at the rate of fourteen million tons a year at a cost of two and one-tenth cents a ton.

The present demand of the people of Toronto and the suburbs, who number close to two thirds of a million is seventy three million gallons a day. The present plant supplies this amount and a new plant of greater capacity is being built, with provision for a duplicate installation.

Many Fine Slides.

Mr. Gore had with him a large number of slides, showing the division of the city, the locations of the various pumphouses, new and contemplated, the main arteries of distribution, and pictures of the equipment in use. Now the water for the highest part of the city has to be pumped four times but with the new intake and pumping system only two pumpings will be needed.

The slides concluded with a series of pictures of pumps ranging from the primitive apparatus of ancient days through the engines such as Stevenson's to modern types, and a humorous set showing the disposition of a complaint regarding fish in the water. The complainant and officials were dressed in Oriental garb and the decision was that a charge should be made for two pounds of fish.

Pipes Made in Peterborough.

An item of local interest was brought up by a picture showing a huge section of pipe which rose suddenly from the surface of the lake. The pipe, 48 inches in diameter, had been made in Peterborough by a man named Law, and A. E. Caddy, present chairman of the local branch of the Engineering Institute, was the draftsman who drew the plans for the ball and socket joints which were then used for the first time in steel pipes. The pipes had been anchored to the bottom of the bay by piles, but when frazil ice blocked the intake they were speedily pumped dry and full of air. Their buoyancy was then such that they rose to the surface, crashing through the ice.

City Engineer R. H. Parsons, who is working with Mr. Gore on the plans for the digesting tanks at the Peterborough sewage disposal plant, acted as chairman and introduced the speaker. Following the address several of those present took part in the discussion, particularly with regard to electrical points raised by Mr. Gore. E. R. Shirley, B. L. Barns, V. S. Foster, W. E. Ross, H. O. Fisk and W. H. Pretty were among those who spoke. Ross L. Dobbin of the Utilities Commission moved a vote of thanks which was heartily endorsed.

PERSIAN RAM KILLED BY DOG

Owner Wants $1,000 and the Township Council is Puzzled.

NO LIMIT IN ACT.

BARRIE, April 13.—Innisfield township Council held a special session under the act respecting sheep to consider a most unusual claim, that of unstated damages for a Persian ram, which originally cost $1000, alleged to have been killed by a dog.

The claim is made by Dr. W. G. McKinney and is without precedent, locally at least. The ram is said to have been the only thoroughbred Persian in this locality and was imported from Bokhara, Western Turkestan, four years ago. One thousand dollars was paid and it is to-day said to be worth much more.

The council heard the claim of Dr McKinney and of the owner of the dog alleged to have killed the ram. The latter does not admit guilt and following a discussion the matter was referred to the township's solicitors.

While the township is liable for sheep killed by dogs within its borders it is claimed that the act was never intended to include such valuable animals as Persian lambs. The act however places no limit on the amount of compensation which may be paid under its provisions.

HIS HEATER WAS FOUND

A gentleman who drives a nice car and has it equipped with every convenience, found on Tuesday night that he had lost his heater. On Wednesday he inserted a "Lost" advertisement in The Examiner, and before his own paper was delivered to him he had a telephone call from a lady on McDonell street saying that his heater was found and could be had on calling for it.

The gentleman, while a great believer in advertising, did not have the least idea that results from a "Lost" advertisement in The Examiner would have such immediate results.

Royal Commission Makes Report on Ballot Case—Printer Also Chided.

MORE CHECKS NEEDED.

TORONTO, April 13.—The eagerly awaited report of Mr. Justice Magee and Mr. Justice Hodgins on their Royal Commission inquiry into the "wandering ballots" mystery arising out of the last Provincial election held in the Electoral District of South Ottawa was made public yesterday by Premier Ferguson, following Cabinet Council.

While the report finds no evidence or indication or crime against the Election Act or any other act, and that the result of the South Ottawa election is not affected by any facts disclosed during the inquiry, it states that Francis M. Scott, Returning Officer, was 'guilty of carelessness, irregularity, negligence and incompetence, as well as of unintentional wrongdoing"; maintains that F. W. Runge, manager and proprietor of the Modern Press at Ottawa—which printed the ballots—"must share the blame for want of care in dealing with the ballots and ballot paper," and offers a number of suggestions for the possible betterment of the system or procedure now obtaining in Provincial elections.

Amendments Suggested

Possibly the suggestion on which the greatest stress appears to have been laid is that to amend the Ontario Election Act so as to "still further secure the secrecy of the ballot." The proposed amendment would provide "that when the voter returns to the Deputy Returning Officer the ballot which he has marked, the number on the counterfoil, while still attached to the ballot, should be shown to the agents or scrutineers for comparison with the stub number before it is destroyed. And the agents or scrutineers should be shown the numbers on stub and counterfoil before the ballot is handed to the voter."

Commissioners' Findings

The Commisisoners, in their report, review at length the evidence adduced before them at the inquiry, with emphasis laid on the testimony of Returning Officer Scott.

TENNIS CLUB RULES STRICT

Discipline Committee Appointed With Power to Expel Members and Maintain Standards.

OFFICERS ELECTED.

CAMPBELLFORD, April 13.—Although keen interest is taken in the affairs of the tennis club during the playing season, less than one-quarter of the total members enrolled were present at the annual meeting held in the council chamber last night. Practically the same officers as held offices last year will hold office during the coming season. The balance sheet showed a decided improvement in the club finances over that of the previous season. The expense for equipment will not be high since all that is required is one new net and three sets of tapes. One set of tapes is considered good enough to last another season.

Something of a new form of government was inaugurated last night when a committee was appointed to manage the discipline of the club. This committee will have full authority to suspend or expell any member for breach of club rules or any other reason deemed by them to be justifiable of such an action. The names of prospective new members must be submitted and voted on by another committee. It was the opinion of President J .H. Bell that this would tend to maintain the standards of tennis. This motion was unanimously passed by the members present. Some discussion arose as to whether or not the membership should be limited. A few of the older members were in favor of the plan, but it was decided not to do so this year. The fees will remain the same as for 1927.

Walter Henson submitted plans for a small clubhouse to be built at the edge of the court. The proposed building itself will not contain much but a locker room for the ladies and one for the men. There will, however, be an eight foot verandah on at least two sides of the building, and a telephone will be installed. The cost will not be great and Mr. Henson, as head of the construction committee, was authorized to proceed with the building operations. Some of the material for the building has already been purchased, it appears.

Another matter which was definitely settled, was the payment of fees. All fees must be paid promptly. Members who have not paid their fees by the fifteenth day of May are to be forbidden the privileges of the club house and the courts. It is to be the duty of the discipline committee to so inform any such members.

What tournaments or associations the local club will enter this year could not be discussed at the present time as no definite word had been received from either of the associations to which Campbellford belonged last year.

It was intimated that the club would be represented in only one series this season. More time will be devoted to the coaching of beginners and junior players by a committee formed for the purpose, and there was a suggestion made that a professional coach be employed for a short term for the benefit of the entire membership. No definite action was taken along this line. The committee appointed to coach the younger members will also arrange the games; the members are: J. H. Bell, A. M. Rollo, S. H. Neale, Miss L. Smith, and Miss Verna Shore.

The officers for 1928, elected last night were: President, J. H. Bell; 1st and 2nd vice-presidents, H. B. Longmore and Clifford Weston; secretary-treasurer, B. H. Beatty; auditors, S. H. Neale and John Callahan. Walter Henson was appointed convenor of the construction committee with power to "conscript" members to add to his committee. The executive committee remains the same, as do the other committees with the exception of the social committee. Its members will be Dorothy Linton, Irene Davidson, Eleanor Ferris, and Evelyn Irwin. The retiring committee had but two members, Mrs. Scott and Mrs. Henson. To them was extended the sincere appreciation of the club. As in former years, the executive committee will select the teams for the various tournaments.

For some time past the courts have been under preparation for the opening of the playing season, and the club expects to make an early appearance there.

ANXIETY GROWING

and headed for New York undaunted by the fate that has befallen every previous attempt to fly the North Atlantic from East to West in an aeroplane.

The Bremen flew across Ireland at 90 miles an hour, its most effective cruising speed, and was seen to head westward toward its distant goal. The day passed without word of any ship having sighted the plane, but this caused no anxiety as it was remembered that the planes which made successful flights in the other direction last summer were seen rarely after they left land behind them.

Ideal Weather.

The weather was reported excellent over the first part of the ocean journey, but the Bremen was expected to find the elements more unfavorable on this side. St. John's, Newfoundland, reported last night that although the weather there had been perfect all day, an easterly gale with rain was forecast by the weather bureau.

There was a feeling in some quarters that the Bremen crew, although starting for New York, might very likely land in Newfoundland, content with having achieved the western passage. St. John's reported, however, that even should the pilots wish to land, they would have a most difficult time doing so at night. No landing lights are installed on the field at Harbor Grace and the field itself is broken by frost.

A close watch was to be kept at St. John's for the plane, but there was little belief that it would be sighted as it passed along toward New York.

Elaborate plans were made in New York to receive the airmen, Baron con Huenefeld, the sponsor, and passenger-handyman, Captain Hermann Koehl and Colonel James Fitzmaurice, the pilots. As the plane was not expected until noon or later today, the landing lights at Mitchell Field were not burned during the night.

The flying field was to be policed to-day by large details of soldiers and Nassau county police and delegations from New York fliers' organizations and German and Irish societies made plans for a royal welcome. Mayor Walker appointed Grover Whalen, head of the mayor's committee for the reception of the distinguished guests to receive the fliers in the name of New York City.

The official city welcome at City Hall to the Europeans was set for tomorrow, providing the airmen were not too fatigued after their journey. After they land, they are to be taken to New York under police escort and will be conducted to a hotel to rest.

Fliers On Lookout.

The Federal government took cognizance of the flight, Secretary of War Davis instructing the army corps commanders at New York, Boston and Philadelphia to prepare to offer every possible assistance and courtesy to the foreign fliers wherever they might land.

Special telegraph wires were run right to the edge of the Mitchel Field landing zone last night to carry the stories of the arrival to papers all over this country and to cable and wireless offices for transmission abroad.

Naval officers in Washington estimated that my flying at 100 miles an hour of its own speed and taking advantage of a 15 mile tail wind across the ocean and 30 mile following wind from Newfoundland to New York, the Bremen would reach New York at 2:40 a.m. to-day, but this was generally believed to be many hours before the plane could reasonably be expected to reach its landing field.

The naval officers, plotting the great circle course, reported that the distance from Dublin to St. John's, Nfld. was 2,048 miles, and that from St. John's to New York 1,133, or an approximate total of 3,200 miles from Baldonnel to Mitchell Field.

Kruschen Salts

Good Health for a Half-a-Cent a Day.

Kruschen is a perfect blend of those six natural salts which are vital to your bodily well-being. The analysis is on the bottle. There are sodium and magnesium to clear away the waste matter that clogs your system and poisons your blood. To find your tissues, there's the tanic potassium. Every drug store sells Kruschen at 75c. the bottle. A bottle contains 120 doses—enough to last for 4 months.

Round-up Continues.

TOKIO, April [illegible] (Canadian Press). —The round-up of Communist suspects is continuing here. The police raided a secret meeting last night, and seized a dozen members of the recently dissolved Labor League Council. Other arrests were made at Kyoto.

The first schooner-rigged vessel was built in 1713 at Gloucester, Mass. As she slid gracefully into the water, one of the spectators exclaimed, "See how she scoons." Her owner jumped at the idea, and replied, "A schooner let her be." In this way the name originated, and has been applied since to this type of vessel, a type distinctive of American waters.

The VOICE

If one could but listen in he would hear the speech of the market-place, the language of the law-makers, the talk of the home.

If nature's great boon to man is the gift of speech which embodies in it so much of the personality behind it, certainly that of science is the ability to transmit that voice and the accompanying personality over thousands of miles of space.

The four corners of the earth are searched for the materials which contribute to the making of the telephone on one's desk in the office and on one's table at home. Cotton, copper, gold, silk, antimony, lead, rubber and other fibres and minerals are hidden within the modest dress of this indispensable little instrument upon which so many of our skilled workmen are continually employed.

One of the best uses to which electric power in Canada is put is in the daily operation of the more than a million telephone sets, with their accompanying wires and cables, switchboards, and all the rest of the paraphernalia which go to make up Canada's great telephone systems.

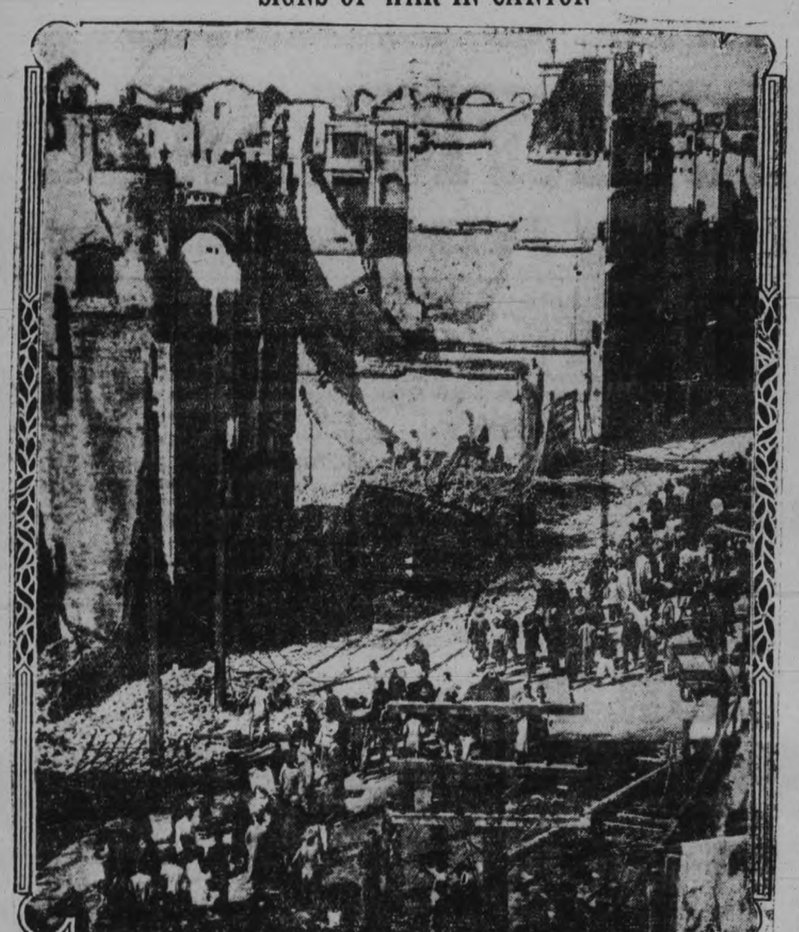
DUCHESS PRESENTS SHAMROCKS TO GUARDS

The Duchess of York presented shamrocks to the First Battalion of the Irish Guards at Chelsea barracks on St. Patrick's day. These pictures show the Duchess of York inspecting the Guards before the presentation and the enthusiastic reception which followed the cermony.

SIGNS OF WAR IN CANTON



Not much was heard in Canada of the disturbances which took place in Canton early this year but that it was no comic opera war may be judged from the picture, which shows how the centre of the city looked after communists had looted and dynamited some of the principal buildings. Russian reds were blamed for inciting the disturbances. After the communists had been driven out of the city by General Li Kai-sum, leading the nationalist army, it was found that many of the victims left by the fleeing reds were Russian women wearing Chinese uniforms. These pictures, the first to reach this country, were taken by Calvin E. Horsman, an Americain business man, who had to dodge flying bullets and step over scores of corpses in making his way to the depot en route to Shanghai. He has returned safely to America.

No. 2 is Irma Wright, Canadian champion, who successfully defended her title with 111 words a minute. No. 3 is Elsie Keniston of Brockville, first in the intermediate class.

'ARTIST' PAINTS WEIRD PORTRAITS

Pleading guilty to three charges of having obtained goods from Toronto merchants by cheques for which there were no funds, Miss Theodora Alvarez who announced herself as a celebrated artist from Madrid, Spain, and lived at a fashionable Toronto apartment hotel for some weeks as a celebrity was held for sentence while police attempt to learn more about her from the people for whom she began to paint weird pictures now in the possession of police headquarters. Described as more primitive than the primitive, mere daubs of color, the two samples above are supposed to represent on the right a noted military man of Toronto in his highland uniform. A green daub is said to stand for his kilts and two brown splashes are his coat and hat. The other on the left, that any child might have painted, is said to represent the child of a well-known Toronto society woman, by this painter who claimed to have come from Madrid, the home of Velasquez and Goya.

WILL RACE PRINCE

One of the most interesting weddings of the season will take place in Toronto April 21, when Miss Joyce Pett will become bride of Captain Norman Reilly Raine of the Queen's Rangers, well-known writer of adventure and sea stories. Officers of the groom's regiment will form a guard of honor. Their honeymoon is to be spent on a motor tour of France and North Africa. The groom, who appears above with the bride, will seek material for new stories. It is one of the ships like that shown above on which they will sail on their honey-moon.

A Real Party

Reprinted, with Permission, from Kiwanis Magazine.

New Year's Day—a man in a dress suit pretending to be tight, carrying his own lamp post in the parade—little brown-eyed laughing Bobby with his crippled legs in braces on which he wobbles like the man who pretends to be inebriated—a big basket of wonderful apples and sixty crippled kid's faces buried in them—another man in the parade as a ballet girl with dress cut to the waist-line, his back the color of liver from the zero weather—Olga playing a harmonica so sweetly that tears come—little George whose harmonica solo had to be postponed till he got his "seconds" on the ice-cream course—

But that is no way to tell a story. It is many, many days since New Year's. Its random recollections of the day crowded confusedly above, still bring a lump in my throat and a tear slithers along the smile which wrinkles the corners of my eye as I remember.

It is just one of the thousands of incidents with which the annual book of "Kiwanis Activities" is filled. On New Year's Day I was invited to a city which is too good to require Kiwanis publicity. I went to see a New Year's Day Mummers' Parade. Outside the weather was at zero. Inside of the finest parlor in the best hotel were gathered the children from the crippled children's hospital. To this warm room sixty of them had been brought in warm cars, to see the big parade.

They were sadly neglected, however! The fifteen or twenty members of the committee and their ladies did not treat them right. They passed around the big basket of apples only three or four times! When a boy put an apple in his pocket they went back to him and asked him to have an apple. If he put that in his pocket, also, they went back again and asked him to have an apple. They did not ask him to have another apple.

A song leader was responded to by the children's cheer leader. Wonderful music by splendid entertainers made the youngsters join in all choruses. This was some more of the neglect, but the biggest neglect was at the wonderful luncheon served afterwards.

The committee neglected to tell the waiters that there were to be no "seconds" on the good things served to the kids. The result was that every kid had "seconds" on everything. "Seconds" on paper caps, "seconds" on whistles and noise makers, "seconds" on French pastries, "seconds" on chicken a la king, "seconds" and even "thirds" on ice-cream!

The matron in charge told me in confidence that she had brought sixty orthopedic cases but was taking home sixty cases of stomach trouble!

Last year at a similar party the Kiwanis club gave these children mouth organs; harmonicas, I believe, is the better name. This year they put on a harmonica musical which was little short of wonderful. Olga and George, soloists, a double quartet chorus, and enough duets and quartets to make up a recital.

Some harmonicas had gone the way of all flesh during the year, so new ones were distributed by those neglectful Kiwanians. These were distributed with bad judgment, however. As one of the youngsters explained just before a chorus, there were too many "G's-es" and not enough "C's-es" so more "C's-es" were passed out. History records no "G's-es" passed back, so there were "seconds" on harmonicas also!

"The heart is like an instrument whose strings
Steal nobler music from Life's many frets:
The golden threads are spun through suffering's fire,
Wherewith the marriage-robes for heaven are woven:
And all the rarest hues of human life
Take radiance and are rainbowed out in tears."

If that Kiwanis club in its dozen years of existence had done only this one thing, it would have justified its entire existence. No man who has seen this or any similar Kiwanis party but thanks his Maker for the existence of an organization which makes such things possible.

No man, seeing those laughing, happy kids undergoing the slow, painful adjustment of twisted bodies into strong husky young manhood and womanhood can fail to laugh in the faces of the princes of pessimism. It is not a hard and selfish world. It is not a money grabbing, mercenery world! It is a world full of kind hearts, of joyous sympathy for the under-privileged child and for the unfortunate!

If those men be Babbitts, then may God in his smiling kindness increase the Babbitt family on this earth. If this party or this story be mawkish sentiment, then let's have a lot more mawks! I never saw a "mawk" but by golly, I want to be one and wear my brand on my chest.

From the Colorado River and the Gulf of Mexico to the Arctic Circle such parties are going on every day. With a happy grin, without creed or tract passing, without doctrine or denominationalism, business and professional men take the opportunity which Kiwanis offers to have a good time by giving less fortunate people a better one.

Were it possible to be in love and at the same time analytical any lover would know there is one thing more wonderful and thrilling than to be loved; the joy of loving some one. Add to that joy the happiness of being allowed to love those who have not had their share of loving, and you get the thrill of the under-privileged child work of Kiwanis.

The happiest club, the most successful club, the club with the lowest membership turnover, is the busiest club in this kind of work. And what makes it all the more wonderful is the fact that these are the clubs which are having the most fun.

"Inasmuch as ye have done it unto the least of these, my brethren, ye have done it unto me."

THE THREAT OF WAR IN EUROPE.

(Spectator.)

It was supposed by many reasonable and sensible people that after the experience of the Great War, humanity in Europe would not want any more of it, at any rate, for a very long time. Upon that supposition the League of Nations, to prevent war, was founded.

But the rivalry of different racial interests and national competitions has been greater since the war than before it. Before the war all nations were prosperous and doing business. There were no great mutual hatreds and everybody was keen on making the mighty dollar. The war spirit flamed up, however, and we know the consequences. The idea developed that if prostrate Europe was caught in time and before it recovered it would be glad to agree to eternal peace. No doubt the object might have been reached if all the big nations had agreed to smother the little ones, but they would not do so. Even some of those who did agree made "private pacts" amongst themselves which would wreck any League of Nations or other hope of continued peace.

First of all Italy and France began Mussolini seemed to be spreading herself too much in the region of the Balkans. But France got a slice of it and subsided. Then Austria, or what is left of it, protested against the encroachments of Italy, and Italy has replied in loud and threatening language. We may look for trouble here because peacemongers may say what they like, but a balance of power amongst the powers of Europe will alone calm the fears of those powers which dread the expansion of other powers as likely to put them in a superior and controlling position.

Now the break-up of the ancient Roman Empire left Italy a lot of separate and independent states which were never brought together into a united Italy till the year 1870. Since then the first great forward step of the old Roman Empire, as it appears revived in modern Italy, has been taken under Mussolini. There is not room for Italians in Italy. He proposes to expand and extend Italy and make her a great modern Power. Before 1870 Austria was mistress of many of the Italian states. After many desperate wars Italy threw Austria out and feels that she has nothing to thank her for. The Great War gave Italy indeed a piece of Austria. The Austrians now complain that Italy is treating these Austrians badly. In fact, the Austrian Chancellor has "demanded" better treatment. Mussolini replies savagely and threatens—war. Here is his excuse for seizing more territory. If he can only grab another large slice of Austria, Italy's dream of greatness will come true. Italy, under Mussolini, will be again one of the greatest Powers in the world.

A few months, perhaps a few weeks, will tell the tale. Is it to be peace or a new war, with perhaps all Europe into it again? Readers and observers continually ask, "What is the trouble? What on earth do they want another war for.

The answer is first of all put as we said: Italy is losing her surplus population, which is going to the Argentine and the U.S.A. She sees a way of keeping them at home and of making herself perhaps the greatest of European nations now that Germany is out of it and France has had enough. If Italy acquires the Adriatic coast far into the Austrian Tyrol and the Balkan States, she will be mistress of the Mediterranean and able to feed and maintain herself. It is the necessity of doing this to save herself that is moving her to it just as Britain wants her surplus people to go to the Dominions. There is no doubt that now is the time for Italy to buck up and be somebody once more as Rome in her ancient glory used to be. She will never have so good a chance, and Mussolini realizes it. The rest of Europe cannot stop her because it is already bled white. Is it to be a revival of the Roman Empire? An analysis of history shows that it is not the lust of war, but the virtual necessity for it, which is the cause of it. The pressure of population, the need of coal and iron, the need of greater wheat areas for greater population all drives nations to war, and it is the chief and in the end the determining cause.

How to Play BRIDGE

Series 1927-28 by
Wynne Ferguson
Author of "PRACTICAL AUCTION BRIDGE"

Copyright 1927, by Hoyle, Jr.

ARTICLE No. 19

There is one point about the bidding that frequently puzzles even the most experienced bridge players. Partner has bid a suit and the opponents have overbid. With what type of hand should a player raise his partner's bid?

One of the first points to notice is that no player has a justifiable raise for his partner's suit bid unless he has at least three small trumps or two to an honor. Lacking such holdings in the trump suit, a player should deny, not assist his partner's bid. Provided, however, that the player does hold at least three small trumps, he may assist his partner's bid if he holds any of the following supporting values: First, aces, kings and queens of the other suits; second, ability to trump some short or missing suit; third, the fact that the supporting hand holds four or more cards of a partner's suit, or three to an honor. Please note that the values of the high cards in support of partner's best bid are very nearly double their sure trick or defensive values.

"Ability to trump some short or missing suit" is usually valued as follows:

A doubleton is worth	½	trick with 3 trumps and 1 trick with 4 trumps
A singleton " "	1	" " " " 2 " " " "
A blank suit " "	2	" " " " 3 " " " "

"The fact that the supporting hand holds four or more cards of partner's suit or three to an honor," is usually valued as follows:

Three small trumps	0	trick
The ace or king	1	"
The queen	½	"
Four small trumps	1	"
Four trumps headed by an honor	1	" plus honor value
Five small trumps	1½	"
Five trumps headed by an honor	2	"

Two values must be placed on all high cards: First, their value in defense of opponents' bids. This is their sure trick value. Second, their value in support of partner's best bid. The latter valuation is much higher than their sure trick valuation because the chance that they may be trumped is less, and the chances of setting up a suit is much stronger. Their value as cards of reentry is also considerable. These additional values are practically double their sure trick value.

When a player makes a suit bid of one, he figures that his partner holds the possibility of at least three tricks in support of that bid. As a bid of one heart, for example, is a contract to take, in the two combined hands, seven out of the thirteen tricks, a player should hold in his own hand the possibility of taking at least four tricks with hearts as trumps. These four tricks added to the three expected to show up in the partner's hand compose the seven tricks contracted for when a player bids one heart. Since a bid of one in the suit included at least three expected tricks in his partner's hand, to raise once, partner must hold the probability of 4 tricks; to raise twice, partner must hold the probability of 5 tricks; to raise three times, partner must hold the probability of 6 tricks.

Study over this analysis very carefully, and if you thoroughly understand it you cannot help but find it much easier and simpler to decide the question as to when and how often you should raise your partner's suit bid.

Here is a neat little problem from one of our correspondents in Connecticut. Study the bidding carefully before you decide what to do. There are certain very definite principles of bidding connected with it that make it a most interesting problem.

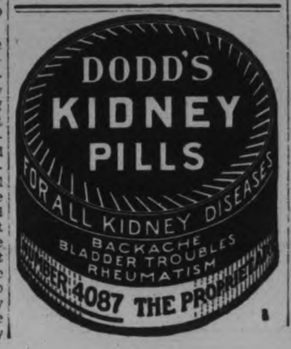
Clubs — Q, J, 7, 6, 4
Diamonds — 7
Spades — Q, 10, 8, 5, 4, 2

No score, rubber game. Z dealt and passed. A passed, Y bid one diamond and B bid one no-trump. Z bid two spades, A passed, Y bid three diamonds and B doubled. Z now bid three spades (a very bad bid by the way). A passed, Y bid four hearts and B doubled. What should Z do now? An analysis of this interesting hand will be given in the next article.



MAN IS ARRESTED FOR MANY CRIMES

OTTAWA, April 13 (Canadian Press).—The police forces of Hull and Ottawa have been working in conjunction with each other in an effort to run down a man who during the past month has assaulted five young girls in the two cities. The investigation became known yesterday with the arrest by the Hull authorities of Arthur Jarry of Ottawa. Jarry was held on a charge of stealing a motor rug. He pleaded not guilty in court yesterday and was remanded without bail for one week. During the interim until he appears in court again the police will have the prisoner appear before the young girls assaulted, all ranging in age between 5 and 10 years.

When Jarry was taken into custody on Wednesday night he was lined up with a number of other prisoners in the Hull Jail and a 6-year-old girl of that city brutally assaulted last week was brought before the prisoners. The child failed to pick her assailant from the group, but, according to her father, she declared on her return home that she had recognized one of the men as the individual who assaulted her. She said she had been afraid to point him out to the police because the man had said he would 'throw her in the river" if she "squealed."

According to the police, Jarry has been identified as a former resident of Hull, who, under the name of Bligner, four years ago served a term in St. Vincent de Paul Penitentiary and the lash for a criminal assault on a 6-year-old girl.

JACK MINER AND THE BIRDS

AND SOME THINGS ABOUT NATURE

Well, they had no sooner completed their house and started setting on five eggs, than along came their deadly enemy, the English sparrow, and destroyed the nest. Then I went up in the air pretty high and came down with a .22 rifle in my hand, and pointed a whole lot of my attention at this particular variety of sparrow. And I had the pleasure of seeing those swallows rebuild and successfully raise their second brood, which is four. Before they migrated, they got quite tame and by times they apparently came closer to us than necessary.

The next spring two pairs came back, one pair occupying the old nest, but the others built about fifty feet closer to us. I watched the sparrows closer than ever, and it seemed that the swallows called to us as much as to say "Help Help!" whenever their enemies put in their appearance, and I always tried to be on hand like a sore thumb. That summer each pair raised two broods, making a total of eighteen young. Now we had just what we had been looking for, and these birds apparently thought the same, for every man in the factory had learned to love them and know their call when a sparrow arrived. This, too, may sound a little fishy, but I will go you one better: I know you could blindfold me and I could tell you if there was a swallow's enemy approaching them. If they looked to us to help them why surely they knew we were their friends.

The third spring they came back in goodly numbers and built five nests, and the fifth year there were no less than twenty nests in the shed. But the beauty of it all is, they simply discarded the south end, and fifteen of the nests are within twenty feet of the busiest spot on the premises where the men are all working and the steam is sometimes blowing. This proves without a doubt that these little, innocent, valuable birds came to us for protection.

I have seen three alight on the cart-horse's back, at once. I have also seen the clay digger put his hand upon the nest, and the old mother bird would simply look over the side as much as to say, "Do you like me?" But let a stranger go in the clay shed, and you will hear their sweet, alarmed voices ring out by the dozens.

Another very interesting sight is when the parent of, say nest number one, darts in at the window, fifty feet away from the nest, the hungry mouths in that nest will go up, proving that each nest of fledglings know their parents as soon as they see them at that distance.

Another great satisfaction to me is that there are now swallows' nests in about every horse-barn of this neighborhood. The great question is: What good are they? We have made a careful study of this point. I have time and again put a sheet of paper under the nest, and when these five fledglings are at their best for consuming flies there is about one-half cupful of droppings thrown overboard every twenty-four hours. I have seen our cow and cart-horse and our self-starter all three lying down in the shade of the shed, and comfortable as could be because here were a dozen swallows dipping up and down after every fly that appeared.

Now scientists tell us that these typhoid flies will carry germs. Such being the fact, when this bird catches and devours the fly that is on its way to your house with that dreaded disease, then it has prolonged your days "That it may be well with thee, and that thou mayest prolong thy days."

There are six different varieties of swallows that visit this part of Canada. The purple martin is by far the largest, and his warbling voice should be heard around every country home in the greater portion of America, because he is so easily attracted. Thirty-five years ago there were a few in this country; they usually built their nests in old, deserted woodpeckers' holes. I knew a chestnut stub that afforded several pairs a home for the summer. But the first martin house I ever saw was on Mr. Jasperson's building in the town of Kingsville. Then a Mr. Elliott, who kept a summer hotel near the lake, built houses and had good success. This gave me the martin fever very bad, so I hooked up the self-starter and drove to the lake and saw Mr. Elliott. The dear old gentleman's voice trembled as he said, "Jack, I had twenty-five or thirty pairs around my houses, but the boys thought it fun to shoot them. They would go up the lake shore for nothing else, only to hunt my pets; and now I only have three birds left. I am going to pull the houses down because I would rather not have them come than see them shot."

The question was, how could I get them coming to my place? I am three miles from the lake and seldom ever see a purple martin out here. Finally I saw an advertisement in the little journal known as "Our Dumb Animals," published in Massachusetts: "J. Warren Jacobs, Waynesburg, Pennsylvania, manufacturer of martin houses, shipped three carloads last week." Just then I caught myself thinking that these birds would know his houses wherever they saw them. I at once sent an order for a twenty-roomed dwelling, but when the house arrived the wild geese were continually sitting where I wanted to erect it, so to avoid frightening them I waited till they left for the breeding grounds, still farther north. On the evening of May the 2nd, 1913, I had all the boys in the neighborhood come and we raised the house on a pole sixteen feet high. The questions I was asked that evening would surely have puzzled a Philadelphia lawyer, as to "How soon would the martins come?" and so on.

The next morning before I had my working harness sufficiently buttoned to avoid an embarrassing accident I took a peep out of the window to see what the bird house looked like in daylight, and really my breath was almost taken from me, for here was a pair of martins hovering around the house, and when the school boys went by, they shouted, "Uncle Jack," and as they shook their little dinner pails and laughed heartily, they said, "there are two blackbirds around your martin house."

In less than a month there were thirteen rooms occupied. This, of course, taught all of us children, old and young, what a purple martin was. In August I counted sixty three hovering around the house at one time.

Now I have built two of what I call "martin castles," but it took me three years to induce the birds to come to them. To-day they have almost discarded the frame house, and are in the "castles:" the fact that the "castles" are warmer in the spring and cooler in the summer, possibly accounts for this. But the brick house is altogether too expensive.

CHAPTER XIV
Wild Duck Hunting.

The following, I know, will sound strange to most readers. But the fact is, duck-hunting is the one sport above all others for me.

Yes, it is true I have hunted the swift, ruffed grouse, which is sometimes called partridge, and as this beautiful bird darted through the undergrowth I have downed eleven of them without a miss.

In northern Ontario I have time and again got the wind in my face and slipped up and peeped over a hill at a doe and fawn that were quietly feeding there. I have stood with the crisp breeze cutting my eyes, watching Nature in all her beauty, and presently a big fellow steps out from some concealed spot, nibbles a little browse, or perhaps walks up to a sapling and rubs his antlers. There he is, perfectly unconscious of the fact that a deadly enemy is unfolding his arms from around a clean rifle; and in the midst of life he is in death.

The lordly moose is another of our Canadian beauties (I said "beauties" when I believe I should have said "homelies") and more than once have I had an ordinary carload of these noble animals at the mercy of my rifle. There they have stood, watching their leader die, apparently unconscious of what had taken place.

I have crawled, head-first, down into an old, deserted bear den, and to my astonishment and surprise almost rubbed noses with Mr. Bruin. Needless to say I didn't require telling to back out. This was in the winter, of course, when the bears were hibernating.

On another occasion, one still, frosty morning, I stood at the top of a hill and answered the howl of a timber wolf, and to my delight he replied. Then with my mouth close to the ground I again imitated that lonesome, blood-curdling sound; and in about one minute he answered back. Then in a few seconds I very carefully let out another call, and while I was examining and cocking my rifle he again answered. Now I was sure he was coming my way. There I stood, waiting, for over five minutes, with the crispy air in my favor, every nerve keyed up with anxiety. Just as I was about to turn my face to call again, I saw this monstrous, shaggy wolf break from the green cover out into a beaver-marsh about one hundred and fifty yards away, and as I pressed the rifle firmly to my shoulder a low whistle from my lips brought him to a stand, and I had the great satisfaction of seeing him give one tremendous leap in the air as that two-hundred-grain bullet blew his heart into fragments. I mention this incident because our timber wolf, the great red-deer destroyer, may be poisoned or trapped, yet, owing to his keen smelling powers, hearing, and sneaking ability, very few sportsmen—yes, very few of even the most experienced trappers—have ever had the satisfaction of stinging him with a bullet.

Yet in spite of all these experiences, which are the height of thousands of sportsmen's ambitions, I can recall no line of hunting that afforded me more real pleasure than duck-shooting over a flock of home-made decoys. And before I attempt to tell you some things that the wild ducks have taught me I want to give you a glimpse of a real duck-hunt my brother Ted and I had, way back in boyhood, muzzle-loading days, when a dollar bill would blanket a horse.

Somehow or other we had gotten our duck-boat up at a place on the north shore of Lake Erie called Cedar Creek, a distance of about five miles south-west of our home. I had whittled in nearly every night of the winter, making a flock of decoys, and brother Ted did the painting. This particular spring we were splitting rails to finish fencing in one hundred acres of bush; so one Monday morning about the first of April, father gave us a stint, to put up so much fence for the week, and at it we went. At half-past five Friday evening we had our week's work finished, ready for a duck-hunt on Saturday.

After supper we got everything ready for an early start, and as we shook the powder in the flasks and sized up the amount of shot we had in our leather pouches, the anticipation of the next day worked on us until one said, "Let's go up there to-night. We can build a fire in the cedars and sleep under the boat." Enough said; here we go! Dear mother scoffed at the idea, but she seemed powerless. "Well," she said, "if you are bound to go, I will put you up a basket of food." "No, no; we are not going to carry a basket of grub all the way up there. Just give us a small lunch to put in our pockets for breakfast."

Well, just about sunset found each of us with six wooden decoys, some in our hunting-coat pockets, others strung around our necks, and with each a pair of those old-fashioned cow-hide boots on. We started by hand over those soft, sticky, newly-built clay roads, a great percentage of it running through the unfenced forest; and by the time we got there I can assure you those twelve decoys were heavier than they were when we started. It was a beautiful night; the moon which was only a few days old, lay on its back in the south-west, those two little, sharp, bright horns almost outlining the picture of a full moon. To think of it, even now, calls to my memory a sweet little song my older sister sang to me when I was but a lad:

"Oh, Mama, how pretty the moon is to-night;
'Twas never so lovely before,
With its two little horns, so sharp and so bright—
I hope they don't grow any more!
If I were up there with you and my friends
We'd rock in it nicely, you see;
We'd sit in the middle and hang on to both ends,
And what a nice cradle 'twould be!

We'd call to the stars to get out of our way
Or else we would rock on their toes,
And there we would sit till the dawn of the day
And see where the pretty moon goes.
Oh, there we would rock, in the beautiful skies,
And through the bright clouds we would roam;
We'd see the sunset, and see the sun rise,
And on the next rainbow come home."

Soon we made our way into the cedars and found our boat just as we had left it. Then we carried the decoys back to the lake shore again, and as we put them down on the sand, Ted suggested we carry old driftwood and build our "blind" ready for the morning's sport. Even with this we weren't satisfied, but we also waded out in the shallow water, threw out our decoys, and had the pleasure of seeing the sinking moon glitter over the rippling waves of beautiful Lake Erie on to the sides of our newly-painted decoys. Then we started back into the cedars.

In those days there were about twenty acres of this red-cedar jungle and in some places one could not see a man over twenty-five feet away. The camping place we selected was about twenty feet in diameter, partly surrounded on three sides with a bank of sand fully six feet high, heavily capped with cedars. Here we gathered dry twigs and built a fire. Then we dragged the boat over and turned it on its side, thus filling the gap and making almost a complete circle around our fire. After gathering armful after armful of wood for our night's fuel and cutting lots of cedar boughs for our bed, we sat down to rest. The sand was dry, and as the night was still, a very little fire kept us quite comfortable. Then we pulled off our cowhide boots and set them back on the opposite side of our fire. They made great reflectors, mine especially; for although I was only sixteen years old, most of my growth had gone into foundation.

Ted allowed his boots were French kip; I said mine were cowhide. This caused brother to pick at his sprouting moustache as he remarked, "Jack, to look at them from here, one would think they were cows' fathers' hides."

As I got up and dropped another stick or two on our fire, Ted spoke up quite cheerfully, "Jack, let me tell you just what this made me think of. You know the other night when I was down at that country dance, I ran across one of the sweetest French dolls it has ever been my pleasure to mee. She was a real little bird of life, and the more I danced with her the more I wanted to, and really I began to think I held a hand bigger than a foot. Finally as we were standing on the corner, awaiting our turn to swing, she nudged me and as I leaned over she whispered in my ear, 'Mr. Miner, don't you think if you were to trade your cowhide boots off for a pair of light shoes it would be easier on this man's white ash floor?'"

About the next suggestion was to eat our lunch so as not to be bothered with it in the morning. This piece of work was eagerly accomplished, only the programme was altogether too short at the one end, as I could almost feel the pieces of dead hog and hunks of bread strike the log I was sitting on. However we were compelled to be satisfied.

As we sat there watching the sparks disappear into the darkness we could hear the lonely hoot of the owl in the distance; and the swish-sh, swish-sh-sh, of the small waves on the lake a few rods to the south of us; and from the slew to the north came the faint creak-k, creak-k-k-k, of the little spring frogs, as much as to say, "Go to sleep. Go to sleep." All at once Ted's voice rang out, "Wake up, Jack!" and really our surroundings were so completely covered in with Nature she had closed my eyes and I did not know it. Shortly the wind started moaning through the cedars, and we imagined we could feel a change in the atmosphere, and brother suggested we crawl in under our boat and have a sleep. So we straightened the soft cedar boughs around as best we could on the dry sand, crawled in, letting the boat down over us. We wrapped ourselves around each other very closely. The next I knew I was lying on my side with brother's warm arms around me, but my eyes were open and I imagined I could see light under the boat; so I raised it up. Ted spoke first, "Jack, look at the snow!" And really the sight almost caused one to doubt his own eyes, for everything was hanging with snow; the only bare spot was the small pile of smouldering ashes; those cowhide boots were simply snowed full. To make bad matters worse the wind was in the north and it was still snowing.

Well, we knocked it out of our boots the best we could and put them on. While I was fixing and blowing smoke in my eyes out of the fire, trying to get it started, Ted knocked the snow off his gun and went to see if the decoys were all right, and before I got the blaze going I heard "Bang!" I only thought he was trying to dry his gun out, but presently I heard "Bang!" again. Then I knocked the snow off my shooting outfit and made fresh tracks toward him. I found him quite excited. "Jack, hurry! The ducks are coming by the thousands!" There were about fifty or more in the decoys when I came. "Look! Here they come again! Get in the 'blind' and keep your red head down!" and he continued pricking dry powder in the tube of his gun with a pin. As about twenty-five ducks hovered to alight we rose up and lit into them. That is, he did, and down came three; but my old gun just went "Snap! Snap!"

Ted sprang to his feet and said, "Prick some dry powder in the tubes of your gun while I go and get the boat," and just as I was in the middle of this operation brother shouted from the edge of the cedars, "Jack, get ready; here they come again." So I slipped a cap on each tube, but none too quickly, for the ducks were upon me. "Snap! Bang!" and down came a big red-headed drake. Brother fairly ran with the boat on his shoulders, a paddle in one hand; and then the real fun began, for it wasn't a case of looking for ducks, but how fast could we load those old soft-coal burners and get the fuse started. Although some of the decoys were half covered with snow, yet the ducks would alight right among them while we were standing up loading our guns; really the snowy air seemed full of them, and we had the pleasure of seeing five tumble out of one flock.

Soon our empty powder horns compelled us to stop shooting; but this did not stop the sport by any means, for there we lay low in our "blind" and watched and studied these migrating birds, as flock after flock settled down among our decoys, until I firmly believe there were over two hundred blue-bills, canvas-backs, red-heads, golden-eyes, ruddies and so forth, within gunshot of our hiding place.

But like lots of other good times, it had to come to a close and about eight o'clock the storm ceased, it cleared off and the ducks got wise and scarce.

"THE MESSAGE OF THE CARILLON"

By Mackenzie King
Prime Minister of Canada

(Reviewed by a Conservative).

"Carillon" is a French word for waterfall and is applied to the music of a peel of bells floating away upon the air like spray from, in this instance, the Chaudiere Falls near by. There will be some who will object to this word because it is not English, notwithstanding the fact that we open all our courts of law with the French words "Oyez! Oyez!" (Hear ye! Her ye!) notwithstanding the fact that the British flag itself has for its motto "Dieu est mon droit". And no parliament or court of justice can proceed without it and notwithstanding still another fact viz: that the King when called to Parliament to put the final seal of authority upon legislation uses the very old French word: "Le roi le veult" (The King wills it). To eradicate French would be to tear up the British constitution.

"What" someone will ask, "has this got to do with Mr. King's book?" It has this to do with it. His book is a "message of goodwill" and the best way to justify his work before men is to rub their noses into their own inconsistencies and absurdities. To see them and be forced to laugh at them is sure to make us more tolerant of other people. Of course I do not refere to people who "agitate" from motives of self-interest. Let us, Mr. King says in his heart, try smiling and politeness for a while.

Our friends across the border have brought about from time the most marvellous improvements in manners and customs by simply putting up such notices as "It is better to smile than to make a nasty face—and easier. Try it." "Say thank you. It means a lot." Also "Please keep off the grass" instead of the brusque "Keep off the grass." Of course many of our people think this is all "bunk" but the Americans know better. That is where they are our masters. Nearly all our more recent pleasant customs come from America. Like the children who "cleaned up" the garden by uprooting all the flowers we will learn better in time. In fact it is coming rapidly. There is a famous old English motto which reads "Manners maketh men" and we are being taught that fact all over again at this late date—notwithstanding our "marvellous" system of education which seems to teach before all things that pupils can be taught by machinery and turned out as sausages are. The truth is our pupils do not learn anything worth while until they have left our primary schools far behind them and do their own learning. Our people are a good deal like the man who was told to hire a band for a festive occasion. He considered that anything would do so long as it had the name of "band." The results are the same. And the new energy of the dominating sex that is now taking up the reins of power may, when it bashes its way into the pulpit as it did into the franchise, improve things.

Mr. King's description of the British constitution is one of the best in the book: "It is a strange mystical sort of thing this British constitution that we love..... It represents the highest achievement of British genius at its best." (page 200).

The great scientist, Sir Oliver Lodge, says that investigation has shown that man has come from some great "reservoir of life" and as he has developed and grown he has become an "individual", a moral and physical individual, a spiritually-minded intellectual (not in the mass that each is himself) being the highest achievement of nature and of God. Yet there are those who would suppress the individual as such and rob him of his genius and his labor of his freedom and his reward, squash him into the indistinguishable mass (or mess) and service of humanity at large and put the race back where it was ten millions of years ago. Why?

There will always be a tendency on the part of some of those who because they are hired to talk from a platform or stand, too good in time to think it is their right to hold people in bondage to their designs. They do this first by suashing all others under their feet. Then they make a religion for them and a system of ethics also, and having accomplished their mental slavery they allow them to contribute to their masters' upkeep. It is these people who are to blame for the friction that arises between the different elements of a nation. Thy are called "modernists". God is the God of all yet these men try to make Him their servant and having put their own Bible or word into His mouth they are then prepared to let the people march away singing:

"These men are our salvation
They preach from noon till night
They know far more than we do
They'll drive us to the right."

It is this sort of spirit of domination that is the cause against which the "Carillon" is a word in season. It appeals to the kindness of heart that is in all true children of men.

"To Canada from a grateful France." Think of it, he says; think of a nation that was reft of Canada thanking her conquerors. This is goodwill indeed. It is only possible in the highest grade of humanity. The groucher who delights in growling will doubtless still remain and like the watch-dog that bays at the moon and barks away the night at cats, he serves a purpose but our future ought to contain something higher than that, a breed of "real men and real women" who are fit to make a "gentleman's agreement" and to live by it.

Sport is the only thing we really know that demands and insists upon getting the real honest all-wool article, because people won't continue long to pay their good money for bad wares! Must patrotism, love of county, religion, indeed love itself and all that it means be founded on "money" or it will fail? In other words, is the common man a hopeless brute? It is said that they who have once tasted of the lotus pass into an eternal dreamland of peace and goodwill. Let us also forget.

Distrust is best banished by a "showdown." It is the silent, slick, sly, incapable man who does the damage. "Show me", says the man from Missouri and we wake up with the light from our sad dreams. And that is one of the lessons of this book. Let us be frank and more candid in our coming forward with one another. Let those who fatten on ill-will be banished too. Humanity is at bottom one and the life is a hard one hence sympathy is a plentiful virtue with us. Let us give it a chance and give up trying to boss. And let us remember that other people may not think as we do and yet have some sense and a right so to do. How childish we are! We prate of liberty and would strangle it in its cradle. Let us therefore make allowances. We are really not perfect. Only the self-selected are fit to govern some think or as Miss Agnes McPhail, M.P., would say: "It is not necessary to be married to have children for lecture purposes." Let us be reasonable and cut out some of this desire to boss everybody. Neither nations nor individuals who insist on waving the big stick ever succeed in it. They are a nuisance and a menace, not a model. Let them listen to this message of the carillon. It will improve them vastly and add to the happiness of the rest. The book is a plea for greater tolerance and great faith in the good intentions of others. If we really believe in God then let us show our faith in Him too. Let us realize that He, not we, made the world. Mr. King does not analyse conditions however. He is content to sow the good seed and leaves it to us to do the weeding.

SPEED ATTEMPT FAILS.

DAYTON BEACH, April 13.—(Canadian Press).—Ray Keech, veteran racing driver, yesterday made an unsuccessful attempt to break the world's automobile speed record, his two runs on beach at the 155 and 144 miles an hour falling short of the present mark.

The Czechoslovakian Government has set up a special department of its mint, where skilled jewelers are employed to examine all pearls offered for sale in that country. The innovation is said to be aimed particularly against the sale of the so-called "cultured" pearls from Japan, which of late years have been developed until only an expert can detect them from the real.

Accidental Verdict Gauld Shooting Case

time took aim but the smoke was bothering his eyes and he asked John to take the cigarette out of his mouth He lowered the gun from his shoulder and as he turned to let John take the cigarette, the gun went off, the bullet going through John in the abdomen.

The boy shouted "I am shot and swore out kind of at Morocco for shooting him. His brother said they did not believe he was shot but when they opened his clothing they saw that he was bleeding. The boys offered to carry him to a nearby house but John said he could walk. The four of them walked about 100 yards to a house where a woman gave John something to drink and called the doctor.

Witness claimed that there was no scuffling at the time the fatal shot was fired. "I have fired a lot with the rifle as it was mine but it was not in the best condition for if the man holding it were not careful it would go off with the slighest jar. To exhibit the poor condition the rifle was in, he gave it a tap on the top of the magazine and the trigger released. He said that he had been forbidden by his father to use the gun and he knew it was against the law to carry fire arms in the city limits.

Maurice Hynes was unable to give any further evidence of how the accident occured but he said he had found that the gun went off very easily and that he also knew it was against the law to carry fire arms in the city limits.

Philip Morocco the boy who fired the fatal shot gave his age as 16 years. "I knew the trigger was easily pulled and had been warned by George Gauld on previous occasions to be careful when taking aim and carrying the gun loaded". Witness did not think he had his hand on the trigger when the gun went off but in the 15 or 20 times that he had shot out of the gun it had gone off twice before the trigger was pulled.

Caretaker of Park

Leonard Hoards, caretaker of Jackson park was called to give evidence as to the shooting by boys and men out in that park and what precautions had been taken to prevent the firing of firearms in the park. On Saturday morning he had spoken to Chief Newhall about erecting signs in the park and had received authority from John Crane to have the signs printed and erected in the park. He told of one occasion last summer when two men were walking on a ridge in the park and a bullet passed between them. It is not only boys but men who are shooting in the park "said Mr. Hoarde.

Dr. A. G. Howson, the physician who was called to attend the boy, gave as the cause of death shock and hemorrhage the result of a bullet wound in the abdomen. On Saturday about 1.30 Dr. Howson said he attended the boy at the home of R. H. Dawson, 530 Bonacord street, there he found the boy in a shocked condition but quite conscious. He immediately had him rushed to the hospital where he was operated on, but he had little hope for his recovery.

On Sunday his temperature went up to 105 and he died about 5.30 in the afternoon.

The jurymen were: C. Stapleton (foreman) David Beavis, David Fleming, John Henderson, John Fligg, George Grange, Roy Dickson, Alex Archibald, W. Flannery, John Gillespie, E. Sackville, and W. Cairns.

CAVAN FARMERS START PLOWING

Men in Various Parts of Township Out on Land Yesterday Afternoon.

LATE THIS YEAR.

MILLBROOK, April 13. — Fred Winslow began plowing on his farm a mile or more south of the village yesterday, working all afetrnoon and breaking up quite a portion of a field of sod. The land was a litle heavy in some places, but apparently quite free of frost.

T. J. Kennedy and John Moore, west of here in the Zion district, also did their first plowing yesterday, reporting no frost in the ground and little difficulty in proceeding with their work.

Last year Mr. Winslow began plowing on April 6, and that was approximately the date when farm work generally began in this section.

North Cavan Man Out

CAVAN, April 13.—Harold Kincaid was the first farmer of this district to get out on the land. He plowed all yesterday afternoon. Last year the first plowing in the district was March 31.

Warsaw Men Begin

WARSAW, April 13.—The Carlow brothers were the first farmers near Warsaw to do any plowing. They were working on their land all day yesterday.

Growing Children Need Vitamins

It is all important for the welfare of the young child and its normal progress in growth and health—the formation of a strong bone structure, that the body be kept adequately vitamin-nourished.

The handicap that so often hinders the normal progress of children, is a failure to obtain from the daily diet a full quota of essential vitamins, the kind that abound in emulsified cod-liver oil, as in Scott's Emulsion.

To children who are pale, under-weight, inclined to weak, soft bones or rickets, and who evidently are not obtaining the needed vitamins, give emulsified cod-liver oil in the form of

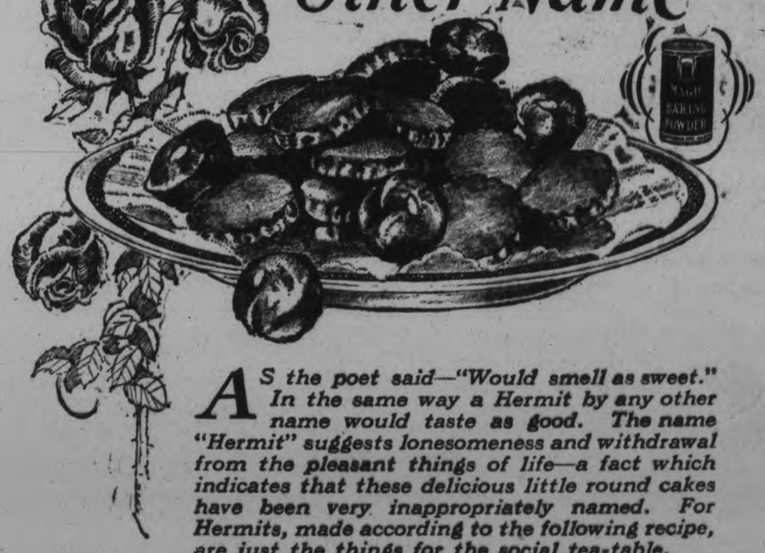
"A Rose by any Other Name"—



AS the poet said—"Would smell as sweet." In the same way a Hermit by any other name would taste as good. The name "Hermit" suggests lonesomeness and withdrawal from the pleasant things of life—a fact which indicates that these delicious little round cakes have been very inappropriately named. For Hermits, made according to the following recipe, are just the things for the social tea-table.

1 cup butter
1½ cups sugar
3 eggs
1 cup raisins stoned and chopped
1 teaspoon each of allspice, cinnamon and nutmeg
2 cups flour
2 teaspoons Magic Baking Powder

(If too dry and liquid is required, add a little cold water)

Cream together thoroughly butter and sugar, then with a wooden spoon work in raisins and spices, then the well beaten eggs, then flour and baking powder which have been sifted together, roll out and cut with very small cutter. Bake in moderate oven about 10 minutes.

St. John's church choir held a social evening in the Parish House last night. The object in view was twofold, to bring together the members of the church in a social gathering in order to bid farewell to Mr. and Mrs. D. G. Melton, who are shortly leaving to take up residence in Oakville, and secondly to obtain financial assistance for the church musical library. The outcome was a most successful evening. Bridge and euchre were engaged in and at the conclusion those present adjourned to the dining hall, where a sumptuous repast had been prepared by the ladies of the choir. The presentation of a silver entree dish and pair of silver candlesticks to Mr. and Mrs. Melton was made by Mr. Arthur Stevenson, one of the church wardens. In a few words he expressed the sorrow of the congregation at the impending loss of such a valuable member of the church as Mr. Melton, who had given of his services most freely and had helped so much towards the general work of the church. Mr Melton in replying thanked the congregation most heartily for their gift, which would always be a reminder to Mrs. Melton and himself of the pleasant years they had spent in Peterborough. The work which he had done in connection with St. John's church had been done with a willing and thankful heart as the least he could do for the service of God. Mrs. Melton was presented with a beautiful bouquet of flowers by the congregation. During the evening, forty tables of bridge were played. Prizes were drawn for by Dr. W. T. Holloway and were secured by Mrs. S. White, Mrs. W. Comstock, Mr. R. N. Stuart and Mr. M. E. Shaver. Tables for the buffet supper were attractively arranged in mauve and yellow. The convenor of refreshments was Mrs. D. J. Eldred and Miss K. Edgar had charge of decorations. Miss Alice Price and Miss Ruby Quartermaine formed the reception committee. As a conclusion to the evening, a brief dance was enjoyed, with excellent music provided by Mrs. M. B. Hoyland's orchestra.

What is Home With a Sick Mother?

Peterboro, Ont.—"Following motherhood I developed a trouble that pulled me completely down in health. My nerves were bad, I was weak, had severe pains in my sides, my back ached and I was a nervous and physical wreck. But, after taking five bottles of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription my nerves were in good condition and I fully regained my health and strength. I recommend the 'Favorite Prescription' to all women who suffer as I did."—Mrs. Maurice Tobin, 100 Steward St.

Dr. McCoy's menus suggested for the week beginning Sunday, April 15th:

Sunday.

Monday.

Tuesday.

Lunch: 8-ounce glass of orange juice.

Wednesday.

Dinner: Roast of mutton, baked parsnips, cauliflower salad, cup custard.

Thursday.

Breakfast: Cornmeal mush with milk.

Dinner: Celery soup, roast pork, stewed tomatoes, baked egg plant, plain Jello or Jell-well (no cream).

Friday.

Breakfast: As many oranges as desired.

Dinner: Tomato and celery vegetable broth, broiled white fish, mashed turnips, combination salad of raw cabbage, tomatoes and celery, stewed apricots.

Saturday.

Breakfast: Cottage cheese, baked apple, Melba toast.

Lunch: Baked eggplant, string beans, lettuce.

*SPINACH AND CHEESE EN CASSEROLE: If the fresh spinach is used, wash carefully in several waters to remove all traces of grit. The water that clings to the leaves after the final washing affords enough moisture for cooking in one of the heavy aluminum pans tightly covered. After about ten minutes' cooking, fill the bottom of a casserole with the finely chopped hot spinach (if canned, heat before putting into casserole) and add a generous sprinkling of grated cheese. Add more spinach, another layer of grated cheese, and so on until the casserole is filled, covering the top with the grated cheese. Place in a very slow oven until the cheese begins to melt, but do not allow it to brown, or to even become tough through actual cooking. Serve immediately, while hot.

Questions and Answers.

Question: M.E.R. asks: "Can a woman who has had her uterus removed regain her strength after five years?"

Answer: After any kind of a surgical operation there is often great weakness, but this is not necessarily more so in a case of uterine removal. Strength is gained mostly from regulated exercise with, of course, proper attention to diet.

Question: Stella M. asks: "Have you any pamphlets stating what foods contain protein, what constitute starchy vegetables, and what constitute non-starchy vegetables, as I do not know a starchy vegetable from a non-starchy vegetable, or what foods contain protein and what do not."

Answer: Yes, I have a special chart showing food classifications, and one giving simplified rules for food combinations. Send a large, self addressed stamped envelope and I will mail them to you.

Question: Mother writes: "I am the mother of five boys. I expect another baby in June. I have smoked cigarettes since 1917. I recently read an article wherein a learned doctor said that a great per cent of the babies of cigarette-smoking mothers died and it has worried me considerably. Will you kindly give your opinion about this?"

Answer: I would not prescribe cigarette smoking for the expectant mother, and still, I think the "learned" doctor's statements about this were exaggerated. It seems to me that more harm is produced from the cigarette smoking which the mother does while she is nursing her baby. To be on the safe side, wouldn't it be better to stop your smoking until after the baby is weaned?

HOROSCOPE

The Stars Incline, But Do Not Compel

Saturday, April 14, 1928.

(Copyright, McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Benefic aspects rule to-day, according to astrology which reads in the stars have kindly influences.

Women should be happy to-day, which is supposed to be especially lucky for those who indulge in much talking.

There is a sign read as presaging the revival of conservation as a fine art and this rule is favorable to ready wit.

There is a favorable aspect for love affairs and they who court to-day are likely to be in earnest.

This is a happy wedding day that should be the beginning of a long partnership.

The theatre is subject to the best influences to-day and both the screen and the stage should benefit.

New stars of both sexes are to appear, but they are to be of serious mold and careful training, it is foretold.

The seers declare that mere beauty will cease to be the chief asset for an actress, since real art is to be demanded.

Floriculture again is subject to benefic influences and the development of magnificent public gardens is forecast.

All the finer things of life are to receive renewed attention from the world that has been much concerned with material things, it is prophesied.

Increase of the birthrate is indicated for the year which will bring into the world more boys than girls.

Persons whose birthdate it is have the forecast of a serene and uneventful year.

Children born on this day probably will have artistic natures that are difficult to guide, but success is indicated.

Acids in Stomach Cause Indigestion

Medical authorities state that nearly nine-tenths of the cases of stomach trouble, Indigestion, sourness, burning, gas, bloating, nausea, etc., are due to an excess of hydrochloric acid in the stomach. The delicate stomach lining is irritated, digestion is delayed and food sours, causing the disagreeable symptoms which every stomach sufferer knows so well.

Artificial digestents are not needed in such cases and may do real harm. Try laying aside all digestive aids and instead get from any druggist some Bisurated Magnesia and take a teaspoonful of powder or four tablets in water right after eating. This sweetens the stomach, prevents the formation of excess acid and there is no sourness, gas or pain. Bisurated Magnesia (in powder or tablet form—never liquid or milk) is harmless to the stomach, inexpensive to take and is the most efficient form of magnesia for stomach purposes. It is used by thousands of people who enjoy their meals with no more fear of indigestion.

LYRICS OF LIFE

OLD LADIES

I do not fret as much about
Old ladies as I used to do.
I used to fear the rush and rout,
The way that people push and shout,
Would scare old ladies through and through.
A baseball game I went to see,
As far in front as I could be,
But there she was, in front of me.

I do not have the awful fears
For our old ladies that I did
Old ladies well along in years
Were once inclined to sighs and tears,
And in their sitting-rooms they hid.
But now they're driving someone's car,
Discussing Ludwig, so they are,
And Lindbergh, and some movie star.

I do not fear as greatly, sin,
For helpless women, old and gray.
I was a trolley passenger;
I thought I'd give the seat to her;
She beat me to it, anyway.
God bless their hearts, you needn't fret
About old ladies. All I've met
Were going strong and going yet.

DRESS

By MARY MARSHALL

A gray kashmir coat has appliquees of material and piping of darker gray, and a detachable scarf which clamps at the back. Below you may see how it is worn when attached and at the left the effect when the scarf is left off.

To have fur—or not to have fur—is the soliloquy of the woman who buys a spring coat this season. Once we should have considered any sort of fur trimming on a spring coat as quite out of place—especially if the coat wasn't bought until after the first of April. But we have become so accustomed to seeing fur in some form or another all the year round that the question now is one merely of style. We know that the lighter kinds of fur may be placed on a coat so that it will not add uncomfortably to its warmth.

Word went forth early in the season that spring coats would be furless—as a matter of variety if nothing else. Then, too, the unfurred coat offered greater opportunity for the dressmaker or tailor to show his skill—and careful finish. The furless spring coat was not launched with any idea of making it less expensive because the cost of the necessary fine workmanship would make this impossible.

And some of the spring coats have been furless and women have liked them. Others have shown fur on the sleeves but not on the collars. Where the fur collar is lacking a long scarf, attached or attachable to the coat, has often been substituted. I have seen most attractive tweed coats with long scarfs of silk edged with a band of the tweed.

One reason for the present revival of the furless coat depends on another revival—that of the separate fur scarf. It has been a long time coming—and for a time it seemed as if American women at any rate wouldn't take it up at all. But that was because American women wore coats in preference to suits or coat frocks, and because there was usually fur on the collars of these coats.

St. James' Branch Receives Easter Offering—Will Celebrate Anniversary.

St. James' W.M.S. Auxiliary held their Easter meeting on Wednesday evening in Wesley Hall, uniting with the midweek service of praise and prayer.

A most interesting program was presented by Group 3, with Mrs. F. Armstrong, leader. This was all in keeping with the spirit of the Eastertide. The Easter thankoffering received at this meeting represented the great interest in missionary work by the large congregation of St. James' Church.

The May meeting will mark the tenth anniversary of this Auxiliary. The program will be under the direction of Group 4, of which Mrs. Wesley Rose is leader.

HOW DO YOU JUDGE THE VALUE OF SOAP?

You can't tell by looks, nor by size or price! How, then, can you tell?

The surest, safest way to judge good value in soap is by the $5,000 Sunlight Guarantee of Purity.

To women who know what harsh, impure soaps do to hands and fabrics . . . . soap purity such as you find in Sunlight, is a boon.

This absolute purity of Sunlight Soap means so much. Sunlight Soap is purposely made to dissolve freely. The pure soapy suds cleanse quickly and thoroughly. Clothes are made snowy. Hands are not roughened or coarsened . . . . fabrics are not damaged with injurious chemicals.

Sunlight's Purity is the standard by which millions of women judge soap.

And the number of women who prefer Sunlight is steadily growing.

NEW OFFICERS ARE INSTALLED

fact that, in passenger train service, Peterborough is out of "tune" with Toronto and Montreal, in the matter of daylight saving time, hindered, somewhat our attempts toward effecting satisfactory adjustments of general trin schedules.

At the mid-sessions and the annual meetings of the Eastern Ontario Chambers of Commerce and the Ontario Associated Boards of Trade and Chambers of Commerce, resolutions sponsored by this chamber dealing with traffic improvements the Ontario Companies Act; completion of the Trent Waterway, and hawkers and peddlers, were adopted and later presented to the Federal and Provincial Goverarments, with very gratifying results.

The Highway Safety Campaign was endorsed by the Chamber last season and considerable literature of and educational and helpful nature distributed.

Following out our policy of endorsing and helping in all matters affecting the general welfare of the community the Chamber, last fall, joined with forces west of Peterboro in an attempt to have a highway Built through Cavan and Bethany to Port Perry, branching from the Peterborough-Port Hope Highway. The deputation interviewing the Minister of Public Highways in this connection received a sympathetic hearing and the proposal was promised the future consideration of the Minister.

President-elect James Dutton represented the Chamber very creditably on the local deputation to the Provincial Department of Health in connection with the retention in Peterborough of the Provincial Laboratary. This matter, and the consideration of a full-time Medical Officer of Health, continues to challenge the thought of the community.

I believe that general conditions in our city justify a spirit of optimism and a feeling that Peterborough has turned the corner, so to speak, in fact, did so last year, and this season brings a continuance of progress with less unemployment than a year ago and a decided increase in building activity in the city, both actual and contemplated. And, of course, we are bound to see reflected in our local business conditions, in one form or another, the increased prosperity of our country as a whole as a result of last year's generally good crop of agricultural products, and the bright prospects for 1928. After all has been said, the prosperity of the entire nation starts in the ground in one form or another.

May I here express the sincere appreciation I feel in having been honored with the Presidency of the Peterborough Chamber of Commerce and say a word of personal thanks to the Board of Directors, to the Chairman of the various committees to the executive staff and to all members of this useful organization for the splendid support they have given me through the year just closing. It sometimes seems to me as though a great deal is not accomplished in any one year, but the thing that counts in the end is the forging ahead, and I believe we can all look to the future with confidence, remembering, however, that it will be largely what we make it.

Work Appreciated

At the conclusion of the President's report, J. J. Turner, speaking relative to the "speech from the throne" paid tribute to the splendid work done by the retiring president, not only during the past year, but also for many years as a prime mover in all things for the good of Peterborough. Mr. Turner felt that he was voicing the thanks of the directorate, members of the chamber, and the public and in conclusion, suggested that various items in the report just read be set aside for further consideration by the officers.

F. D. Kerr, K.C., corroborated the words of Mr. Turner, adding his own personal tribute for the splendid civic efforts of Mr. Gillespie.

Mayor Denne Speaks

The formal installation of officers and executive council for the year 1928, was, in the hands of His Worship Mayor Denne, a most pleasing feature of the evening. The chief magistrate, in his introductory remarks, stated that the impression around Peterborough that there was friction between the Chamber of Commerce and the City Council was entirely erroneous. Speaking for City Council he declared that there always had been and would continue to be co-operation between the two bodies.

Makes Suggestions

Mayor Denne made several suggestions worthy of consideration during his address. He thought that the Motor League should co-operate in the placing of an information stand at the corner of Charlotte and George streets, where tourists might be given any directions required. He felt that with a real live person in charge, it would be a splendid thing. June 15 to September 15, he suggested as the time when it should be in operation.

Another suggestion was that the manufacturers locally should be asked to have the picture of their Peterborough plants shown in some of their advertising, as it would not only advertise the goods but the city as well.

Mayor Denne bespoke his high estimation of Secretary Frank G. Stinson at whom some petty criticisms had been directed by those who took no part in public work themselves. However, he did feel that it was expecting too much of Mr. Stinson to make him secretary of all the organizations under his department, and thought that if each club had another secretary to work with Mr. Stinson, it would be, not only fairer to him, but the work would be more evenly distributed, and therefore well done without his constant attention.

President: James Dutton, President Stocks' Bread Limited.

Past President: G. A. Gillespie, Manager, Peterborough Milk Products, Limited.

Treasurer: C. S. Cummer, Manager, Bank of Montreal.

Secretary: Frank G Stinson, 358 George street.

Robert Abbott, Manager, Canadian Raybestos Limited.

Thomas Barrie, c/o Barries' Limited.

J. Wells Fraser, Manager, Bank of Nova Scotia.

C. G. Graham, Manager, Empress Hotel.

Fred Hill, c/o Hills, Weddell and Hills.

J. K. Hughes, c/o Chevrolet Sales and Service.

James Juby, 242 Charlotte street.

F. D. Kerr, K.C., c/o Messrs. Peck, Kerr and McElderry.

Charles Lacheur, Postmaster, Post Office.

Gordon S. Matthews, Manager, Canadian Packers, Limited.

Fred L. Roy, c/o Roy Studio.

J. J. Turner, c/o Messrs J. J. Turner & Sons, Ltd.

New President Speaks.

Taking the gavel from the hands of Mayor Denne, the new president assumed the chairmanship, voicing his appreciation to the Mayor. "In accepting this office of president of the Chamber of Commerce, I am conscious of the honor conferred upon me and the confidence reposed in me, and I am also conscious of my own limitations, so that I cannot promise anything in the nature of outstanding achievement. However, if hard work and attention to duties count for anything, these will not be spared," said he.

"The keynote of Mayor Denne's regime has been co-operation," he continued, "and I want to bespeak the co-operation of all who are interested in a bigger and better Peterborough." Mr. Dutton also spoke appreciatively of the valuable work of The Peterborough Examiner in promoting public interest in the Chamber.

"In return for co-operation, I promise for the executive of the Chamber of Commerce, whole-hearted support for every worth-while effort for the functions of the Chamber of Commerce are:

1—To seek to develop a healthy community spirit.

2—To establish a closer relationship between rural and urban population. An agricultural department in new Vocational School.

3—To make a complete inventory of city's resources.

4—To seek to induce manufacturers to locate in Peterborough. Also to encourage development of local industries.

"In this connection I would suggest the advisability of having a fully qualified industrial commissioner on the staff of the Chamber, or failing this, a committee comprised of our best business men," said President Dutton.

In conclusion, the new president emphatically stated that the Chamber of Commerce has no intention of entering into competition with the City Council, but rather, suggested that the Chamber be invited to co-operate and be taken into the city's confidence. Much is expected of the Chamber, but it can only function properly as the citizens show a practical interest in it. One of its functions should be to make an inventory of the city's resources in transportation, gas, light, water, etc., as well as manufacturing possibilities.

Communications.

There were several communications to be dealt with, but the majority of them were referred to the executive. However, there was a particularly interesting one relative to acceptance by the Hon. Charles Dunning, Minister of Railways and Canals, of an invitation to visit Peterborough. To deal with the matter more fully, a committee was appointed, comprising the president and J. Wells Fraser, F. D. Kerr, K.C., Mayor Denne, Col. C. H. Ackerman, J. J. Duffus, and the Hon. G. N. Gordon.

Plans for July 1st.

Relative to a First of July celebration, Secretary Frank Stinson stated that many were in favor of something to keep up the interest aroused by the local Diamond Jubilee observance, and he thought that aquatic events for the morning and possibly extended into the afternoon would be worth considering.

J. J. Turner pointed out that since July 1 fell on a Sunday there might be some fitting ceremony — possibly the unveiling of the war memorial—and that it would be well to have a lively celebration on Monday.

Empire Shopping Week.

Mr. Turner, who is also chairman of the Empire Shopping Week, gave out some timely information. He stated that in the week of April 21-28 the merchants and manufacturers have been asked to make a special showing of goods made within the Empire. He mentioned decorations available and urged all concerned to co-operate in making it a success.

A civic inventory, which the Chamber contemplates, is to be drawn up by numerous committees the chairmen of which were named as follows: G. A. Gillespie, Fred Hills, J. J. Turner, G. S. Mathews, J. Wells Fraser, Charles Lacheur, F. D. Kerr, Thomas Barrie, C. G. Graham, Robert Abbott.

Resolution.

It is now apparent to the citizens of Peterborough, that the City Council have adopted a program of improvements, including among other worthy projects, a street improvement plan calling for the paving of at least two additional miles of city streets, therefore, it was resolved that the directorate and members of the Peterborough Chamber of Commerce do hereby commend the Council and His Worship, Mayor Denne, upon their most efficient administration of the city's affairs, permitting many necessary city improvements without any appreciable increase in the tax rate.

Speaking relative to this resolution, Mayor Denne stated that some citizens may not be satisfied with the decision to do some paving in the western part of the city, but this was because they were not cognizant of the sewage conditions.

Pictures Shown.

As the passing of the above resolution concluded the regular meeting Fred L. Roy was introduced, together with his moving picture machine. Mr. Roy showed three reels of movies, shot while he was on a trip in the Hudson's Bay territory last winter, and in them one beheld all the features of the north: trapping, dog teams and mushing, fishing through the ice, etc. The pictures were greatly enjoyed, and appreciated by all present, J. J. Turner and W. H. Bradburn moving the vote of thanks to Mr. Roy.

When they Play!

If there's any time of the year when children are harder on their shoes than usual, we believe it is in the Spring. Every outdoor game means daily banging for their shoes.

Not only are these stitchdown shoes made of serviceable leather, but even the stitching is extra strong. And they are constructed to assure correct growth for their feet.

AMBITIOUS EFFORT IN AMATEUR PLAY

Immaculate Conception Dramatic Society Will Present "Now Fawncy That."

An ambitious effort in the dramatic line is a play entitled "Now Fawncy That" which will be presented at St. Alphonsus' Lyceum on the evenings of Monday and Tuesday next, by the Dramatic Society of the Immaculate Conception parish. This is described as a rollicking, laughable Irish comedy and is presented in three acts and seven scenes. It has the desirable element of suspense sustained to the very last minute, when a dramatic and unexpected finale gives the proper touch to an entertaining production.

The story centres mainly around the adventures of the Irish hero, Terry Sheehan, whose parents mortgage their home to give him musical training in Paris and who fails to live up to their expectations with regard to him. This is merely the bare idea of the plot, however, which has various ramifications of an interesting character and holds a very mysterious personage called John Ferguson, as one of the main actors. There is the usual dainty heroine, Molly Malloy, and many Irish and French character types who give atmosphere to the several scenes, staged in turn at Terry's Irish home and in "Les Bas Quartiers" of Paris. The play is modern from start to finish and has a modern setting. Two months have been spent in its preparation and every detail has been looked after carefully.

SOFTBALL MEETING ON MONDAY NIGHT

There will not be a meeting of the Softball League to-night, as stated in The Examiner last night. The meeting will be held on Monday night in the Chamber of Commerce rooms and all teams intending to enter are urged to have representatives there.

At last!

LUXOR LONG LIFE FLOOR ENAMEL

Here is a floor enamel that wears like steel—one that is unequalled in rich tone and beauty of finish.

Strong soaps do not affect it, nor does water spot or discolor it. It retains a permanently fresh appearance.

Brilliant with life; and of extreme durability, this new Canada Paint Product is ideal for all kinds of wood or cement floors—exterior or interior. Made in a range of colors to please the most fastidious tastes.

Noranda and Pend Oreille Ease Back In Heavy Trading

TORONTO, April 13 (Canadian Press).—The market on the Standard Mining Exchange was weak this morning, with Howey the weak leader, selling down as low as 91 and recovering at noon to 96 for a net loss of 14 points. In heavy trading, Noranda eased back below 18.00, and Pend Oreille softened half a dollar at 19.50. Lucky Jim at 40 was steady, as were Hollinger at 16.90, McIntyre at 26.85, Malartic at 1.20, Mining Corporation at 3.40, and Sunlock at 3.50. Sudbury Basin weakened to 9.70, Mandy to 2.65, Kootenay Florence to 32, and Moffat Hall to 26½. Hudson Bay Smelting firming to 16.95, and Crown Reserve at 60, were two of a few of the strong issues.

Weather Reports Favorable Wheat Values Decline

CHICAGO, April 13. — (Canadian Press.) —Rain and snow in the west and south-west, with more predicted, carried wheat values down grade early to-day. Besides, reports from the north-west indicated seeding well advanced. Opening 3-8 to 1 3-8 cents off, with May showing less setback that new crop months, the wheat market displayed only moderate power to recover. Corn and oats were also easier, corn starting 1-4 to 3-4c. down and subsequently holding near to the initial range. Provisions kept about steady.

Opening prices:

Wheat, May 148 5-8, July 147 5-8. Corn, May 98 1-4, July 101 5-8. Oats, May 5 71-2, July 51 1-8.

E. P. B. LEAGUE CALLS MEETING

Executive Will Meet Next Week To Make Plans For Annual Meeting.

LEAGUE PROGRESSING.

An executive meeting of the East Peterborough Baseball Association will be held on Monday night to make arrangements for the annual meeting of the association which will likely be held one week later. The East Peterborough Association has been making rapid strides during the past years and is looking ahead to another good year.

BERT McLEOD IS HOME FROM K.C.

Peterborough Player Enjoyed Season in Pro Ranks.

Bert McLeod arrived home on Wednesday night after a successful season with the Kansas City professional hockey club. The former Peterborough defence star declares that he enjoyed the season very much. The Kansas City club finished second in the league race but was eliminated in the play-off after a hard fight. McLeod expects to be back in Kansas City next season, as the game, although absolutely new to the people of that city, has made a favorable impression and good patronage is looked for in the next campaign.

RADIO SOLOIST HERE.

Wishart Campbell Will Sing in St. Paul's Church on Sunday.

Peterborough radio fans who have heard Wishart Campbell sing from CKGW as an exclusive staff artist, and a large circle of acquaintances who knew him when he attended Normal School here, will be pleased to learn that on Sunday evening he will be the special soloist at St. Paul's Presbyterian Church. Mr. Campbell, who was the 1927 Conservatory gold medallist for Canada, is at present studying on a scholarship for singing with Dr. Ham, at Toronto.

As there is a special drive for members by the League of Nations Society now on, the Rev. William Allan has taken as the subject of his sermon, "The Church and World Peace."

AROUND THE CITY.

At 11.30 last night the fire brigade answered a call from 171 Antrim Street, though on arrival the expected chimney fire was not to be found.

At 7.25 this morning chemicals were required to extinguish a chimney fire at 370½ Burnham Street.

CAT FANCIERS CALL MEETING

Fall Show Being Considered and Organization Necessary.

FINE ANIMALS IN CITY.

The Cat Show of lost fall created a greatly increased interest in fancy felines, and numerous pedigreed pets were placed in Peterborough homes in consequence.

Owners of a conspicuously attractive puss find it impossible to lose interest in cats of royal lineage, as Tabby, or Mike, or Blue Bell, or some such named animal insists on retaining its place in the affections, and this accounts for a movement just now to get in readiness for another cat show at the Made-in-Canada Exhibition this fall. Affiliation with the larger Provincial Society is necessary in order to secure the exhibit of cats from outside, and a branch society is to be formed here with this in view. A chance to see the cats that have been prize winners at the big shows is an educational feature that local fanciers will appreciate, and will also make more friends for aristocratic pussies.

A meeting of all who are interested in fine cats is to be held at the rooms of Drs. Craig, Cameron and Crough, corner George and Hunter streets, at 8 o'clock on Monday evening. All cat owners and those who wish they were, are invited to be present.

Mr. and Mrs. Kirch, of Toronto, the latter being secretary of the Royal Canadian Cat Show, recently paid a visit to this city to ascertain what was being done in the way of organization and show arrangements, so that other dates would not be permitted to clash with that of Peterborough.

They assured the local fanciers that if the date was right there would be a very large entry of cats from Toronto, Hamilton and Buffalo, promising as fine a cat show as would be seen anywhere in Canada.

RANGERS EVEN COUNT IN N.H.L. FINALS

ONLY ONE GOAL IN FOURTH GAME

Fifth Game Needed To Decide Stanley Cup Series at Montreal.

BOUCHER SCORES.

MONTREAL, April 13. — A fifth and deciding game will be necessary before the ultimate winners of the Stanley Cup for the year 1928 are known.

The New York Rangers last night won 1 to 0 over the Montreal Maroons in the fourth game of the world's championship series, thus knotting the game count at two each. The Maroons won the first and third games by decisive two-goal margins but dropped the second and tonight's fixture by one-goal advantages.

Last nights game was a strenuous struggle in which the Maroons had a slight edge in the territorial play, but which they were not able to convert into goals owing to the good work of Miller, the New York goalkeeper.

The Rangers well deserved their victory. They flashed a dangerous defensive, which at times swept all before it and gave Benedict a busy night. The feature of the visitors' play, however, was the defensive work of that beefy pair, Abel and Johnson. These two proved a continual thorn in the side of the Maroon offenive threats and gave Miller particularly air-tight protection during the evening.

Boucher Only Scorer.

The lone goal of the contest was scored by Frank Boucher, brilliant Ranger centre star, early in the second period when he grabbed a rebound off Benedict's pads and sniped the disc over the Montreal goaltender's prostrate body. Johnson started the scoring play. He carried to the blue line and passed to Bill Cook. The latter was forced behind the net, but kept control of the puck and managed to snap it out in front. Benny stopped one shot, but fell in doing so. Boucher then grabbed the loose puck and flipped it into the net. Over 11,000 fans witnessed the fourth contest of the series.

The Rangers went into the game with the knowledge that defeat would mean oblivion, as far as championship honors for 1928 were concerned. Every man on the team from ranking star to lowliest sub, played well, and gave all they had in the cause of victory. They were without the services of Paul Thompson, a substitute, who was suspended for having earned a match penalty in the previous game, along with Joe Lamb, Montreal sub, for engaging in a fist fight.

W.M.S. REPORTS SHOW ACTIVITY

Mother and Daughter Banquet Being Planned at George Street Church.

The regular April meeting of the Women's Missionary Society of George Street United Church was held in the board room of the Sunday school hall on Tuesday afternoon with a splendid attendance. The president, Mrs. E. W. Coon, occupied the chair and opened the meeting with prayer.

Mrs. H. G. Walker, convenor of Group C, took charge of the devotional exercises. The Bible lesson was read by Miss E. Might and Mrs. J. C. Wood led in prayer.

After the reports of the secretary and treasurer had been approved and adopted Miss Might read the correspondence which included a number of letters of thanks from those to whom flowers and letters of sympathy had been sent. Mrs. J. W. Hules reported twenty-seven visits made to sick, shut-in or strangers during the past month.

Mrs. J. C. Wood, financial secretary, gave her report.

The literature secretary, Miss Birnie, reported a number of books for the missionary library and announced that they would be loaned to anyone desiring them.

The supply secretary, Mrs. F. Mather, reported bales of clothing sent to Curve Lake and Cheddar, Ont., and read letters of thanks. Reports from the Mission Band, Mission Circle, and Young Women's Auxiliary were given by Mrs. A. I. Brown, Mrs. H. Morton, and Mrs. Knox, all showing satisfactory progress.

Mrs. J. E. Todd reported that arrangements could be made for holding a missionary Sunday some time in October.

Mrs. Knox reported on the mother and daughter banquet which is being looked forward to with so much interest. It is to be held the Friday before Mother's Day, May 11th, and arrangements are nearly completed Mrs. Coon gave notice of the branch meeting which is to be held in Lindsay beginning May 10 and requested all to take in the meeting if possible.

Mrs. Purdy gave a delightful piano number, after which the heralds gave their reports.

Miss McCammus on the African work gave a very comprehensive outline of number of stations, work being done and prospects. China was reported by Mrs. A. I. Brown and India by Mrs. McHoull.

The meeting closed with a number of sentence prayers.

Players Injured In Houston Game

HOUSTON, Texas, April 13.—(Canadian Press.) — Two Texas League baseball players suffered broken legs in the same inning of the Waco-Houston game here yesterday. They were Homer Peel, Houston left fielder, and Felix Vigare, Waco third baseman. Peel broke his leg in the seventh inning when he ran into a fence in attempting to catch Vigare's fly. A few minutes later Vigare's leg was broken when he slid into home plate. Both were veterans and stars of their teams.

CHICAGO LOSE SECOND GAME

GAMES POSTPONED

NEW YORK, April 13. — The Reds defeated the Chicago Cubs in the second game of their opening series at Cincinnati 9 to 3 yesterday. In the eighth, with the score tied 3 to 3, two out and the bases full, English boosted Kelly's roller, scoring Dressen. Malone walked Callaghan to score Allen, Heathcote dropped Critz's fly, Purdy and Kelly scoring, and Ford singled to score Callaghan and Gritz. The Cubs loaded the bags in the ninth on two walks and Callaghan's fumble with none down, but an infield fly and a double play ended the game.

At St. Louis, Grover Cleveland Alexander, the veteran Cardinal pitcher, opened his 18th major league season by holding the Pittsburgh Pirates, the league champions, to 7 singles and shutting them out, 5 to nothing. Counting ten exhibition innings, Alexander has pitched nineteen scoreless innings this season.

Boston-New York and Philadelphia-Brooklyn games were postponed owing to the wet grounds.

RALLY TO WIN FROM DETROIT

St. Louis Browns Take 7 to 2 Victory From Tigers—Games Called Off.

INDIANS WIN 2-1

NEW YORK, April 13. — Langford's triple in the 6th with Jamieson on base gave Cleveland its second straight victory over the White Sox at Chicago yesterday, 2 to 1.

With Alphonse Thomas on the Mound, the White Sox outhit the Indians, but failed to bunch them off Joe Shaute, the Indian pitcher. Two Chicago rookies, Cissell and Redfern, starred at the bat, with two safeties each.

At Detroit an eighth inning rally in which the St. Louis Browns hammered out five runs off Owen Carroll, after the score had been tied 2-all in the sixth, resulted in a 7 to 2 victory for the Browns over Detroit.

Jack Ogden, the Browns' recruit pitcher from Baltimore, went the route while the St. Louis batters slugged the offerings of four Detroit pitchers. Lu Blue a late Tiger cast off, led the St. Louis attack with a double and a single in their three times at bat.

PAYNE RETAINS LEAD IN DERBY

Shakes Off Challenge of British Runner in Yesterday's Challenge.

STANDINGS GIVEN

EL RENO, Okla., April 13.—(Canadian Press.) — Andrew Payne, 20 year old Claremore, Oklahoma, youth, shook off the challenge of Peter Gavuzzi of Southampton, England, in yesterday's 37 mile grind of the transcontinental foot race after running dead heats with the Englishman for two days.

Payne loped into El Reno from Bridgeport, Okla., in 6:26:24, slightly increasing his lead over Gavuzzi, who holds second place in elapsed time in the derby.

Gavuzzi's time yesterday was six hours 32 minutes giving him an elapsed total of 248:19:50 as compared with the Oklahoman's 246:49:31.

Philip Granville, Hamilton, kept fourth place in the derby last night. His elapsed time was 276:31:53.

Other Canadians:

John Cronick, Saskatoon, 6:26:24—286:10:50.

A. Constantinoff, Toronto, 7:29:26—314:22:44.

George Liebergall, Bellevue, 7:29:26—316:00:27.

S. Steveno, Calgary, 8:08:27 — 494:30:45.

Eugene Germain, Montreal, started late, time to Bridgeport 361:21:53.

Harold McNutt, Alberta, started late, time to Bridgeport 385:09:12.

Caravan doctors predicted that Henry Swabey, York, would probably have to withdraw from the race in the near future due to exhaustion.

VIEWS ON SPORTS

The City Baseball League will get under way at the first meeting of the season to be held on Wednesday, April 18, at the Chamber of Commerce Rooms, when plans and prospects for the year will be discussed. All players and team representatives are especially invited to attend.

• • • • • •

On Saturday next the Central League will meet to conclude the schedule and elect umpires for the coming season. The report of the annual meeting of the O.B.A.A. will be given by H. T. McFadden, who attended as delegate from this league. Vic. Hamilton will represent the Senior Petes at this meeting.

• • • • • •

Two baseball meetings will be held to-night. Holy Name hardball will meet at St. Alphonsus' Lyceum at 7.30 for the purpose of organizing a league from the three churches. The City Softball League will meet at the Chamber of Commerce Rooms to make final arrangements for this season's schedule. Entries for the league must be given in at this meeting, and the officials are expecting a full turnout of team representatives.

LINE-UP CHOSEN

Teams Who Will Represent Rangers and Celtics in Final.

GLASGOW, Scotland, April 13. — Canadian Press Cable. — Teams who will represent the Rangers and Celtic in the Scottish Football Association Cup final on Saturday, will likely be:

Rangers: T. Hamilton, Gray, R. Hamilton, Muirhead (or Buchanan), Meiklejohn, Craig, Archibald, Cunningham (or Simpson), Fleming, McPhail and Morton.

Celtic: J. Thomson, W. McStay, McConigle, Wilson, J. McStay, McFarlane, Connelly, A. Thomson, McGrory, McNally (or Wilson) and McLean.

Saturday's encounter will be the fifth time Celtic and Rangers have met in a Scottish cup final. Celtic claim two successes against one defeat. Since the two memorable drawn encounters between the teams in 1909 which ended in a riot, Celtic have won the trophy six times, although without meeting Rangers, who have never done better than reach the final during this period. Indeed Rangers have not won the cup since 1903. Betting on the game yesterday was at even money.

VETERAN McTIGUE TO MEET EMMANUEL

Bout Set for Next Week and is to be Staged at San Francisco.

NEW YORK, April 13. — If present plans go through and Armand Emmanuel meets Mike McTigue in San Francisco this month, those who have been wondering about the California youth's real ability are likely to have their curiosity satisfied. The date set is April 16.

McTigue has been going back for more than a year, but at that he has still something left in addition to his brogue. Enough remains of his pristine prowess to provide acceptable competition for the ablest boys in the light heavy class.

This being so, if Emmanuel is able to give Michael anything that suggests a thorough shellacking, or index if he dusts him with a winning margin of points, Papa Emmanuel, who is running his son's affairs a la Pa Stribling, will be justified in letting his hopeful step out in the smart set of pugilists.

Harry Dime, who has just returned from the west coast, tells of a narrow escape for Emmanuel. It seems that some time ago there was a serious project on foot to match him against Jack Delaney. Friends of Emmanuel were so attracted by the financial allure of this battle that they failed to take into consideration the fact that Delaney, despite his spotty showing in the past year, is a deadly dangerous customer, and that his right hand is just as potent as it was when it smote Paul Berlenbach down and out at a time when Berley was making his first flight to fame and fortune.

It was perhaps due more to the influence of Otto Floto, the Denver fistic oracle, than any one else, says Dime, that the match was not put through. Floto pointed out the folly of sacrificing ten thousand dollars a year from now on in favor of grabbing present small change. So the match was not made. And it's a good thing for Emmanuel that it wasn't.

FARMER KILLED IN COLLISION

Weston Man Loses Life When Heavy Truck Hits His Car.

DRIVER NOT HELD.

BRAMPTON, April 13. — Thomas Love, a farmer residing on the Weston Road between Malton and Weston, was the victim of an automobile fatality at noon yesterday at the Derry West intersection of the Centre Road, four miles south of this town.

Mr. Love, with his son Garnet driving, was travelling on the cross roads going west to Milton in a light touring car. They were as far as the west side of the Centre Road when the automobile met in collision with a large milk truck, driven by C. W. Dafoe of Toronto. The car was thrown against the curb fronting the general store of A. E. Kilpatrick, a distance of 22 feet.

The body of Mr. Love was taken from beneath the front of the truck. He had a fractured skull and was terribly injured in the abdomen and head, and lived only 20 minutes. The son received a severe cut on the head, but later was able to return home.

Coroner Dr. J. A. Lawson viewed the scene of the wreck and decided to hold an inquest. A jury was empanelled, which viewed the body and adjourned till next Thursday April 19.

PREPARING FOR TRADE EXPANSION

Maher & Wesley Celebrate Their Fifth Business Birthday.

Maher & Wesley, the popular men's clothiers, Charlotte street, are this Saturday congratulating themselves upon having passed five mile stones of gratifying business increase. Successfully catering to a growing patronage from men who must dress well, they are now looking forward to considerable trade expansion in the near future in their tailored-to-measure department.

With this end in view, and to fittingly observe their fifth anniversary, these enterprising partners have decided to clean out in the next ten days the bulk of their stock of snappy ready-to-wear spring suits and ... at prices very much below regular

Another reason for this clearance is, to use Mr. Maher's own words: "Our policy is to sacrifice rather than allow any garments to celebrate an anniversary in this store; and our new suits and topcoats, owing to unsettled weather conditions are not moving as fast as we expected." To make this birthday observance complete, Maher & Wesley have included in their substantial price reductions every line of genta' furnishings—hats, caps, shirts, ties, etc. Undoubtedly their advertised values on another page of this issue should have an appealing interest for thrift buyers in both city and country.

THEATRES

"THE BATTLES OF CORONEL AND FALKLAND ISLANDS."

This is an example of the type of realistically dramatic pictures which has action as its keynote. It illustrates the magic power of the screen which, while devoting most of its energy toward reproducing romance for its audiences, can still buckle down to the task of making a living, wonderful picture of events that have actually transpired. Such a production as this does not deal with imaginary characters. It was a real battle of the sea, and real men who fought and died in the conflicts of Coronel and the Falkland Islands. The commanders portrayed were living, daring men and, as far as is humanly possible, every detail of the conflict has been reproduced for the entertainment of film audiences, the world over. There is something a little ironic in the realization that such epic struggles can be made to furnish thrills for their watchers and money for their producers. That they would one day make material for a dramatic screen spectacle was probably far from the minds of the men on the "Invincible" and the "Inflexible."

The story of these sea fights has already been detailed in full in advance material in these columns. The picture itself is wonderful. On the silver sheet the mighty conflict is staged admirably. The German admiral chases his enemy's ships at Coronel, sinks the "Good Hope" and the "Monmouth" and then the British lion waves its tail, the tide turns, and the English ships hold the Germans at their mercy, in the battle off the Falkland Islands in the South Atlantic.

The action is superb. People who have never been nearer a battleship than to see a picture of one can look down into the workings of its interior, watch the stokers at their job, see the mounting pressure that drives the valves faster and faster, or look down the range of the long guns and see them belch forth the terrible missles that batten down the foe's resistance. They watch the defeated admiral refuse to surrender, and go down to death with his flag flying, and they see the conqueror launch lifeboats to rescue the survivors from a watery grave.

Admiral Von Spee is made somewhat of a central figure. A tradition of sportmanship evidently lingers about the memory of this German commander and the picture does not aim to arouse feelings of bitterness against the erstwhile foe. It was a fair fight on both sides and the production gives an impression of gallantry and courage. The Germans have their chance and make the most of it ,when they sink the two English ships, and later the British have the last word. There is a little bit of the psychology of the war in the spectacle of the German commander faltering when he is presented with flowers at a triumphal banquet at Valparaiso, after his defeat of the British warships. He has a premonition that they will be used shortly for his funeral, and, when the British ships chase him at the Falklands, this premonition returns. On the other hand, the dogged British survival under defeat is pictured in the set jaw of Admiral Sturdee and the determination of Lord Fisher that the battles of Coronel will be avenged. The difference in national temperament has a manifestation in this way that is very interesting.

The British lion, a shadowy figure, stands behind the sub-titles of the English scenes, and the widespread Prussian eagle has a place for the German episodes. The music is especially good for this production, and forms a vivid tonal background for the entire spectacle.

With the feature is one of the most hilarious comedies of the year. The audience absolutely rocked with laughter last night over the adventures of the Scotch Philip who loves the kilts and objects to trousers. His exploits with his furious uncle and the manner in which they do not succeed in making him wear unmentionables, make a screaming farce. —Jeanette.

AT THE REGENT.

RINTY OUTCLASSES SELF IN WAR DRAMA.

"A Dog of the Regiment," a Warner Bros. Production Now Showing at the Regent.

Rin-Tin-Tin in "A Dog of the Regiment," has the most thrilling picture of his spectacular career. There have been twelve other Warner pictures before this, beginning with "Where the North Begins," and now "A Dog of the Regiment," which reproduces much of Rinty's own life in the devastated region of France, where he was born. He is shown as the devoted pal of an American ace, known by Rinty before the World War. Rinty is a Red Cross aid in the German Army, but, being a dog, he sees no reason for hatred and rescues his friend from a burning plane and performs other heroic deeds, which are almost beyond belief. Rinty flies in "A Dog of the Regiment" in the most approved Lindy fashion and sets the crowd shouting, whistling and stamping. The human members of the cast, Tom Gallery as the American aviator, Dorothy Gulliver as the Red Cross Nurse and John Peters as the villain are great. But after all it's Rinty!

HOBBY EXHIBITS OF WIDE RANGE

electrically-connected model of a two-cylinder high pressure marine steam engine. The boys have numerous models of mechanical type; of a machine shop, of a steam shovel which is mounted on the chassis of a car, of an airplane, of an elevator, a derrick and a searchlight. The models in wood are splendidly done. One that gives the impression of an imaginative faculty, combined with expert handicraft, is a model that might well fly the skull and crossbones so pirate-like is its appearance. But it is a model of the old "Revenge" of fighting fame, and needs only a fluttering breeze to set its masts twanging and its sails blowing for a voyage to "Flores in the Azores, where Sir Richard Grenville lay."

Very trim and graceful are the lines of the launch that is modelled in shiny wood, there is a sloop with sails set and a slim yacht, complete to the life-preserver and the horn.

Miniature models of gunboats and men o'war are here also, and more peaceful things in wood that include table lamps with silk shades, bird houses, book ends with flying squirrels as motifs, reproductions of Mutt and Jeff ,and cleverly-contrived ash receivers.

In the gymnasium also are the Pet Stock exhibits of rabbits and pigeons. The bunnies are Chinchilla and Flemish and Angora, in speckled grey and white furry small things with their flat ears and anxious eyes. A little grey bunny chewed at indigestible cabbage leaves last night, laying up a store of nightmare dreams in his small lonely hutch. Jacobin and fantail pigeons have a home in nearby cages.

In upper rooms are stored the hobbies of a different type. Here is a mounted cushion top made of little silk flags of all nations; collections of silk clothing labels, also mounted; collections of pins and medals, of silk badges and lapel buttons; collections in books of trade marks and crests; a mounted collection of crests; a very tempting-looking array of samples of foods and soaps; collections of newspaper headings and, in a large book, a collection of comic strips that looked very interesting. A boy with a naturalist bent has made a hobby of collecting butterflies.

Art Work Large

The art work this year, as is the case in every other section also, is very attractive. There is a freedom, a boldness and a sweep, to these examples of boys' artistic ability, that makes it very interesting. The turn of mind of the artist is apparent. One lad makes a picture of "The Good Shepherd," for example; another draws a fine motor-car, and a third inclines to such things as the fact of Corinne Griffith, motion picture star, or does a bit in colors that reproduces the likeness of Lon Chaney in "The Phantom of the Opera." One takes Abraham Lincoln as a model; another Trotzsky; while Mussolini appears in black and white, and "The Vulgar Bootman" is a travesty on the popular musical number. There is a "Monk with a Pitch"; "Lucky Lindy," and the head of a Zulu warrior, with knobby cheekbones and slanting forehead.

In black and white, in crayons and water colors, in pen and ink and pencil, there are bits of still life, and sketches of natural beauty. A modernistic influence animates several of the small paintings.

The exhibit of photographic work is striking and shows much latent talent in this direction. A calm-eyed pussy looks out in grey and white tones, and there is a Russian wolfhound snapped while lying on the snow. There is some fine shadow and light effect in one little bit of evening sky and a splendid picture of the Governor-General and Lady Willingdon.

The collection of postage stamps is housed in a small room, all by itself. Devotees of this hobby bend in great interest over the neat little books of loose-leaf type in which the stamps are placed and neatly catalogued. The range includes stamps of nearly every variety known to collectors, with an interesting section in the variations of Newfoundland stamps, from one cent to thirty cents.

Another extremely interesting collection, with several loaned exhibits that add much to its attraction, is that of coins, which have a fascination all their own for numismatists.

Here is an example of the Japanese "tempo" of Mexican money, of the United States "Peace" dollar of 1821, of the now almost obsolete twenty cent piece of Canadian coinage, of the Maunday Thursday money of old-time British sovereigns, in coins of tiny diameter, and of the bank tokens of Canada. Here is some of the 'cannon' money of thirty-shilling calibre made from the cannons of King William of Boyne River fame, coinage of King Louis 14th of France, an ancient Greek coin of the mintage of 200 B.C., the "Flowing Hair" money of the United States of 1793, and the "Liberty cap" coins of 1794, the eight double pieces of the Isle of Guernsey, coined in 1858, money from the Isle of Man and many pieces of Chinese "cash," with the square hole in the centre through which passes the string that holds this Oriental money together and obviates the necessity of pockets.

Many advances are recorded in this section over the showings of last years. One of the loan collections comprises a full collection of American gold pieces, from the tiny coin worth 25 cents to that worth $10. Here are two Paul Kruger "ponds," a Columbian half dollar of the World's Fair of 1892, with Columbus' head on its face, and two of the King George Third copper cartwheels of 1797 mintage, weighing approximately two ounces apiece.

One very nice feature of the Hobby Show is the politeness and unobtrusive service rendered by the boys in charge of the various sections.

Competitions in music will take place during to-day, in violin and mouth-organ contests, and games in competition will include ping-pong, chess and checkers. A matinee dog show will be held to-morrow morning.

The Hobby Show orchestra, with Ashton Fife at the piano, renders evening programs, also a radio installed in the gymnasium. The ladies of the Auxiliary are co-operating in maintaining a refreshment table where candy, ice cream and soft drinks may be purchased. And there is a fish pond directed by Mrs. B. F. McNeely. A parcel booth is in charge of Mrs. J. J. Turner, Mrs. A. Moir and Mrs. E. F. Mason.

The refreshment section has been beautifully decorated by Mrs. G. H. Roper, who, with Mrs. D. Loomis, is in charge. It has been placed in the front lobby and is a bower of mauve and yellow crepe paper, with overhead streamers of the frilly stuff and garniture of big paper 'mums in the two soft colors. Tall floor lamps with lovely paper shades also add a note of attraction. Ladies assisting during the several days are Mesdames B. Jackson, J. Trussler, N. Henry, E. H. Mann, G. A. Borland, R. J. Martin, F. Gray, P. D. Fitzgerald, T. Brown, J. Garbutt, S. Jordan, G. A. Gillespie. A sale of home-made cooking is in charge of Mrs. F. L. Robinson and Mrs. W. R. Breyfogle.

What CAN a Man Believe?

By BRUCE BARTON

Author of "The Book Nobody Knows," "The Man Nobody Knows"

XXIII—The Four Noble Truths

HUNDREDS of others who were seeking the pure life could have duplicated all these particulars, and some of them professed to find peace, but not Gautama. He later characterized asceticism as "the realm of nothingness." Self-denial he still believed to be the way of enlightenment, but not self-torture.

This was his famous "middle way" between self-indulgence and self-immolation. It was what many counted a heresy, but it insured his success.

At the end of the sixth year of searching he sat for six days under the Bo tree, and in that week there came to him the bliss of emancipation.

Another week he spent under a goatherd's banyan tree. There he was asked to define the true characteristics of a Brahman, which reminds us that Buddhism did not begin as an independent religion, but was a sect of Brahmanism as Christianity in the beginning was a sect of Judaism.

Defined Brahmanism

The now enlightened Gautama replied that the Brahman should be free from pride, free from impurity, should be self-reliant and wise, having fulfilled the requirements of holiness.

A third week was passed under the Muchalinda tree, where Muchalinda, the serpent king, came forth and spread his hood as a canopy to protect Gautama from the sun and rain.

The final week was under the Rajayatana tree, and here two merchants came bringing honey and rice cakes. The food was presented in four bowls of stone by the four divinities that guard the four quarters of the earth. Guatama ate gladly. His long struggle was at an end. He was enlightened.

The title Buddha had belonged to many men before his time, as the title Messiah or Christ had belonged to all the Davidic kings and others, including Saul. With his "enlightenment," Gautama became a Buddha. While other Buddhas are expected, and the greatest of all is yet to come, he stood and yet stands so far above all others as almost to monopolize the title.

Based On Four Truths

Like Christianity, Buddhism has its sacred books; its gospel is based on the Four Noble Truths which came while he sat cross-legged under the Bo tree:

All existence involves suffering. Suffering is caused by desire. The path to a cessation of suffering is the eightfold path of right living. Suffering will cease when desire ceases.

These Four Noble Truths were elaborated in this fashion:

The suffering to which all existence is subject is fourfold. Suffering attends birth, decay, disease, death.

Suffering may be defined in four ways:

The presence of objects we hate is suffering.

The absence of things we love is suffering.

Not to obtain what we desire is suffering.

The clinging to existence is suffering.

The eightfold path to cessation of suffering is by right belief, right aspiration, right speech, right conduct, right occupation, right endeavor, right memory, right meditation. The perfect condition is Nirvana, in which desire is totally extinct. While one lives the goal is to approach as nearly as possible to a condition free from desire.

All this is a far cry from the doctrine of self-mortification. Buddha did not teach self-torture as the means to a holy life, but distinctly revolted from it. He had tried that in his six years of struggle, and his success was like the effort to tie knots in the air.

For a time he considered whether it was worth while to waste these truths on an unappreciative world. There was little in them to attract the heedless.

Unappreciative World?

Even self-torture has an element of delight in the degree to which one may comfort his soul at the expense of the suffering of his body, and perhaps the added joy of being admired as a holy man; but the quiet life of subdued desire has little appeal to any sense of the heroic. So Buddha did not rush out to spread his doctrine. But the two merchants who brought him food after his four weeks under the trees became his first lay converts, and others followed.

Gradually he moved farther out into the suffering world, carrying his message of the elimination of pain by the elimination of desire, a doctrine which necessarily forbids the infliction of pain on others.

Admitted Women

New disciples came until there were hundreds who wore the yellow robe and followed him in a fellowship of free democracy. He even permitted, after a threefold refusal, an order of women disciples.

"Their admission means that the Good Law shall not endure for a thousand years but only for five hundred," he said. "For as when the mildew falls on a field the rice is doomed, so when women leave the household life and join an order, that order will not long endure. Yet as water is held by a strong dyke, so I have established a barrier of regulations which are not to be transgressed."

He held out no promise of ease or comfort. The disciples slept on the ground with no cover but the yellow robe. He could have said, and did say in effect: "If any man will come after me, let him take up the cross."

Tomorrow—Buddha—a Human Man.

TRAFFIC RESUMED ON HALIBURTON LINE

Track Still Flooded, But Train Passes Through Safely.

LINDSAY, April 13.—Traffic on the Lindsay-Haliburton branch of the C.N.R. was resumed yesterday. Bridges have been repaired, the waters have subsided, and the Highlands of Ontario will soon be ready again to receive the 1928 tourists. There is still about two feet of water left, but the morning train passed over in safety. On Tuesday the ballast train went up to Haliburton, and it was then thought the line could not be cleared before Friday.

The flood, however, had not damaged the track as much as was expected, and while there is still a lot of work to be done in re-ballasting, it is expected by the officials that a steady service can now be maintained.

The Scugog River at Lindsay is very high, and still rising, in fact the water is flowing over two wharves. This is a rise of some three feet from its usual height, but unless the locks give way there is no danger of the town being flooded.

IN THE MATTER OF THE ESTATE OF WILLIAM GRAHAM FERGUSON, Late of the City of Peterborough, in the County of Peterborough, formerly Local Manager of the Hydro Electric Power Commission, Deceased.

NOTICE is hereby given, pursuant to The Trustee Act, R.S.O. 1927, Chapter 150, That all Creditors and others having CLAIMS or DEMANDS against the Estate of the said WILLIAM GRAHAM FERGUSON, who died on or about the Twenty-ninth Day of February, A.D. 1928, at the City of Peterborough, are required on or before the Fifth Day of May, A.D. 1928, to send by post, prepaid or delivered, to the undersigned Solicitor for the Executors of the Estate of the said Deceased, their Christian names and surnames, addresses and descriptions, the full particulars in writing of their Claims, a statement of their Account and the nature of the security (if any) held by them.

AND FURTHER TAKE NOTICE, That after such last mentioned date the said Executors will proceed to distribute the Assets of the said Deceased among the Parties entitled thereto, having regard only to the Claims of which they shall then have notice. And that the said Executors shall not be liable for the said Assets or any part thereof to any Person or Persons whose Claim shall not have been received by them at the date of such distribution.

R. R. HALL,
Peterborough, Ontario,
Solicitor for the Executors.

Auction Sale Of Sheep

I have received instructions from MR. THOMAS PARKER to sell by Public Auction on his premises, Lot 23, Concession 6, Alnwick Township, 6 miles west of Hastings, south side of Rice Lake, 4 miles north-east of Roseneath, on THURSDAY, APRIL 19TH, at 1.30 o'clock sharp, all the following: 100 Breeding Ewes, all under 5 years of age, will be sold under the hammer to the highest bidder. The above mentioned Ewes are due to lamb April 25th. This is a grand opportunity for parties wishing to purchase sheep to attend this sale. 1 Percheron Colt, 1 year old; 1 Cook Stove; 1 Box Stove; 1 Turnip Pulper, Massey-Harris.

No reserve, as Mr. Parker is in very poor health, and is not able to look after the Sheep, consequently they will all be sold.

Terms of Sale—$10.00 and under cash, over that amount 7 months' credit will be given to parties furnishing approved joint notes bearing interest at 6 per cent. per annum.

IN POLICE COURT

A local man, after one week's remand on a charge of vagrancy pleaded guilty this morning and was given another chance by Magistrate Langley to make good on condition that he immediately leave the city.

OBITUARY

MRS NICOLA BINACO

At the family residence, 284 Smith street, there passed away this morning, April 13, Mrs. Nicola Binaco, aged forty-one years. The late Mrs. Bianco had been ill for some time. Her passing is mourned by a sorrowing husband, and eight children, Mary, Madeline, Phillomine, James, Joseph, Albert, Anthony, and Patrick.

The funeral will take place from the above address on Sunday, April 15, at 2.30 p.m., proceeding to St. Peter's Cathedral and thence to St. Peter's Cemetery for interment.

JAMES BROWN.

Following a long illness, a result of the ravages of the war, the death occurred this morning at Nicholls Hospital of James Brown, of 218 Perry Street.

Deceased was born in Scotland, and came to Canada some eight years ago. He served throughout the war of 1914-1918 with the Royal Highlanders (the Black Watch), attaining the rank of sergeant, and was severely wounded and gassed at Loos. Since coming to Peterborough he has been employed at the Canadian General Electric Company, and his death will come as a shock to his many friends in that plant.

He was very popular with the sporting fraternity, having been associated with the popular soccer team of the Caledonian Club, both as a player and also as a representative of that club on the Peterborough District Football Association.

The funeral will take place from the family residence to-morrow at 3 p.m., Rev. William McDonald conducting the service. Interment will be in the Little Lake Cemetery.

KIWANIANS TOLD OF GLADSTONE

Great Statesman's Work For Empire Discussed By F. D. Kerr, K.C.

CLUB STANDS FIRST.

Peterborough Kiwanians to-day studied history—and liked it! The life of William Ewart Gladstone, his work, and its bearing on the history of the British Empire, was the subject chosen by Speaker F. D. Kerr, K.C., at the regular luncheon, and judging from the comments of Kiwanians at its conclusion, the address held much valuable information, interestingly organized and delivered.

Mr. Kerr, who has spoken before the local club on several occasions in the past, was introduced by President Joe John. Avoiding discussion of the policies of Gladstone, he did mention that great man's idea of what constituted or indicated England's greatness—the wonderful continuity of fine poetry from Chaucer to Tennyson. The speaker than went on to discuss his relations with various other statesmen, among them Beaconsfield; his attitude toward the Irish and South African problems, and his work for Queen Victoria. In conclusion, Mr. Kerr urged his auditors to read the biographies of Gladstone and Beaconsfield.

There were various other interesting phases of the meeting. Jack Chadwick, Mr. Kerr, and Jack Nelson won Jack Comstock's booster prizes, and Vern. Morphet checked up on the attendance of Kiwanians at the rehearsals for the play, while Director Adams also spoke quite favorably of progress being made.

In behalf of the Women's Canadian Club, Art. Reynolds urged his fellow clubmen to respond to the League of Nations Society's membership drive, being sponsored here by the Canadian Club.

Another item of interest was the announcement made by President John that according to the K-ray district magazine, the local club has taken first place in the efficiency contest of the blue division (for clubs of seventy-five or less). That is, the Peterborough club had had a 95 per cent efficiency record in its activities. In the K-ray magazine was also to be seen a resume of Jack Marshall's address delivered at the Lindsay club's charter night entitled "Kiwanians, What of To-morrow?"

Following a well rendered piano solo by Max Parnall, Mr. Marshall moved a vote of thanks to the speaker and to the young pianist, after which the meeting closed.

WEDDING BELLS

COON—DOCHERTY.

St. Paul's United church, Avenue road, Toronto, beautifully decorated with palms and Easter lilies, was the scene of a very pretty but quiet wedding on Saturday, April 7, when Lulu M., only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Docherty, Seaforth, Ont., became the bride of Dr. A. Willard Coon, Norfolk, Va., son of Mrs. Coon and the late Rev. C. H. Coon, Peterborough, Ont., Rev. W. Harold Young officiating. The bride who was given in marriage by her father was charmingly gowned in Athenia rose georgette with point lace, her picture hat being the same shade of georgette trimmed with French flowers, and carrying Ophelia roses and lily-of-the-valley. Following the ceremony, the guests motored to the Hotel Waverley, where the wedding luncheon was served, after which Dr. and Mrs. Coon left for New York and Atlantic City, the bride travelling in beige kasha enemble, amber fx fur, and hat and shoes to match. Dr. and Mrs. Coon will make their future home at Norfolk, Va.

CHEMONG LINE IS AUTHORIZED

Construction Starts on Electric Pole Line North From City.

PRESENTATION MADE.

Manager R. L. Dobbin, at a special meeting of the Utilities Commission held yesterday afternoon, announced that the Hydro-Electric Commission of Ontario had passed the order authorizing the construction of the power line to Chemong, and that work had already started on its erection.

At the close of the meeting the members of the Commission and the staff presented D. G. Melton, the accountant for the past year and a half, who is leaving to-morrow, with a club bag. John Crane made the presentation, and short addresses were made by Chairman Gordon S. Matthews, E. R. Shirley, R. L. Dobbin and S. R. Armstrong. They all wished him much success in his new field of labor with the Canadian Woollens, and paid tribute to the way Mr. Melton had organized the accounting department of the Commission and to the great efficiency with which he had discharged his work. Mr. Melton made a suitable reply, in which he thanked the members of the Commission and the staff for their co-operation.

The Commission granted Mr. Melton two weeks' salary in lieu of the fact that since he became attached to the local body he had only had one week's holidays.

An order for $33.49 was received from the H.E.P.C. as interest on the 13th bill, which this year was a surplus for the local body.

GIVES ADDRESS ON REMOVAL OF UNIVERSITY

V. Evan Gray, LL.D., Addresses Representative Gathering of Members From Baptist Churches.

JOLLY SUPPER HELD.

Tells Reasons Why Should Support Removal of McMaster University to Hamilton.

Dealing with the removal of McMaster University from Toronto to Hamilton, and outlining that institution's contribution to the individual, the denomination and the country as striking reasons why Baptists should support the removal, V. Evan Gray, LL.B., Legal Counsel for Associated Insurance Companies of Ontario, Toronto, last night addressed a representative gathering of members from the three local Baptist churches. His address was given following supper in the Sunday school hall of Murray Street Baptist church and proved a most comprehensive survey of the University's life and growth.

The supper, provided by the Women's Association of the church, was enjoyed by a large number, there being six long tables. The decorations were carried out in red and white color scheme while above the platform was inscribed on red background the single word "McMaster." The Rev. Sutcliffe, pastor of Murray Street Church, presided most acceptably throughout. He it was who introduced the various speakers of the evening, as well as a quartette comprising Messrs. H. H. Graham, Charles Westbrook, Dr. Graham and himself, which was heard to advantage in several well varied selections.

Rev. W. S. Edgar.

The Rev. Mr. Edgar, pastor of Gilmour Memorial Church, was called upon early in the meeting. Briefly he referred to the advantages to be gained by McMaster in removing to Hamilton and to its value to the denomination in the past as well as the present and future. Mr. Edgar's address was rich in humorous anecdotes and seemed to pave the way to the main address of the evening.

V. Evan Gray, L.L.B.

Introduced by Joseph J. Wearing, a friend and fellow graduate of McMaster, Mr. Gray, after expressing his pleasure at being present, stated that to be connected with the movement even in a small way, afforded him real satisfaction. He said in part:

"One million and a half dollars is a sum not easily visualized, but there is another phase of the campaign to show Baptists in Ontario and Quebec just what McMaster means to them. The campaign, carried through, will show that Baptists are behind McMaster and interested in its success.

Annual Banquet of Chamber of Commerce Will Be Held That Evening.

HEADS CANADIAN CHAMBER.

A. M. Dollar, president of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce, and also of the Dollar Steamship Lines, Vancouver, B.C., who is now in Europe, has wired the secretary of the Canadian Chamber, Montreal, that he will be in Peterborough on the night of April 26, with William Birks, of Montreal, chairman of the executive of the Canadian chamber. Both of these gentlemen will address the annual banquet meeting of the Peterborough Chamber of Commerce.

At an executive meeting of the local organization, held last evening, it was definitely decided to hold the annual banquet in the Empress Hotel at 6.30 p.m. of that date (April 26). C. G. Graham, proprietor, having granted use of the main dining room and agreed to prepare a special dinner for the members and guests of the Chamber of Commerce.

Regret Resignation.

Another item of business dealt with last night, was the resignation of Hector McLeod. Mr. McLeod's resignation was regretfully accepted, his services as chief clerk having been sincerely appreciated. He has become known to the public as assistant issuer of auto license plates and permits, as this work was his special charge in addition to the rather involved book-keeping of the chamber and allied organizations.

Mr. McLeod has accepted a position on the permanent staff of the Western Clock Company.

Winnipeg Aviatrix Becomes Second Woman Member of Quiet Birdmen's Organization

NEW YORK, April 14 (Canadian Press). — Miss Helen McGregor, Winnipeg aviatrix and pianist, announced here yesterday that she had become the second woman member of the Quiet Birdmen's organization, composed of famous fliers. The other woman member is Ruth Elder, who with George Haldeman, pilot, was rescued in mid-Atlantic when their monoplane, the American Girl, was forced down while on a trans-oceanic trip.

Miss McGregor said the ceremony of induction took place at Dearborn, Mich., on Saturday. She said that she completed the aerial tests required for qualification in a Laird biplane, and was later the recipient of the "QB" button, signifying membership in the organization, which includes Lindbergh, Chamberlin, Byrd, and other aviators who have achieved world fame.

After flying from Winnipeg to Detroit in Commander Richard Byrd's South Pole plane to fulfill a musical engagement, Miss McGregor came on to New York by train. During the trip from Winnipeg to Detroit, Miss McGregor handled the giant plane under the direction of Floyd Bennett and Bernt Balchen, the pilots. Before leaving for New York, Miss McGregor was given a private hearing by Ossip Gabrilowitsch, conductor of the Detroit Symphony. She will fly back to Detroit to-day, she said.

FAIR BOARD NEEDS MORE ROOM FOR CATTLE, POULTRY AND DOGS

Flower and Vegetable Departments Also Seeking Permanent Quarters.

MORE EXHIBITORS.

Breeders From Quebec and Western Ontario Coming To Fair This Year.

There can be no hold up with the progress of the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition, and the directors are being forced to make more room for the exhibits that will come to the big fair this year. They must go ahead with a building program for exhibitors of live stock from all over the Province of Ontario and from parts of Quebec have shown their desire to come and show in Peterborough at this year's exhibition. A large cattle barn must be built, for from present prospects the entry this year will at least be several hundred more than in 1927, when more than fifty head of cattle had to be tied outside. A poultry barn and a dog kennel are being demanded, and the directors in charge of the vegetable and flower departments are seeking buildings.

Last night's meeting of the Board of Directors was the most optimistic and largest held this year. William Knox, managing director, read correspondence from breeders of live stock assuring the board that they would be in Peterborough in September. Many of them are Canada's leading live stock breeders, and they promised to bring full lists of entries in their respective classes. The M. J. O'Brien Limited, of Renfrew, want to bring a large entry of Hereford cattle. The Arnold Stables from Greenville, Quebec, wish to show Percheron and Belgian horses. McCallum of Brampton wants to bring Clydesdale horses. J. Milligan & Sons, of Cannington, promise to bring two carloads of Guernsey cattle. H. McGee, of The T. Eaton Company, is desirous of bringing an exhibit of Shorthorn cattle.

Guernsey cattle and Chevlot sheep have been added to the prize-list. Last year $6,900 was paid out in prizes, and this year the directors expect to pay out at least $7,500.

Manager Knox was appointed to take up with W. H. Bradburn, the matter of getting an increased grant for the prize-list from the Department of Agriculture. When the list was $2,400 the Department granted $800, and now when it has been increased to $10,000 in cash prizes it has not been increased, as $800 is considered the limit.

Reg. Turner suggested that a committee be appointed to inquire into ways and means of increasing the gate, as he felt there were sections of Central Ontario where the people did not know about the big fair that was held in Peterborough, and hence did not attend.

A suggestion was made that directors be sent out to the farmers' gatherings in Central Ontario and tell them about the big exhibition in Peterborough. The advertising will probably be extended this year and a little less done in the city, as it was felt that The Examiner advertised the exhibition to the fullest extent in this district.

A new cattle barn, 180 feet long, which would house 100 cattle, was estimated to cost $3,000, and a committee was appointed to look over the sites available on the grounds and bring in a report at the next meeting of the directors.

The automobile dealers have suggested erecting a large building to house their exhibits, but at present nothing has been decided. The plans suggested provide for a building with a basement that may be used as a dining-room and will also house some of the other exhibits.

Dr. J. J. Graig, one of the new members on the Board, was given a hearty welcome when he made his first appearance at the meeting.

A woman may be outspoken but never out-talked.

MANY HAPPY RETURNS.

THE HON. G. N. GORDON, K. C. Who celebrates a Birthday Anniversary To-morrow.

ROBERT WYLLIE BEST VIOLINIST

ALL JUDGING DONE.

The first violin competition in connection with the Boys' Hobby Show was held yesterday afternoon before an appreciative audience. The judges were Dr. Park, Miss Muriel Bridge and F. G. Mann. The competition was very close and the judges were compelled to go into minute details in order to make the final awards. The Hobby Show medal and first diploma is awarded to Robert J. Wyllie, of 227 McDonnel Street, with Grant Breckenridge and Kenneth Gadd receiving second and third respectively. At the conclusion, in announcing the final results, Dr. Park gave a review of such faults as had been noted by the judges and took occasion to pass on some useful criticism to competitors and their teachers. He stressed the importance of correct bowing and urged young students to pay close attention to the music as written or arranged—some competitors obviously taking liberties. With yesterday's performance as a start it is evident that there is a very definite place in the plan of the Hobby Show for the department of music. Enlargements can be made to include piaon and possibly vocal. to include piano and possibly vocal. Judging was done in the morning and place cards were all up before the afternoon opening. Here, as in the violin section ,the judges were very often up against real difficulties in the awarding of decisions. The merit of the exhibits has been commented on very favorably by the judges and those who have viewed them.

held this morning on the tennis held thits morning on the tennis courts but of necessity a postponement until next Saturday morning has been arranged. In the meantime if there is any boy in the city who desires to make an entry for his dog in the coming show he can do so by calling at the Y.M.C.A.

The Hobby Show will be open this afternoon and this evening until 10.15. The orchestra will render another snappy program in the main lobby. Checkers, chess and pingpong for the championship of the city will be played during the afternoon. The mouth organ contest in the main lobby at 8 p.m. should be an interesting event.

Crowds At Field Cheer Wrong Plane

Mitchell Field, N. Y., April 14. Canadian Press. — A crowd of about 1000 persons broke into cheers and rushed the police lines guarding the flying field, yesterday morning, when a plane the watchers believed to be the transatlantic Bremen swooped to earth.

When the plane proved to be the Junkers C-38, a sister ship of the Bremen, and to have arrived after a non-stop flight of but one mile from Curtiss Field, the crowd groaned and retreated from the field.

The crowds began gathering early and by 8 o'clock the road along the edge of the field was crowded. The weather was perfect—sunny skies and a fresh westerly breeze—and optimism was general.

The German monoplane was not seriously expected for several hours, but the watchers scanned the skies ceaselessly.

At 8.45 a ship with the word Junkers visible on the fuselage, shot suddenly into view, and the crowd yelled with delight.

"There she is," was the shout. "She's made it!"

But observers with exact information saw at once that the ship was not the Bremen

ROADS LEADING FROM CITY BAD

Bad Spots On Provincial Highways Several Miles Out.

EAST ROADS VERY SOFT.

The following bulletin is issued by the Peterborough Automobile Club this morning. It is based on information received by phone from various points on the arterial highways and roads and should govern the actions of Peterborough motorists over the week-end.

Peterborough-Port Hope Highway: Word from Bewdley reveals the fact that cars are still being towed through and it will be a few days yet before this section is fit for travel. A half mile south of Bewdley the motorist will encounter troublesome and even dangerous stretches.

Peterborough-Hastings road: To go by way or Norwood one is at least assured of getting through with careful driving. Rumors are that the road is getting better, though today's storm may undo the improvement of the last few days. The above information was supplied by Walter Fowlds, of Hastings, who advises that unless it is essential to travel, people should not go on the east roads for at least another week.

Lindsay - Peterborough Highway: Information from Omemee is to the effect that cars can get through, though several were stuck on Friday and had to be towed out. In the vicinity of Reaboro there are several bad stretches where motorists will continue to encounter difficuly for some time to come.

Lakefield Road: Definite reports from Lakefield were not available to the P.A.C. this morning, but several local motorists reported serious trouble on this section of road Friday.

The Millbrook road leading off the Peterborough-Port Hope Highway is in very bad condition, according to the postmaster at Millbrook, who stated that at a point about four miles from the highway it is especialy bad, with only the lighter cars being able to get through.

In summing it all up, said the secretary of the P.A.C., "the above information shows that all roads in and out of Peterborough are unfit for travel, especially by heavy trucks and the storm to-day will be certain to make them worse. We will try to give motorists further bulletins as the roads improve."

CHEMONG BRIDGE IS IMPASSABLE

High water and ice conditions in the lake have made the Chemong bridge unfit for traffic, according to Reeve J. A. Middleton of Smith, one of the members of the committee of the County Council appointed to look after the bridge.

At the east end the bridge has broken away from the government pier and at the Ennismore side it is completely under water. As soon as the water goes down repairs will be Berlin Also Rejoices Over Information Fliers Had Won Atlantic Honors.

DUBLIN, April 14.—(A. P.)—Dublin throbbed with excitement last night over an erroneous report published in some newspapers announced in movie houses and posted in shop windows that the Bremen landed safely yesterday afternoon in New York.

The news spread through the whole countryside and was even sent to President Cosgrave and Mrs. James Fitzmaurice, whose husband is co-pilot of the Bremen with Captain Hermann Koehl.

Then just as word began to circulate that this report could not be substantiated there came an apparently authoritative message from Berlin saying that the Bremen was safe on Mitchel Field. The result was that even as late as ten o'clock last night, everybody in the streets of Dublin believed the flight was successful.

Crowds Throng Streets.

Streets were jammed and such crowds surrounded newspaper offices and moving picture theatres that it was almost impossible to approach them. There were huge crowds also at Baldonnel Airdrome, where the brother officers of Colonel Fitzmaurice were awaiting word from their chief.

One Dublin newspaper came out with an edition announcing the actual arrival of the plane in New York.

Mrs. Fitzmaurice, watching all day in her home at Baldonnel air station, eagerly received the reports, but was undismayed even when definite word was lacking. She forced a brave smile to her face and said:

"What more can I do, but hope?"

The eight year old daughter of Colonel Fitzmaurice played in the yard of her home with an Alsatian pup to which she has given the name "Brema." The rollicking child tried out on the dog a few words of German which Baron Gunther von Huenefeld taught her while he was as Baldonnel awaiting the start of the trans-Atlantic venture.

Berlin Rejoices.

BERLIN, April 14.—(A.P.)— The population of the German capital retired last night uninformed that it had been misled into believing that to Germany belonged the honor of the first aeroplane crossing of the Atlantic from East to West. It was almost midnight before authentic word became known that reports of the safe landing of the plane on Long Island were erroneous.

The misleading information caused tremendous enthusiasm in all public resorts, in hotels theatres, cinemas and on the streets. The word was broadcast from radio stations, and some of the evening papers announced it as news and printed it with congratulatory comment.

TIE-BREAKER PUZZLE.

We wish to remind the contestants in the tie-breaker puzzle that Monday, April 16th, is the last day of the contest and therefore, all solutions should be in the mail on Monday night, or if contestants wish to bring them into the Examiner personally, we will receive these on Tuesday, but this will be positively the last day. We ask all contestants to refrain from telephoning for any results of the contest until the announcement is made, as considerable checking of the solutions has to be done before we can be sure of the winners. This will take at least a week or possibly longer before accurate results will be obtained, but we can assure all contestants that the contest department will make every effort to give the results as soon as possible, after the contest ends no information whatever will be given over the telephone until the final results are announced.

Mysterious Setting For Gold Transfer

LONDON, April 14 (Canadian Press). — With all the setting of a high seas mystery, five milldollars of Soviet gold claimed by France and refused acceptnce in the United States, was transferred from the steamer Dresden to another German vessel in midchannel last night.

Greenly Island, in St. Lawrence, Is Terminus of First Flight Westward Across Atlantic

LANDING PLACE IS OUT OF WAY FISHING STATION WITH WINTER POPULATION OF 14 WATCHMEN

HALIFAX, April 14 (Canadian Press). — When a wireless message from Point Amour Marconi Station was relayed to the Bureau of the Canadian Press here from its correspondent at St. John's, Nfld., at eight o'clock last night, it was not long before the anxiously awaiting world received news of the safe landing at Greenly Island, Quebec, of the German plane Bremen, with its crew of three men.

But before the initial flash came, there had been hours of anxiety and waiting, not only in newspaper offices, but on the street. Everyone seemed interested. From coast to coast and continent to continent, people scanned the meagre bulletins which reported, at various times, that the fliers were safe in various sections of the country. But, tacked on the end of most of the messages, were the words: "This has not been confirmed." And as three o'clock, the hour of the Bremen's expected arrival in New York came and passed, with still no authentic news of the plane, it seemed as though three more air adventurers had met death.

Suddenly, like a bolt from the blue, came the flash that brought Greenly Island, a desolate little spot, before the eyes of the world. The first message picked up at St. John's was "Point Amour: German plane at Greenly Island. Wind south-east, thick." That message travelled around the world probably as fast as any message ever did. In newspaper press rooms men ran here and there, setting type and getting the message into headlines. Telegraphers concentrated on their sets and every effort was made to get further details.

Summed up, the story was as follows:

The Bremen left Baldonnel Airdrome at 12.38 eastern standard time, on Thursday. She was reported from Costello, Galway, two hours later, and was then heading out to sea. She was believed to have been sighted 1,200 miles out, but this report was not confirmed. From the time she left Costello, there was no authentic news of the plane until last night, although reports all day yesterday located her at various points along the coast. However, while the majority of the reports were being traced, the Bremen, short of gasoline, and after bucking head winds for many miles, had dropped on to the ice at Greenly Island.

Efforts to reach the fliers were begun immediately, and a Junkers plane was ordered to proceed from New York. However, this flight was later called off, owing to the dangerous landing conditions. Meanwhile, the steamer Montcalm was diverted from her job of breaking the ice and sent to undertake the release of the fliers. However, it will take some time to break a way through to Greenly Island.

Crew is Safe

The members of the Bremen's crew, however, are safe. They will have ample food and shelter while they remain on the island, which has a winter population of fourteen. These persons act as keepers of the large fishing station operated during summer months. It is well equipped with provisions. The region about the island is almost inaccessible at this season. The coast is icebound and there is little likelihood that it will be cleared for another month. Along the coast are scattered settlements, few with more than a hundred inhabitant and communication between them is by foot or dog train.

Meanwhile, in all parts of the world, the celebration which began last night is being kept up to-day. Ireland simply went wild and immediate steps were taken to promote Commandant Fitzmaurice, co-pilot of the plane, to Colonel in the Saorstat army for his part in the flight, it is understood. It was three o'clock in the morning when the news arrived there, and at that time only the highest government officials and relatives of the flier definitely knew of his safety. When the news reached the streets, though, a tremendous celebration began.

The news was received with cheers in the Canadian House of Parliament and at various gatherings throughout the country. German cables report that the country is in transports of joy at the safety of their fliers, and honors will be heaped upon them

Youths Let Out On Suspended Sentence

MIDLAND, Ont., April 14 (Canadian Press). — The thirty boys convicted a week ago by their own admission on seventy charges of theft and housebreaking were allowed to go on suspended sentence yesterday afternoon when 30 business men became sponsors for the juvenile offenders.

For the third time this winter the residence of Mrs. F. W. Jeffrey has been entered during her absence in the south. On Thursday night an entrance was obtained through a cellar window, and after smashing two inside doors, the contents of every trunk and dresser were strewn about the house, though nothing appears to have been stolen.

GROPED THROUGH FOG TO LAKE; PLANE'S CREW TELLS OF FLIGHT

Landing Made On Small Lake On Island After Four Hours Search.

MACHINE DAMAGED.

Cannot Take Off To-day To Continue Flight—Government Offers Co-operation.

QUEBEC, April 14. — (Canadian Press). — The Bremen was enveloped in a thick fog and got lost, being forced to land on Greenly Island, it is stated in the first report of the landing received here shortly before noon to-day from the airmen themselves. This is the first message to be received by the Dominion Government Telegraph Service, the landing was made in a small lake on the island and the plane did not appear to be much damaged and the airmen, despite the fact that they had spent a hazardous four hours groping about in a thick fog, were in first class condition. The landing was about five thirty yesterday afternoon.. Early to-day, the aviators intended to fix up their machine and continue to New York. On inspection, however, it was found to be more seriously damaged than at first thought and it is believed that the machine cannot leave Greenly Island for a few days.

No Need To Send Plane.

OTTAWA, April 14. — (Canadian Pfress). — An official statement issued to-day by the Department of National Defence in regard to sending an airplane to Greenly Island states:

"Hon. J. L. Ralston, Minister of National Defense, has taken the advice of his technical officers and carefully discussed with them the feasibility and desirability of sending a relief plane to Greenly Island to the assistance of the crew of the airplane "Bremen," as a result, the following wire was dispatched this morning to Captain Koehl at Greenly Island: 'What are your needs in connection with continuing flight, will be glad to cooperate..'

"Under present weather conditions and having regard to the coast conditions along the north shore of the St. Lawrence, and the lack of communication it is thought that the practical route, if an emergency flight were necessary, would be over land from Montreal to Sydney, and by using Sydney as a base, a considerable shorter jump would be obtained, thus avoiding the danger of fuel shortage and keeping more closely in touch wtih communications.

"The plane which would give the greatest cruising radius, is the 'Douglas seaplane,' 3 seater, 425 H.P. wasp engine, and it would be desirable to have it equipped with floats. This plane is now at number 1 depot at Victoria Island. Another plane which might be used is the Fairchild, five passenger but this has considerably more restricted cruising radius.

"The flight is a distinctly hazardous one and it is not considered that the communications so far received, indicate any emergency which would call for taking the risks involved."

Planes From Quebec.

QUEBEC, April 14. — (Canadian Press). — Two planes of the Canadian Trans-Continental Airways are leaving Murray Bay to-day and tomorrow for Greenly Island to rescue the three Trans-Atlantic Airmen. It is the intention of the pilot of the first plane, which left at eleven o'clock, to bring the airmen back to Murray Bay. The planes used are specially fitted for winter air mail service.

French Fliers Finish Flight Around World

PARIS, April 14 (Canadian Press). — Diudonne Costes and Joseph Lebrix, French fliers, completed their great world-girdling trip to-day, landing at Lebourget at 6.13 p.m., in the midst of a tumultuous welcome.

FEW PATRONS VISIT MARKET

Inclement Weather Keeps Many Away—Eggs Are Plentiful.

SOLD IN GRADES.

The basket section of the farmers' market overflowed with eggs this morning. There were scores of dozens unsold at a late hour and few patrons, owing to the inclement weather.

Grading of the eggs is strictly followed out by the vendors. An inspector makes weekly trips to the market, but it was reported that his classification for the market required only "large" and "small" sections, with corresponding prices. However, the ladies have gone in for classifications that call for "Fresh Extras," "Extras" and "Firsts." This is one place where "first" isn't first at all, but third. And they are required also, to candle their eggs, a chore which doesn't appeal to most of them.

Prices ranged all the way from 30 cents a dozen to 40 cents, this morning, the latter quotation for the outsized eggs which the Black Minorcas contribute to the supply. A lady who sells these eggs says they weigh 30½ ounces to the dozen. The weight for "Extras" is placed at 24 ounces to the dozen, for "Specials" at 25 ounces, and for "firsts" at 22½ ounces.

Butter was 42 and 43 cents a pound and chickens sold at 33 and 35 cents a pound, being very scarce.

Honey was 10 and 14 cents a pound for the mixed and clover varieties.

Maple syrup was 70 cents a quart at one stand. Another man had two varieties, asking 65 cents a quart for one and 70 cents for the second.

Potatoes were $1.75 a bag.

There was little produce offered on the open market.

CAMPBELLFORD FEARS DELUGE

NO DANGER OF FLOOD.

CAMPBELLFORD, April 14.—There does not appear to be a shortage of topics for conversation on the streets here. The new pavement, lighting system and high water are being discussed practically everywhere. Various rumors have been current which have not yet been proven authentic. At one time yesterday afternoon The Examiner was told that the Peterboro dam had broken just before noon. The exact hour was given as 10.30, but the noon edition of The Examiner contained no such report. Thus the excellent gossip was floored.

Later in the day, it was rumored from an unknown source that the worst flood in years was sweeping down the waterway. A local merchant, hearing the stories, said that he intended to remove the books from his place of business and understood that others were following a similar course after business hours. Whether their labors were or were not in vain remains to be seen. The water level in the centre of the town still remains approximately the same, although the current is abnormally strong. It is believed that the present system is capable of handling a much larger flow of water without any serious damage or dangerous situation arising.

There is no indication of any great increase in the flow of water, according to information from Peterborough Canal officials. Conditions will remain as they are for a few days, but unless some unforeseen occurrence changes matters they will right themselves without causing any trouble.

INTERESTING TALK ON MISSION FIELD

Rev. Joseph Wilks Tells Millbrook Circle About Work in Angola.

MILLBROOK, April 14.—The Rev. Joseph Wilks addressed the Easter meeting of the Golden Links Mission Circle, held at the home of the president, Miss Jean L. Burnham. Using a map to illustrate his remarks, Mr. Wilks spoke on the United Church mission field in Angola, on the west coast of Africa, with a territory of nearly 500,000 miles and a population of approximately 2,000,000 people, mostly black. In a part of this mission field, Mr. Wilks spent four years of his life, going out with Bishop Taylor's party, the idea being a self-supporting mission. Much interesting information relative to the work being accomplished, and a number of personal experiences while on this far-distant field, kept the listeners keenly attentive throughout. A number of curios brought by the speaker from Portuguese West Africa, were shown, including several samples of basketry such as a flour sieve; a tea set, a fetish; and there was also some fine bead work and embroidery. A gospel of Saint John translated into the native language by a member of the party with which Mr. Wilks went to Saint Paul de Loanda, and from there into the interior some hundreds of miles, was among the many articles of interest.

Miss Marjorie Skitch, the delegate to the Presbyterial convention held at Port Hope, gave a most comprehensive report of the gathering. Announcement was made of the W.M.S. branch meeting which will be held at Lindsay on May 8, 9, and 10, and decision was made to have representatives in attendance.

ITALY CRUSHES TRIBAL REVOLT

Troops Win Three-Day Fight Over Tribesmen Near Cyrene.

BOMBING PLANES USED.

ROME, April 14 (United Press).—While Italy was rejoicing over the escape from assassination of King Victor Emmanuel, news came from Tripoli Tania of another Italian victory over rebel tribesmen in Africa.

Three columns of Italian troops, supported by armored cars and bombing airplanes, routed rebels after a three-day fight, 75 miles south of Cyrene.

Two hundred rebels and one Italian were killed and 70 rebels were captured. Four Italians were wounded. As in previous engagements, the Italians captured rifles, live stock, tents and foodstuffs. Two airplanes were damaged, but their crews were unhurt.

EASTER AT LAKEFIELD.

All Churches Observe Special Christian Festival.

LAKEFIELD, April 14. — Easter was duly marked in all the village churches by special services and music.

St. John's

In St. John's Church there were two celebrations of the Holy Communion; one at 8 o'clock and one at 11 o'clock service. Both were largely attended. Simper's anthem, "The Lord is My Strength," was sung both morning and evening. The Te Deum was also by Simper. Maunder's Communion service was used at the 11 o'clock celebration, and in the evening, Turner's setting of the Magnificat and Nunc Dimittis were sung. The Rev. W. J. Creighton, M.A., was the preacher at both services, the sermon on both occasions being on the Resurrection and its meaning to the Christian world.

St. Paul's

In St. Paul's Church, the Easter services were marked by special music and the congregation was glad to welcome back their beloved pastor, the Rev. J. J. Garvey, who for two months was in Florida for his health. Father Garvey is much better and has resumed his parish work.

Regent Street United Church

The Regent Street Church services were marked by special music suitable to the season and at the morning service, the Rev. S. A. Kemp gave an excellent discourse on the message of the Risen Lord. Following the usual custom, the evening service was in charge of the W.M.S. and was carried out in a manner creditable to the ladies. The speaker was Miss Grace Sykes, a missionary on furlough from Honan, China.

Presbyterian Church

The congregation of the Presbyterian Church, of which the Rev. James Ross is pastor, were recipients of two valuable gifts from members of St. Andrew's Church, Ottawa.

Miss Lamont, the field secretary of the W.M.S., spoke to the ladies of St. Andrew's of the needs of minority groups, and mentioned the group in Lakefield, with the result that two handsome collection plates were sent by a committee of ladies, accompanied by the following letter:

To the Rev. James Ross:

In a recent letter from Miss Lamont, field secretary W.M.S., she spoke of the hardships suffered by the Presbyterians of Lakefield, in the loss of their church and equipment and of their courage and steadfastness in the facing of many difficulties. A small group of women in St. Andrew's Church, Ottawa, desiring to express their kindly thought, are sending two collection plates as an Easter gift, with the warmest greetings and their earnest prayer that God will abundantly bless the efforts of the congregation in the upbuilding of their church. Yours sincerely, (Miss) Charlotte Ross.

Mrs. J. N. Brownlee, also of St. Andrew's Church, Ottawa, sent a handsome pulpit Bible. These gifts were gratefully acknowledged.

Knox United and Baptist

In Knox United Church and the Baptist Church, special services marked the occasion of the Resurrection of Our Lord. In the former church the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper was administered at the morning service.

Fire Brigade

The pumper of the Lakefield Fire Department has been mounted on a truck and put in good shape for future use.

While the pumping capacity of the engine has not been increased, the question of transportation has been materially improved as the engine can be moved about now without recourse to the village team. Provision has been made for an auxiliary pumper which can be installed at any time, and probably will be purchased in the near, if not the immediate, future.

The firemen express their citizenship in service and it is for the remainder of the ratepayers to cooperate. The work of the installation was done in a capable and extremely thorough manner by Gordon Scriver and Charles Hunter.

Conqueror of Sea Deplores Attempts

LONDON, April 14.—Sir Arthur Whitten Brown, who was Sir John Alcock's navigator on the first direct trans-Atlantic flight from Newfoundland to Ireland in 1919, does not favor trans-Atlantic flights in a heavily-laden single-engined machine.

"The risk of mechanical failure is too great," he said yesterday. "The chief perils are engine trouble some slight deviation in steering whereby airmen might miss Newfoundland, and encountering such abnormal gusts in an Atlantic storm that would cause the craft to get out of control and crash into the sea."

King Emmanuel Given Ovation By Subjects

ROME, April 14 (Associated Press).—King Victor Emmanuel, whose brief visit to Milan to inaugurate the industrial fair, was made the occasion of a bombing outrage, left the Lombardy capital yesterday afternoon on his return journey to Rome. At all the stations along the way, he was loyally greeted by enthusiastic demonstrators rejoicing over his escape.

Many thousands of residents of Rome, however, too impatient to wait for the arrival of the King to-day, gathered in the spacious Piazza Venezia around the Victor Emmanuel monument, near the tomb of the unknown soldier, to cheer the sovereign's name, while the Government moving picture organization projected a film of the opening of the Milan Fair by the King.

Office workers on their way home at 7.30 in the evening had an opportunity to see the film and show their sentiments of fealty in an impressive setting.

THINKS ATTEMPTS ARE VERY UNWISE

Expert Says Margin of Safety For Ocean Flights Too Unsafe.

NEW YORK, April 14.—(Canadian Press.) — Frederick Handley-Page, British aeroplane designer, believes trans-Atlantic flights, particularly the westward ones, should not be attempted until a greater margin of safety is provided by practice duration flights.

Mr .Handley-Page, designer of the famous bombing plane used by the British during the Great War, issued his warning against attempts such as that being made in the Bremen on his arrival in this country yesterday on the Homeric.

He pointed out that the world's duration record to-day is only a little over 50 hours and that recent flights acros sthe Atlantic have required approximately 40 hours.

JOLLY DINNER.

Pot-luck Affair at Cavan Provides Entertainment and Fun.

CAVAN, April 14.—Mrs. J. W. Perrin was hostess at a pot-luck dinner on Monday afternoon for the girls of the Cavan United Church. Each girl brought a contribution for the menu. A jolly time was spent around the dining table at which a sumptuous dinner was served, after which music and contests provided entertainment for the guests. Among those present were: The Misses Viola McBride, Helen Kennedy, Sussie Byers, Gwendolen Hunter, Olive and Mildred Smith, Ruth and Norma Staples, Helen Swain, Alma Perrin and Irene Howson. Several of the girls were away on their Easter vacation, diminishing the number in attendance.

Roads are Drying.

The roads are drying up, but spring holes have been giving trouble particularly to motorists.

The wheat presents a green appearance, and warm weather is hoped for to bring it along.

Personals.

Among those from Cavan who attended the sale at Mr. H. Preston's on Saturday were: Messrs. H. Ball, William McCamus, F. M. Staples, R. Matchett, D. White and Ray Staples.

Miss Hazel Hunter, R.N., of Toronto, is spending a few days with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. D. J. Hunter.

Messrs. R. and G. Staples were visitors to Peterborough on Wednesday.

ANNUAL SPORT DAY TO BE HELD JULY 2

Campbellford Celebration Postponed Because of Paving Program.

CAMPBELLFORD, April 14. — Campbellford's gala day will be changed this year from May 24 to July 2. This was the decision of the executive of the Seymour Agricultural Society, held in the Council Chambers last night. The sports day has, for a number of years, been held under the auspices of this society, and it is generally conceded that Campbellford will hold a celebration on that date. For the present year, it was deemed advisable to set a date later in the season since there is a possibility that the streets will be in a more or less torn-up condition on accountof the paving. The present weather conditions also had a bearing on the decision of the meeting.

The plans have been left in the hands of the sports committee and there is every reason to anticipate a wide field of sporting attractions which will please everyone. It is the intention of the committee to hold horse races, and a good program of athletics. Either a lacrosse or baseball match will be on the list of events and there is some slight possibility of there being a list of aquatic sports. The committee at the present time is open to suggestions as to what particular attraction will meet with the approval of the majority.

CITIZENS' BAND ELECTS OFFICERS

Gordon Scriver Is Chosen President at Annual Meeting in Lakefield.

LAKEFIELD, April 14. — Gordon Scriver was elected president of the Citizen's Band, at the annual meeting held recently in the Memorial Hall. The year's activity was reviewed and the financial statement presented which shows the organization in a very prosperous condition.

W. H. Casement was elected as honorary president, while the other officers elected were: Vice-president, G. G. Connell; secretary-treasurer, A. H. Clarke; bandmaster, W. Madill; deputy bandmaster, A. H. Clarke.

The band has made a steady progress since its re-organization a few years ago, and is a credit to the village and those who were responsible for its re-organization; also to the members. It is very desirous of recruiting more strength and extend an invitation to any musicians who care to join to notify either the bandmaster or secretary and an instrument will be provided and a welcome extended.

Card Party and Dance.

The Ladies' Auxiliary of the Canadian Legion held a very successful card party and dance in the Memorial Hall on Monday evening. Twenty tables of euchre and five tables of bridge were played. Euchre prizes were won by Miss Grace Watson and Harry Armstrong, and the consolation prizes by Mrs. Earl Orr and Harry Sherin. Mrs. Elsa May and G. G. Connell won the first prizes for bridge and Mrs. W. M. Graham and J .W. Ridpath the consolation prizes.

Mrs. Walton Made Life Member.

At a recent meeting of the Women's Missionary Society of Knox United Church held at the home of Mrs. F. J. Burgess, Concession street, a Life Membership Certificate and Pin were presented to Mrs. James Walton, who for many years has been an earnest and efficient worker in the society, helping with every endeavor, both spiritual and material, and never failing in attendance. Mrs. T. M. Wesley read the accompanying address and Mrs. E. W. Bailey presented the certificate and pin.

Mrs. Walton was deeply moved by this manifestation of appreciation and in a few words she expressed her thanks. Mrs. J. A. Porter is president of the society and Mrs. Burgess is secretary.

Roads Bad.

The roads have been exceptionally bad, the extremely warm weather of last week caused the loosening of the frost and in some parts, the bottom went out of the roads, with the result that mud unspeakable blocked the traffic in the country. The Peterborough road was in a very bad condition both Saturday and Sunday.

The weather on Good Friday was a foretaste of the summer, but Easter was a return to winter garments and very little new Easter costumes were in evidence. Furnaces were lighted and the remaining stock of winter appraised, the weather has moderated during the week.

CANADA'S FUTURE ORATORY SUBJECT

Melville Wood Wins Cup Donated By Rev. H. W. Foley.

BAILIEBORO, April 14.—"Canada's Future", was the title of the subject given by Melville Wood, when he won the handsome silver cup donated by the Rev. H. W. Foley at a recent oratorical contest held in the United Church, under the auspices of the Victor Tuxis boys.

The judges were: Miss Connie McConnachie, Springville; Harold Lackie, of Fraserville; and Mererdith Perrin, of Bailieboro. Other boys taking part were: Arnold Brown, on the "Care of our birds"; Joseph Barnard, "The C.S.E.T. Standards"; Keith Barnard, "Confederation"; Ray Barnard, "Life of Booker Washington"; Herbert Dean, "The Life of Archibald Lampman"; Archie Deyell, "The British Empire"; Billie Howson, "Necessity of Application."

During the program readings by Miss Edith Deyell, musical numbers by Miss Viola White; solos by Eldridge White and Ferd Barnard, were much enjoyed.

The judges stated that they found great difficulty in selecting a winner from the group, as the speeches of the contestants were all exceptionally good. Special mention was made of the excellent manner in which Ray Barnard delivered his address.

The Tuxis boys at Bailieboro are doing good work along educational and religious lines and are doing all in their power to reach the high standard set by the Canadian Standard Efficiency training course. They are planning to hold a father and son service in the United Church on Sunday, April 29, at which the boys will take full charge. Lawrence Dunbar, of Garden Hill and a member of the Boys' Parliament for East Durham, will assist with the service. They are also preparing a boys' choir for the event.

MUSINGS AT A MANSE WINDOW

SOME OF THE PRINCIPAL ACTORS on the Stage of Time have been born in rather quaint places, as anybody may discover who cares to read history. And some rather quaint ideas are at times born in great minds. Intelligence does not always make for infallibility. Occasionally a philosopher will both speak and act like a fool. Even editors err! That, of course, is not to be wondered at when you bear in mind the high pressure under which they are working all the time. There is no discharge in their war. Like the poet's brook, they "go on forever." So, when they are mistaken, or, at least, seem to us to be mistaken in their judgment, we shouldn't be too hard on them. They are but men, and the best of men are but men at the best. At the same time we are not going to accept everything they write without first "looking it over." It may be as they say—and, then again, it may not be.

PREACHERS IN A BAD WAY.

According to certain editorial comment, the ordinary preacher is in a bad way because he is attempting the impossible. He must "choose themes and speak on them twice a Sunday." He has "to provide perpetually new themes for which he has to collect his own material; no public speaker is so driven back on his own inner resources or so little helped by stimulus from the outside."

Writing in "The Pastor's Corner," my friend, Dr. Curry, says: "Naturally enough it may be thought that only a 'preaching genius' can do all that."

And then he goes on to say: "'A preaching genius!' what do they mean by that? One who draws a crowd? One who is facile with words and phrases? One who furnishes acceptable copy for the newspaper? Such is the modern thought without sustaining evidence in Scripture or accomplishment.

WHY PREACHERS ANYWAY?

"Preaching is a scriptural function. Nothing can take its place in the evangelization of the world. Scripture itself so affirms. 'God has manifested his word through preaching.' 'It pleased God through the foolishness of preaching to save them that believe.' 'How shall they hear without a preacher?' A 'preaching genius' is foreign to the ministry of grace. There was no 'preaching genius,' as so understood, in the Apostolic band; but, on the contrary, when the most discriminating and astute audience 'saw the boldness of Peter and John, and perceived that they were unlearned and ignorant men, they marvelled; and took knowledge of them that they had been with Jesus.' A 'preaching genius' might be of use, but he is too liable to escape from his orbit and fly off on a tangent."

PREACHERS AT THEIR BEST.

In selecting His disciples the Master directed them as to their spiritual equipment. According to His directions, they were to be filled with the Holy Spirit. That is, they were to be dominated in the whole of their inner life by the Spirit of God. His it would be to arouse and direct their thought, inspire their words, strengthen their faith, brighten their hopes and guide in all the plans to which they had dedicated their lives. They were to be witnesses to Him to the uttermost parts of the earth.

Dr. Curry but speaks what ought to be patent to every spiritually minded person when he says: "It takes no preaching genius to be an effective witness." Scripture and not the editors has the last word to say on preaching equipment. This editorial assumption is but another instance of the folly of well meaning people invading realms not their own and presuming to speak therein with authority.

THE PREACHER AN ACCOMPANIST.

When a preacher is topical rather than textual in his ministry he may be hard driven to find something new and interesting. But, when he knows something of the beauties and wonders of the greatest of all books his chief difficulty will be to get time to proclaim to others all that the Spirit of God has brought to him. Let him forget its critics. They come and go. The Book itself has within its own covers the indisputable evidence of its own veracity. Let him go through the goodly land from Dan to Beersheba and he will find fruit to refresh his own soul at the same time that he finds riches with which to enrich the souls of others.

In discussing a musical programme with a friend of mine an outstanding musician said: "A man must be willing to be a good background to be a good accompanist."

The background is vastly important in the production of any tone picture, and the creation of that background requires real ability. The singer has the message and the melody, but the song needs support. There are enriching harmonies to be supplied. Other tones in the chord must be brought in to enlarge and sustain the theme. It is the accompanist who makes the symphony. But he must be a background to do his work well. If he seeks to give his work the pre-eminence, if he is ambitious for praise, he serves his principal and himself both poorly. He fails to be a good background.

After all the Holy Spirit is the chief worker or performer. The business of the preacher, it seems to me, when properly understood, is just to supply the background. It takes both skill and grace to play the part well. And for most of us it can only be done after a long schooling. The trouble with many preachers is that they have not attended this school enough—nor have they been diligent enough when they have attended it.

SHARING THE PRAISE.

More than once I have seen some famous artist in the musical world take an accompanist by the hand and bring him to the front of the stage to share with the chief performer the plaudits of the audience. In doing so the principal was acknowledging his or her indebtedness to the man who was willing to be a background. Even so the day will come when we shall share in the plaudits of the redeemed when He is crowned Lord of all, for we shall be identified with Him in the glory of that time.

The church needs a great company of faithful, intelligent men and women building the wonderful background that any successful administration must have. The church that is making the greatest contribution to the cause of Christ is the church with the best background builders.

The trouble with both the pulpit and the pew is that too many occupants will not be anything if they cannot be chief performer.

The Minister Remarks--

—I am wondering whether winter has gone or hasn't come yet.

—It may be true, as a scientist says, "A man can live to be 250 years old if he will eat only bananas," but, although I am not averse to bananas, I am going to let some one else prove it before I make the experiment.

—Some persons are born to trouble, school board members seek trouble, and school principals have trouble thrust upon them.

—Some women can get more pleasure out of a good cry than many a man can extract from a good laugh.

—Some persons are born to trouble, school board members seek trouble, and school principals have trouble thrust upon them.

—The trouble with some "leading citizens" is that they lead backwards, suggests a friend of mine. —A. F.

Children's Corner — TELL US A STORY

I have been told that on the shores of the Adriatic Sea, the wives of fishermen whose husbands have gone far out upon the deep are in the habit, at eventide, of going down to the seashore, and singing, as female voices only can, the first stanza of a beautiful hymn. After they have sung it, they listen till they hear, borne by the wind across the sea, the second stanza, sung by their gallant husbands as they are tossed by the gale upon the waves; and both are happy. Perhaps, if we could listen, we, too, might hear on this desert world of ours some sound, some whisper, borne from afar, to remind us that there is a heaven and a home.

Sorrow is sometimes the direct route to the Father's will.

An Amiable Agnosticism

THOSE who think deeply and without bias, know that ethics and service must have adequate motive. There is much amiable agnosticism. It is much pleasanter to felowship than to fight. Loyalty cannot sacrifice truth for amity. Conviction compels a constructive program independently of sentiment. Truth has always advanced in the teeth of storm. The conflict calls for courage and conscientiousness. The world has no use for temporizers or trimmers. Diplomacy in religion is softness and weakness, and means surrender.—"Jesus Christ at the Crossroads."

THE CHURCH AND WORLD PEACE

Looking For a Dead Body

ON the first Easter morning, when certain women went to a borrowed grave, intending to lay spices and pour sweet ointment upon that body now become so precious in the clasp of death, they were greeted by messengers from on high, who said, "Why seek ye the living among the dead? He is not here, but is risen."

Although, in all probability, the women were just as hopeless as the men, within their hearts love was still alive even if the Master were dead. Perhaps it was only when they saw Him crucified and dead that they realized how much they loved Him.

Coming early in the morning, all they expected to find was the dead body in the sepulchre. Ever since that first hour when man was brought into contact with death, that had been the history of man and his relation to the grave. Wherever he came he dug a grave, or built a tomb, or hollowed out a sepulchre; and always he filled them with his dead. Now all that was changed. For a while yet he would still have to lay away his dead, but he would lay them away with a different feeling in his heart.

The women, no doubt, as they came to the tomb, wondered whom they should find to roll away the heavy stone from the mouth of the sepulchre. To their amazement they found that it had been rolled away. They found the sepulchre empty. That empty tomb was the beginning of the Christian faith and the Christian hope. Upon that foundation stone the church was to be built.

That empty grave was a witness that a man had come into the world who was stronger than death; a man who could empty the grave men had always filled. By virtue of that stupendous event, life and immortality have been brought to light out of the darkness of human guess. Out of that empty sepulchre shines the light that pierces the gloom of death and shines straight away to the throne of God, where the victorious and immortal man sits enthroned in His triumph, not only as real and actual man, but as true and eternal God.

The resurrection of Jesus Christ is to us, the promise and pledge of our own resurrection, if it is not to be our privilege to escape the valley of the shadow of death. —A. F.

A broad and mighty river flowing through fertile lands. It is a stream that might be full of shipping—the riches of far-off lands could easily travel on such a highway, but it is not the wide expanse of water flowing eastwards that attracts our notice, it is that solitary figure of a man. He does not court our observation—what he does he wishes to do privately. Who is he? What does he want here? Whence has he come? His dress shows him to be a stranger, not a native of the lands through which this river flows. He is travel-stained—no wonder, for he has travelled a long, long journey. He leaves the low bank of the river and seeks a place where the stream runs through rocky places. This spot apparently suits his purpose; he is satisfied; no eye has seen his action, but he is content with what he has done, although we may perhaps at the same time see in his countenance a look of wonder as to why he should have done it. Now the long journey of over 300 miles has to be faced again, and he sets forth; but I observe by looking closely at him that his dress is not quite the same as that which he wore when he arrived.

Weeks, months, perhaps years, have passed. There is the same noble river rolling onwards to the sea. We are at the same place, and there is the same man poking about and looking around! After scraping and searching he finds the object of his quest, but O! how changed. It is useless now to man or beast. Perhaps God can make some use of it, but the traveller cannot; yet surely it was not in vain that this weary one has had to trudge those 1,200 miles and more?

The key to the previous Pen Picture of Bible History is to be found in 2 Kings 13:20-21.

In Death All Are Equal

THERE is an old Quaker meeting-house at Jordans, in Buckinghamshire, which is well known to many on this side of the Atlantic by reason of the fact that in its graveyard lie the remains of William Penn, the founder of Pennsylvania. Recently, the trustees of the meeting-house and graveyard, received a proposal on behalf of the citizens of Pennsylvania that they should be allowed to erect a memorial over Penn's grave, which might take the form of a new meeting-house or anything else, up to a cost of $125,000. After some consideration, the local Friends have declined the offer of a costly memorial on "the principle that in death all are equal."

However, they suggest that the memorial might take another form. The barn, which a few years ago Dr. Rendel Harris alleged to be constructed of the timbers of the Mayflower, is suffering from the ravages of the wood-beetle, and $10,000 is needed for its reconstruction. The trustees, acting on the assumption that Dr. Rendel Harris's theory is correct, ask if this project would appeal with equal force to American friends.

German Pronouncement On Education

Insanity and Nerve Specialists Speak in Favor of Christianity.

ACCORDING to the Sunday School Times, eighty-three German neurologists and insanity specialists have published a pressing call not to take Christian teaching from the young in the German public schools. "In the present lamentable struggle of political parties over the schools," they say, "attempts are being made, in a folly truly irresponsible, to shake the foundations of Christianity. We, the undersigned insanity and nerve specialists, who have daily opportunities to look into the deep abysses of psychic need and suffering, earnestly warn against allowing the belief in Christ even in the least degree to lapse in the hearts of our youth, since this it is that is the real anchor in the storms of our time. The Christian religion is now and will remain the philosophy, the psychology, the ethic, the socialism. Therein are we psychiatrists and neurologists at one with the greatest and noblest among the spirits whom the German people are proud to name as her sons, and who have taught us to recognize the nature and ends of Christianity in its infinite wisdom, truth, freedom and strength."

It gives an old-fashioned believer quite a thrill to have such a pronouncement from such a source. After all there is no book quite like the Bible. It is able to make wise unto salvation. By its teaching the mind is enlightened, the will strengthened and the affections purified. Let it occupy a place in the schools of the world for its literary value alone and see what it will do to lift the moral tone of our time. —A. F.

Are You Sick?

Mrs. Huff is up the Miff tree
On a seat fixed good and firm,
And she'd like to tell the pastor
A few things and make him squirm.

Mrs. Huff was sick abed, sir;
Yes, sir, sick abed a week!
And the pastor didn't call, sir,
Never even took a peek.

Wasn't that enough, enough, sir,
To provoke a saint to wrath?
And to make a Christian pilgrim
Wander from the churchly path?

When I asked her if the doctor
Called to see her, she said, "Sure,"
And she looked as if she thought I
Needed some good strong mind cure.

Then I asked her how the doctor
Knew that sickness laid her low,
And she said that she had called him
On the phone and told him so.

So the doctor called to see her,
But the pastor didn't go,
For the doctor knew her trouble
And the pastor didn't know.

Now the doctor gets his bill paid
With a nicely written cheque,
But the pastor, for not knowing,
Simply gets it "in the neck."

The Value of The Sabbath

A CONSCIENTIOUS observance of the Sabbath brings a double blessing—release from the pressure of outward business, and escape from the tyranny of a man's own strength. All unvaried activity is apt to become engrossing; and the best thing a man can do, in order to preserve the completeness of a rich and well-balanced humanity, is to shake himself loose as frequently as possible from the domination of an exclusive current of thought. Nothing more dangerous or more hostile to moral health than what the Germans would call a pampered subjectivity.

Science And Pig's Tooth

AN Episcopal minister, not without some claim to culture, in the course of a recent sermon to a fashionable American congregation, warned his people against the folly of letting every new statement made in the name of science cause them to discard their previous concepts. He told them that there is a great need for more poise and patience in awaiting the judgments of time upon all new theories. "The article appearing in the press during the past week, which showed that the tooth displayed at the Tennesse trial as a relic of the "missing link" between the human species and lower forms, has now been proved conclusively to be the tooth of a prehistoric pig, recalls an excellent example of how many of us allow any supposedly scientific conception to upset and discredit our inherited beliefs.

"During the half century since Darwin's theory was brought out, it has been steadily losing ground as a fundamental doctrine." —A. F.

Imagination

IMAGINATION is always wiser when she recreates the best that has been, than when she prophesies the best that may be. In the former case, she can deviate from truth only by a little exaggeration and high coloring, for which a wise allowance will be made; in the other case, the temptation is near to stray into the region of the impossible and the absurd.

THE CORONER'S WARNING.

The warning issued by Coroner Dr. T. W. H. Young to parents against allowing their sons to carry firearms in city parks or other public places might be extended to prevent promiscuous shooting outside the city limits.

There has been a great deal of carelessness in the handling of firearms, and far too much shooting in districts where the safety of the public is jeopardized by stray bullets.

So far as shooting within the limits of Jackson Park is concerned the criminal carelessnes of such a practice should be obvious to every one.

This park, frequented by many visitors, is no place for target practice, and anybody who attempts to use it for such purposes should be prosecuted.

The nature of Jackson Park, with its winding roads and its hills and dales, makes it impossible to tell where a stray bullet may go, and the boy, or man, who discharges a firearm there is taking grave chances of finding himself called upon to answer to a charge of manslaughter.

The same thing applies to shooting in the townships where, as The Examiner pointed out a day or two ago, careless use of firearms is a daily event.

CLEARING THE STREETS.

The special committee appointed by the City Council to consider the parking problem is recommending a number of very important changes, including the establishment of a special parking area in the business section, with parking permitted only on one side of the street in this area, and a time limit set, this being made twenty minutes so far as George street is concerned.

These recommendations will undoubtedly cause a great deal of discussion and may not meet with anything like unanimous approval, but at least they represent an effort to deal with a most vexatious problem, and should effect an improvement over the almost intolerable conditions that prevailed in the downtown sections last summer.

A twenty-minute limit for George street should be ample, and it should be strictly enforced; there is no reason why motorists should be allowed to block the street for hours, as some of them have been known to do in the past.

The new arrangements are designed to avoid congestion and confusion, and while they may not be perfect—no traffic regulations will ever be perfect—they are in advance of anything that has so far been done locally to eliminate some of the worst features of the parking nuisance.

THE ANNUAL CLEAN-UP.

The annual clean-up campaign is an activity in which every citizen of Peterborough should take pride in participating.

At this season of the year it seems to be instinctive to repair the ravages caused by the winter months and to make houses, yards, lawns, boulevards and lanes spic and span.

The epidemic of house-cleaning that strikes feminine Peterborough in the spring spreads out-of-doors, and mere man is infected with results that are as a rule decidedly satisfactory.

There is much that can be done in all parts of Peterborough to make this a cleaner, healthier and more attractive city, and like many other movements, the campaign must start with the individual citizen, who by his efforts in cleaning up his own property can contribute materially to the general effect.

The clean-up spirit this year threatens to pass city boundaries.

Up in Essex County, for example, there is a campaign to clean up farm homes, the advocates of the movement pointing out that around many farm houses there are conditions that are far from sightly, and that could be improved with a little effort on the part of the owners.

The annual clean-up, whether in city or country, is a worth-while drive that should have general support.

PERMANENT OFFICIALS.

Probably the most important feature of the report of the Royal Commission which investigated the stray ballots found in the constituency of South Ottawa many months after the last Provincial election is the suggestion made by Judges Magee and Hodgins that permanent election officials should be appointed.

This recommendation from the commission is in line with what has been several times suggested by many newspapers, including The Examiner, and its acceptance would, it is believed, be received with favor by the public, in view of the obvious weaknesses of the present system.

So far as the "wandering" ballot incident goes the commission does not find that any criminal action was committed in relation to the ballots, and declares the result of the election was in no way affected, but there is censure for F. M. Scott, the returning officer, who is pronounced "guilty of carelessness, irregularity, negligence and incompetence, as well as of unintentional wrong-doing."

That condemnation is in itself an indictment of the present system of conducting elections; it is to be feared that if the actions of election officials in general were subjected to the same intense scrutiny that was given the South Ottawa returning officer's conduct that the list of those who were careless, irregular and incompetent might be considerably extended.

THE HORSE NOT EXTINCT YET.

An increase of $704,527, or 15 per cent., over the preceding year in the harness and saddlery industry for 1926 is shown in the recent report by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics. The value of production in this industry for 1926 was $5,315,629. The output of harness, saddles, saddle parts, halters, whips, whip lashes, horse blankets and sweat pads for 1926, had a total value of $4,103,147, an increase over the preceding year of $547,478.

The two items of luggage, trunks and valises, suitcases and club bags, had a total value of $475,808, compared with $254,366 in 1925. Hand-bags and satchels, and purses, pocketbooks and folders were valued at $231,162, a decrease of $131,683 from the preceding year. The invested capital of the harness and saddlery industry in Canada in 1926 was valued at $5,989,288, which is a decrease of $179,074 from the preceding year. The total number of persons employed in the industry was 1,211, and the amount paid in salaries and wages $1,299,311. The total value of all materials used in manufacture during the year was $3,135,518, harness leathers accounting for $1,515,331, or 48 per cent. of the total. The value of all materials used in the preceding year was $2,653,839, the value of harness leathers amounting to $1,279,635.

THE GOOD SERVICE OF A CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.

Chambers of Commerce are most useful institutions, and we can point out a convincing proof. It is contained in the following quotation from the London, Eng., correspondent to the London, Canada, Free Press:

"It was a pleasure to see the effective exhibition that the Canadian Chamber of Commerce has arranged at the British Industries Fair this year, though I looked in vain for any sign of Canadian representation in the space reserved by the Empire Marketing Board. Not entirely in vain, for, after seeing the stalls where Australia, New Zealand, India, Rhodesia and South Africa display their produce to excellent advantage, I found a composite exhibition of Empire productions and among them were several tins of British Columbia salmon, a somewhat inadequate show for a country famous for its maple syrup, maple sugar, cereals, cheese and apples. I feel I have said all this before, probably on the last occasion that Canada failed to take advantage of an opportunity of exhibition. In the Canadian Chamber of Commerce section, which has a good position near the Shepherd's Bush Entrance, the Sheet Metal Products Company, has a most tempting display of their new enamelled refrigerator. George Boyle, the company's agent in Great Britain, and vice-president of the Chamber of Commerce, is very proud of the success they have had in England. There is a composite exhibition in a stall lined with beautiful Canadian woods which includes a canoe, Canadian grown tobacco, soap and other samples of Canadian produce. The McClary Manufacturing Company, the Waterman Fountain Pen, the Gyproc Fireproof Wallboard, the "Force" exhibit, and the Locomotive Electric Washer and Ironer, shown by the Brantford Washing Machine Company, all give abundant proof that Canada need never hang back from lack of excellent material for exhibition purposes. G. H. Ward, the secretary of the Canadian Chamber in London, has won praise for his tact and organizing ability, and it is pleasant to know that the results of the section's exhibition have been most satisfactory and that his efforts have been rewarded."

That is pretty good proof; and is an encouragement to the formation of Chambers of Commerce in Canada, so that they can help in fostering the trade of their own country and that of the Empire.—Kingston Whig-Standard.

MR. MALCOLM AND CANADIAN TRADE.

Speaking in Montreal on Saturday, Hon. James Malcolm Minister of Trade and Commerce, predicted that within five years Canada's international trade may well be doubled. It is not an idle dream. Only a comparatively few years have gone by since our total trade reached the billion mark, but notwithstanding that that figure was regarded as a mighty milestone in the national growth, we have since added another billion to it, and our progress goes on.

Consider, our position. Out on the prairies our wheat fields roll up towards the Arctic; the vast Peace River—an empire in itself—awaits development; and sane observers like Mr. T. A. Crerar predict a billion dollar crop. Twenty years ago our mining development was practically nothing. To-day Canada takes her place as one of the great mining countries of the world, with a promised future beyond the dreams of a generation ago. Then there are our forests; our vast pulp and paper developments; the growth of our manufactures, due to rich natural resources, and the development of power. It is a great, a mighty vista that opens up before us.

Fortunately, we are awakening to our opportunities. To-day, under Mr. Malcolm, the Department of Trade and Commerce, is being vitalized with new usefulness. A business man, with broad horizons, and with personal experience in international trade, Mr. Malcolm is making his department of real value to Canadian exporters. Through the Commercial Intelligence Service, through advertisements in the press, and through personal and other contacts with Canadian business men, he is making it easier for Canadian industrialists to get into touch and to keep in touch with the commercial progress and needs of the outside world. It is a fine work for Canada; worthy of the co-operation of all Canadians, and particularly of those who are engaged in industry.—Ottawa Journal.

Save the Baby Chicks

Pratt-Fed Chicks Will Live and Pay a Profit!

Right from the hatch chickens are subject to that dire scourge, White Diarrhoea. Start Pratts Baby Chick Food when the chicks are two days old, and it will not only prevent Diarrhoea, but will make the little birds grow healthy, strong, big and productive. Whether you want "Broilers," "Breeders" or "Egg-layers," Pratts Baby Chick Food is the surest guarantee you will get the results you want. Pratts Baby Chick Food makes chicks grow fast, to broiler size, makes them fertile, and productive for breeding, and induces a super activity of the ovarial organs which produce eggs. Chicks fed on Pratts Baby Chick Food become Money-Makers, and Profit-Bringers earlier than chicks fed any other way.

TORONTO LIVESTOCK

TORONTO, April 14.— Cattle trade opened for the week with a fairly good swing, at prices steady with the previous week's close. Choice steers, good weights, were firm and sold up to $11.00. Good to choice butcher steers and heifers were in good demand at $10.25 to $10.75. All other grades were firm in proportion. The market closed with a fairly good clean-up.

The slight edge in prices in the opening Monday's market went off a little in the later markets, and by the end of the week the early steadiness had been lost, and prices were 25c lower.

In other than the butcher killer classes, prices have held generally steady to firm.

Stockers and feeders selling strong at $8.00 to $9.00. Choice quality western heifers from $7.50 to $7.75.

A little better demand for springers and milkers, choice springers selling from $90.00 to $125.00. Milkers, very choice, from $60.00 to $90.00. Common milkers not wanted.

Calves steady to firm all week, tops from $14.00 to $15.00.

Lambs, choice, firm, from 14c to 15c. Spring lambs, $14.00 to $16.00 in bulk. Good yearling sheep, $9.00 to $10.00. Barnyard stuff not wanted.

Hogs, steady to firm and unchanged from $9.25 f.o.b. selects.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE.

MONTREAL, April 14 (Canadian Press). — Little business was done with foreign buyers in Canadian grain here yesterday, there being practically no demand from any source.

Owing to the recent strength in oat futures at Winnipeg and the improved demand for cash grades of late a stronger feeling prevailed in the local market and prices were marked up 1½ cents per bushel.

Further strength developed in the market for spring wheat grades of flour and values were advanced ten cents per barrel. The local trade was fair, but the foreign demand was quiet. There was no actual change in prices for winter wheat flour, but the undertone was stronger and the prospects were that a readjustment would be made in the near future.

A fair amount of business was done in all lines of millfeed, and values were firm. The trade in standard grades of rolled oats was quiet, but prices were unchanged.

An active business was transacted in all grades of eggs and the undertone was steady. The receipts were 3,731 cases.

Only a small trade was done in potatoes, but values were well maintained.

The market for imported beans remained firm under a moderate demand from all sources.

The easier feeling that developed in the local butter situation on Thursday was again in evidence yesterday, and prices scored a further decline of ¼c per pound. The demand continued dull. The receipts were 964 packages.

Extreme dullness marked the cheese trade, but prices were unchanged. The receipts were 255 boxes.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

CHICAGO, April 14 (Canadian Press). — Quick upturns in price yesterday for wheat followed an early setback. Late reports appeared to indicate that snow and rain west and south-west had given no important relief to sections where need was most acute. On the advance, July delivery of wheat again autdid the season's high price record, with mill buying of May wheat an outstanding feature.

Closing quotations for wheat were strong, 1c to 2¼c net higher, corn ¾c to ⅞c up, oats showing ¼c to ⅝c gain, and provisions 5 cents to 15 cents down.

Advancing rapidly in the last part of the day, wheat finished at about the topmost level reached with fresh emphasis being given to talk about the likelihood of a short crop. Buying was general, and a number of big operators were credited with being interested actively in the market.

Breadth of demand was evident not only through increased volume of trade, but also through steady absorption of wheat on advances as well as on declines. In this connection, much significance was attached to persistent reports of mill buying of May.

Wheat available for immediate use was in some cases relatively 5 cents a bushel higher owing to continued shipment of wheat from various primary points. Special notice was taken, too, of the fact that number two red winter wheat sold in Chicago yesterday to western millers, brought $1.89 a bushel, the highest premium ever paid for this variety at this season of the year. It was also a subject of comment that the price named was fully 40 cents over the quotation for May at the time the mill purchase was made.

Corn and oats rallied with wheat. Rye also advanced, and went to a new high price record for the season, chiefly as a result of wheat strength. Receipts of corn were small, and were expected to remain so. A forecast of lower temperature had some bullish influence on oats.

Scattered selling eased the provision market, despite an upturn in hog values.

EXPLOSION TOLL RAISED TO THREE

Another Man in Critical Condition—Gasoline Used To Start Fire.

COCHRANE, Ont., April 13. — (Canadian Press.)—The explosion of a can of high test gasoline used to start a fire in a shack at Fauquier on Monday last has now taken three lives and a fourth man is in a critical condition. Alfred Thibeault has succumbed in hospital to injuries he received at the same time as Alfred Parent and Teo Regaudie, St. John, N.B., were killed, and three other men were injured.

GOD'S MINUTE

The just shall live by faith—Hab. 2:4.

Gracious and most merciful Father, we come to Thee in His hollowed Name Who loved us and gave Himself for us. We thank Thee that Thou didst guard our home and keep us in safety while we slept. We thank Thee for the promises of Thy Word, and for the assurance of their fulfilment to all who trust and obey Thee. We thank Thee for all the blessings of opportunity and service which have come to us with the morning. Help us to be faithful to Thy Word in all duty and opportunity and, to be kind to all in word and service. In every task or trial, may Thy presence attend us. Make obedience to Thy will our joy. Help us in all things to follow the example of our Lord, and thus to become like Him. Help us to be kind to the poor, and to all in need. Give comfort and healing to the sick, to the tired and lonely everywhere, and help them to look to Him whence cometh help. Come to the sinful in gracious compassion, and bless every effort to win them to Thyself. Remember our pastor, and all who preach the Gospel in our own and heathen lands. Put away the hurt of the sinful and the erring everywhere, and hasten the coming and triumph of our Lord. And to Thy Name, Father, Son and Holy Spirit, be all the praise. Amen.

MARK STREET W.M.S.

The Women's Missionary Society ...Mark Street United Church held ...ir Easter thankoffering meeting ...sterday afternoon in the church ...ditorium.

The ladies of the missionary socie... of the other United Churches ... the city had been invited to meet ...h them, and a large number were ...esent. The president, Mrs. F. ...and, occupied the chair and ...ened the meeting with prayer. The ...eting was in charge of Group A ... which Mrs. S. Matchett is the ...ader. Miss Whattam read the ...ripture lesson from 20th chapter ... t. John, followed by prayer by ...v. A. E. Thornley.

The secretary, Mrs. W. A. Gra...m read her report, and the report ... the treasurer, Mrs. W. Taylor, ...s received and adopted. After, ...rs. W. Clark gave a report on the ...le which is being packed for the ...est. It was decided to meet next ...ednesday for quilting, and the so...ty donated five dollars toward ...ying supplies for the bale. Plans ...re made for having Dr. Stevenson ...m the Book Room, Toronto, come ...d give a Sunday service and illus...ated lecture in the early autumn for the society's benefit.

Mrs. A. F. Bookhout, president of the Presbyterial, was called on to address the meeting. Mrs. Bookhout expressed her pleasure at being present at such a splendid meeting and seeing the representatives from the other United Church societies. She announced the branch meeting, which is being held in Lindsay, May 8, 9 and 10, urging all who could possibly attend to do so, as it would prove an inspiration to all who have the cause so much at heart.

Miss Daisy Murray sang a delightful solo, "This is My Task," which was very much enjoyed by all.

Mrs. George Rowe then favored the audience with a reading.

A very inspiring Easter message was given by Mrs. J. Forbes Allan, who prefaced her address by announcing the campaign of the League of Nations, which will be held April 17. This campaign is Dominion wide and she urged the women present to join up and help the cause which has for its main object the prevention of further wars. It also cooperates with the Red Cross; settles labor disputes, and keeps down the traffic in harmful drugs.

A hearty vote of thanks to Mrs. Allan, Miss Murray, Mrs. Rowe and all who had helped with the program was moved by Mrs. Thorney and seconded by Mrs. J. Speer.

The ladies were then invited to the dining room where a delicious tea was served and a social half hour spent.

DROWNING HAZARDS ARE POINTED OUT

Large Number of Deaths Causes Steps To Be Taken in British Columbia.

VANCOUVER, B. C., April 14. — (Canadian Press).—In view of the fact that during the last six months of 1927, 75 people, of whom 21 were children under 16 years of age, lost their lives in British Columbia by drowning, the British Columbia Safety League is specially featuring drowning hazards, life-saving and resuscitation. Comment was made on the surprise shown by the public generally at the fact that drowning fatalities are practically twice those resulting from motor traffic accidents. The league claims that, in order to remedy this serious loss of life, it is essential that increased facilities be provided for teaching swimming, resuscitation, life-saving, handling of boats and canoes.

JACK MINER AND THE BIRDS

AND SOME THINGS ABOUT NATURE

So we picked up the decoys and hid them in the dry sand, carried our boat to its hiding place, and about 10 a.m. we shouldered our thirty-seven ducks and started for home.

The snow was now nearly all melted on the road, leaving the clay so sticky that we decided to go home through the woods and fields. But our heavy load of ducks and the spongy fields made our travelling real hard work, and our progress was of the very slowest character. The farther we went, the slower our gait, for our steam was gradually running down. And how we thought of the basket of grub dear mother wanted us to take! Finally we crossed the last road and the next house to become visible was ours. How high some of those old rail fences did seem, and how my stomach did gnaw for just one bit of food! Talk about Esau selling his birthright for a plate of porridge! really there was such an aching void in me I would willingly have given my birthright, or birthwrong, for just one handful of cornmush and pork-grease.

As we neared the house mother came to meet us. Glancing over her glasses, she said, "Are you hungry, boys? Let me carry some of your ducks. How many did you get? Aren't they beauties! Now sit down, boys, and I will have your lunch ready in a few minutes." Just then the old clock said "Three." Here we had been nearly five hours coming that many miles.

But just the same, this was a real outing for your life, and as I went to bed I can remember mother and my younger sisters starting to pick ducks. When I descended the old-fashioned stairway again it was Sunday.

CHAPTER XV.

Knowledge and Ways of the Wild Duck.

In the previous chapter I have just given you a faint taste of some of the enjoyable hunts Providence has permitted me to have. If it were possible I would like to throw in a whiff of the home-grown savory dressing, when mother opened the old-fashioned elevated-oven door. But as I grew older, ducks, like all migratory birds, got scarcer until I seldom ever went to hunt them. Yet I have always liked to see wild ducks, both on the table and in the air.

In April, 1902, I secured some wild duck eggs and succeeded in raising three, two ducks and a drake. But it was several years before I got a pond suitable, as artificial ponds cost more than duck eggs. Then in 1905 Mr. Forest H. Conover of Leamington gave me three young black mallards that were hatched from eggs direct from the marsh. In 1907 I built my first real spring-water pond. I always kept the wings of my old birds clipped or pinioned, and the young we usually sold to sportsmen for decoys, but in 1908 I concluded that it was worth more to me to see them flying around, and that fall a bunch of the young went away. I naturally thought they had gotten out to the lake and were decoyed before some pump-gun.

The next spring several black mallards dropped in the pond and acted and looked for all the world like the ones that had gone away the previous fall, but the question was, these ducks came several days apart, and if they were the same ones they would come back together; so I just gave in, and said they were tame because they were with my domesticated wild ducks, that was all. Another point I argued with myself against their being the same ducks. These young tame ones that had left the previous fall, would be shot by the first man that ran across them, because they wouldn't know an enemy.

However, about April the 20th all the wild ducks left. One Sunday evening in June I was tapping the food tin and calling a few young wild ducks in the park when my wife's voice rang out from the house, saying, "Here are your ducks outside." As I looked up, here was an old black mallard duck and eight young ones, about one-half grown, working away to get in at the gate. For a few minutes I stood perfectly bewildered, in thought. My ducks were all around my feet; what duck was this, with eight young, trying and trying to get in at the gate? How did she know there was a gate there? At length I went and opened the gate and she withdrew to the north along the fence; the gate opened to the north but the young were to the south a few feet, and as I stepped around them they toddled, in single file, along the fence and worked their way in through the opening. As soon as the mother saw they were all through the wire netting, she just stepped back from the fence and flew over, like a crow; dropping down she spoke to her family and all walked into the water together. I then went and got my feed tin and tapped it as I usually do to call all the ducks, and sure enough, this strange duck came right up, but her family stood back; in fact, they did not come out of the water. Again I tapped the tin and she turned her head sidewise, looking at me with first one eye and then the other, as much as to say, "How long will it take you to tumble? Don't you know I am one of the ducks you raised last year, and that I returned here to my home last March, and went away to my nest about the 20th of April; and now I have brought my family here to Safety Inn."

The fact was hard for me to believe, but I was compelled to, for the very next week another black mallard, which was evidently her sister, came home, and when I got up one morning she was standing at the gate with a broken family of four ducklings as much as to say, "Will you please let my babies in?" Useless to say her request was soon granted.

In less than two weeks these old ducks and their young would all eat out of the pan; in fact I would put feed in my pockets and the old ones would climb up on my lap and put their heads in my open pocket and scatter feed to their young.

This duck story I know is beginning to sound strange to you, but remember, I have only just started telling you how they have cornered me up and made me frankly confess I didn't know anything about them. Why do these old ducks, in every case when they return with their young (that of course cannot fly) bring them around to this gate to be let in? How do they know there is an opening there? It is plain to be seen they have thinking ability enough to know that that is where we human beings enter the park and that there must be an opening there.

Another mystery is, where did they bring their young from; where did they hatch them, and so forth? In answer to this, young ducks, at three days old, can run as fast as adult Bob White quail.

Since this happened, we know of one old duck that hatched her young over four miles away and was home with them inside of a week. In another case a lady telephoned that the school children were trying to catch some little wild ducks in the ditch, and that the old duck had a tag on her leg; this was after four o'clock, and these ducks were over a mile away from here, but at six o'clock she and her family were in our north pond, scudding over the water, catching flies.

But perhaps the most interesting case I had was when a farmer phoned me to come over and help him catch a crippled wild duck that went flapping out of the clover field in front of him. He said that she could just get over the fence, but he couldn't quite catch her. I firmly believed him, because he was still out of breath when he called me up. This story sounded good to me, so in a few hours I took a stroll around, and this wise old pet that he thought crippled was home with her family. What had she done? Why, outwitted this intelligent man by leading him to believe she was crippled; then, as soon as he disappeared, she flew back into the clover field, dropped down and gave a few quacks that brought all her family out of the grass, and they continued their journey homeward. But the fact is that if there hadn't been danger of this man stepping on some of her babies, he would never have known she was there.

About the most touching duck scene I have ever witnessed was in 1913. A wild house-cat robbed an old gray duck of her seven young. I now and then heard her squawking, but I was looking for a hawk or weasel; some men that were making hay near by saw old Mrs. Cat as she sprang upon the last ducklings. The way the old duck carried on was pitiful. She flew and squawked around for two or three days. Then one morning I missed her altogether and concluded she had gone away to the lake. But on my way from the factory to dinner I happened to think of the brood of ducks, the Wyandotte hen—was about to bring out, so I jumped the fence into the park. As I neared the old hen she started scolding. I raised her up, and all had hatched, and gone, but two. Where were they? My first thought was "Weasels;" but just as I was backing away from the coop I saw the eye of old Mrs. Duck. There she sat in the weeds, about four feet in front of the coop, as still as a corpse, and I was compelled to tumble, for here was the head of a sweet, tiny duckling projecting out of her feathers near her wings. This dear old, broken-hearted mother was sitting here, stealing this hen's ducks as fast as she hatched them, and surely she knew they were not hers, for her ducklings were ten or twelve days old. As I looked at her I thought of the times I had crossed the street to meet some curly-haired little child that looked like my sweet little girl did. Well, when I went back again the old hen was alone in the coop. The other two had hatched, and Mrs. Duck was gone with the eight; and she raised them all, for that cat never came back.

Another thing worthy of notice is that this is a well-settled farming country. I am three miles north of Lake Erie and about five miles north-east of Cedar Creek, which is the nearest natural duck marsh, and some of these cute old ducks raise their families until they are nearly full-grown before they bring them home, and are seldom seen by any person, unless they happen to be in the big ditches.

A very small sportsman who stood six feet in height sprinkled corn in a living stream in order to get a shot at some of these ducks, and on Good Friday morning, 1911, he succeeded in getting a crack at a pair. As they flew up in front of him he killed the duck dead, but the drake fell with a broken pinion and ran into some rushes. After hunting for him for fully one-half hour he went for his bird dog, thus giving the drake nearly an hour to make his escape. When the dog arrived he took up the trail at once, but when he came to a ploughed field he apparently lost the scent. One week from the following Sunday Mr. Drake was at the park gate, trying to get in. Here he had been about nine days coming one mile and a half, dragging his broken wing. What handicapped him worst was a shot that had entered at the hip joint. I caught him and examined his wounds. As I let him down in the park he didn't flap away, as one would expect, but simply stood and looked for food. Fortunately for him only one of the bones was splintered and in less than six weeks he was flying again. But it took over two years for all the particulars regarding the shooting of him and the death of his mate to reach my ears.

Another fact worthy of notice is that the park gate is only thirty feet from our dining-room window, and in every case these ducks come here to look for an entrance when it isn't at all likely they ever passed through this gate themselves. Only they see us enter there. Really the way some of these birds expose their intelligence compels me to believe what I heard a farmer say at one of our Corn Growers' Conventions. This man rose up, stroking his beard; then, raising his right hand, he remarked, "I tell you, gentlemen, there are a lot of things in this world we haven't come to yet."

Another interesting fact about wild mallard ducks is the extreme difference between the faithful mother and the lazy drone of a father; for as soon as the duck starts to set, the drake deserts her entirely and he lives the life of a Brigham Young for the rest of the season. In fact he hasn't got a bit more principle than some of us men! Hence the faithful mother has to be father and mother both to her family, hatching and guarding them from their enemies, and leading them to proper feed as well as supplying the necessary shelter and warmth. Yes, she is just as faithful and true as a kind washerwoman who is compelled to bring her nursing baby with her while she scrubs the morning away and earns two dollars, but willingly takes fifty cents, and on her way back to the place called home spends it all to relieve the hunger of the three of four more darling tots that are anxiously awaiting momma's return, while the lazy, good-for-nothing father is loafing around the smoky end of nowhere, swapping garbage stories, and remarking about some lady who is passing thedrity window that is corroded with smut.

Now there's a REO SPEED WAGON for 93% of all hauling jobs

JUNIOR
For loads up to one-half ton. A 6-cylinder delivery car. Quick to start and quick to stop. Large enough for average deliveries, but small enough to handle easily and park in small pockets. So smart in appearance that it will say to the whole wide world: "I represent the kind of firm you like to deal with."

TONNER
For loads up to one ton. The latest addition to the Speed Wagon line. Built to deliver the same fast, economical service that has distinguished the Junior. A six, of course, with unusually complete equipment—including automatic chassis lubrication (Myers Patent).

STANDARD
For the world's average load—up to a ton and a half. 6-cylinder Speed Wagon engine. Myers Magazine Oilers for automatic chassis lubrication. Lower, faster, more powerful, quicker on the pick-up, easier to handle, more complete, and even more of the ruggedness and durability which have saved thousands of dollars for former Speed Wagon owners.

MASTER
A little huskier than the Standard—for hauling loads up to two tons. The Master, the fourth of the new Speed Wagons, assures Speed Wagon performance and economy on the heavier type of hauling jobs. A longer chassis, a heavier rear axle added to 6-cylinder power, make the Master a real innovation in the heavier truck field.

HEAVY DUTY
The lowest priced 6-cylinder truck of its size in the world. For hauling loads up to three tons—at light load gaits and at light load costs. 4-speed transmission, dual rear wheels, low load platform, and the powerful 6-cylinder engine, and other distinctive features that are putting the new Speed Wagons so far in advance.

In fleets, or singly—in big business or little—for virtually every need of faster, surer, easier, cheaper hauling, the right new Speed Wagon is ready.

This means that Speed Wagons' 6-cylinder agility, faster pick-up and dependable economy are available to practically every vocation. It means that truck operators can standardize on Speed Wagons, because among the Speed Wagons are the right capacities to suit their requirements.

There's a Speed Wagon to fit your needs. Try it out.

A splendid tribute to the bravery of the late Lieut. Arthur Ackerman, M.C., has been received by his mother, Mrs. B. F. Ackerman in the form of a letter written by General Garnet Hughes to his mother, Lady Hughes and forwarded to Mrs. Ackerman by Lady Hughes' daughter, Mrs. Byron Green, who is sending the letter on writes: "I am sure you must be very, very proud of your boy. It helps a great deal to know he was so splendid."

General Garnet Hughes' letter is as follows:

5th Canadian Division,
20th March, 1917.

Dear Mother:

I am glad that you let me know that my letter to you about poor Ackerman was destroyed. Until some time after his death I had not known that you and his mother were friends, and I did not know his address.

I wish you would tell her how much we thought of him, and send her this letter. There is no way of properly expressing our sympathy with the mothers of the boys who go down, but I know there is some comfort in just a letter.

I had known him so well in his old battalion, the 2nd, without ever connecting him with the Mrs. Ackerman you knew. He was such a keen, smart officer, always active and efficient, and always looking after his men's welfare. His Military Cross might have come along before it did, but as in so many other cases, it was not awarded the first time I recommended him.

Then when our new service, the Trench Mortar Batteries, were being formed and I was looking for bright, capable and brave officers to take it over in my brigade, young Ackerman was one of the four selected out of a hundred and eighty.

There is no service more trying than the trench mortars. They are subject to all the dangers from shell fire that the field artillery has, and in addition their little guns have to be operated from the front line wherein the infantry is.

In all the mud and danger and work, Ackerman was a leader. When a daring job was on hand Ackerman was in the front of it, and then on the Somme, just north of the village of Courcelette, he was hit by a shell. He was arranging new positions for his guns further forward and getting up ammunition at the time.

I had seen him only an hour or two before, and I remember the terrible shock the news gave me in spite of all the others whom I had known so well and who have gone the same way. His mother can be a very proud woman. No Canadian officer has ever been more thought of by his brother officers and the men.

She has lost her boy—I know she still thinks of him as the little fellow she held in her arms, as I do of my little Sammy now—him whom we know as a brave and gallant gentleman, but no mother has ever made a more valuable sacrifice for the greatest cause in which the human race has ever fought.

I wonder if Mrs. Ackerman has his Military Cross. If she hasn't I am sure I could arrange for a duplicate to be given her.

He would have sent it home, though."

Mine Stocks Weak With Losses Small

TORONTO, April 14.— (Canadian Press.)—Weakness was again shown on the standard mining exchange this morning, with no special losses occurring, however. Howey was the weak leader, losing 9 at 89 on a heavy turnover. Amulet softened four at 321 and Teck Hughes, among the generally steady, Kirkland Lake, was down 20 at 8.80. Pend Oreille led the easier British Columbia issues with a fifty cent loss at 19.00, Lucky Jim softening at 39 and Coast Copper easing to 34.50. Sherritt Gordon at 675, Hudson Bay at 16.80, and Bidgood at 107 were also weaker. Among the few firm issues were Noranda, recovering 30 at 17.80, Kirkland Lake sold at 196 and Sudbury Basin steadied at 9.75.

May Wheat $1.53; Other Grains Firm

CHICAGO, April 14 (Canadian Press). — All deliveries of wheat rose to-day to the highest prices yet this season, with May going above $1.53 for the first time. Active buying resulted from continued lack of rain in the south-west where it is needed and from reports of high winds. Opening ¼c to 2c higher, wheat later showed additional gains. Corn, oats, and provisions were also firmer, with corn starting ⅜c to ½c to 1c up, and subsequently strengthening a little more.

Opening prices were: Wheat, May 153, July 151¼. Corn, May 100¾, July 103⅜. Oats, May 58½, July 52¾.

Sudbury District Next Mine Centre

The Sudbury section of Ontario promises to be the scene of the next great mining boom in Canada. It is undoubtedly a tremendously rich area, and will furnish many millions' worth of mineral wealth to those who invest their money, time, and faith in it. It is part of "This great uncharted reef of wealth which is Canada," in the Prince of Wales' expressive phrase, and is now being rapidly chartered.

Financial papers are suggesting to their mining investing readers, that it would be well for them to keep their eye on this Sudbury district. Much precious metal will be made in Sudbury stocks. Without slackening interest in the older mining camps, interest should be taken in Sudbury mines, mining and mining stocks.

These properties are located in the Township of Hutton and Kitchener, a short distance north of the well-known Bunker Hill and the National Lead properties, 3 miles west from the end of the Selwood branch of the C.N.R., comprising 38 claims, approximately 1,520 acres, all of which are paid for and are the property of the Syndicate.

There are three ore bodies now exposed by stripping at different points. On number two body a test shaft of 20 feet has been sunk ,and is showing solid ore. This body has been traced by stripping for about one-half a mile.

Assays made from the Syndicate's ore show 15 per cent. lead and zinc, 3.4 per cent. copper, 5oz. silver, and $5.80 to the ton in gold.

A staff of men are doing preliminary development work, an excellent camp has been built, and the syndicate has bought its own diamond drill ,and will shortly start an extensive diamond drilling campaign.

All development work is under the personal direction of Mr. J. F. Hickling, a "real old-timer" of the north, who states that the surface showing on these properties are as good or even better than those of the famous Bunker Hill, and that sufficient development work will prove up a large ore body.

The Copenhagen Lead Syndicate is divided into 3,000 units, of which a limited number are now being offered at $300 per unit. Each unit is convertible into 1,000 fully paid non-assessable shares in a company to be formed with a capital of $3,000,000, divided into shares of $1.00 par.

The Northern Canada Bond Corporation, with offices in the Temple Building, Toronto, are sponsoring the sale of these units, and all inquiries should be addressed to them.

Bank Issues Strong In Active Trading

TORONTO, April 14 (Canadian Press). — Some good advances were made throughout the list on the Toronto Stock Exchange this morning, in heavy trading, but the outstanding feature was the remarkable strength of the active bank issues Toronto climbed 30 at 335, Royal advanced 42 at 430, Commerce gained 19 at 315, Dominion and Montreal five each, Standard three, and Nova Scotia ten at 297½. Winnipeg, with a gain of 1⅝ at 124⅞, was a strong spot, as were also the Laura Secord issues at 47⅞ and 145, Brazilian at 240½, Canadian Industrial Alcohol at 48½, and Canada Cement at 33⅛. The curb issues were largely unchanged with Wineries, Seagrams and Oils active. International Nickel softened 1¼ at 91.

CAT FANCIERS CALL MEETING

Fall Show Being Considered and Organization Necessary.

FINE ANIMALS IN CITY.

The Cat Show of lost fall created a greatly increased interest in fancy felines, and numerous pedigreed pets were placed in Peterborough homes in consequence.

Owners of a conspicously attractive puss find it impossible to lose interest in cats of royal lineage, as Tabby, or Mike, or Blue Bell, or some such named animal insists on retaining its place in the affections, and this accounts for a movement just now to get in readiness for another cat show at the Made-in-Canada Exhibition this fall. Affiliation with the larger Provincial Society is necessary in order to secure the exhibit of cats from outside, and a branch society is to be formed here with this in view. A chance to see the cats that have been prize winners at the big shows is an educational feature that local fanciers will appreciate, and will also make more friends for aristocratic pussies.

A meeting of all who are interested in fine cats is to be held at the rooms of Drs. Craig, Cameron and Crough, corner George and Hunter streets, at 8 o'clock on Monday evening. All cat owners and those who wish they were, are invited to be present.

Mr. and Mrs. Kirch, of Toronto, the latter being secretary of the Royal Canadian Cat Show, recently paid a visit to this city to ascertain what was being done in the way of organization and show arrangements, so that other dates would not be permitted to clash with that of Peterborough.

They assured the local fanciers that if the date was right there would be a very large entry of cats from Toronto, Hamilton and Buffalo, promising as fine a cat show as would be seen anywhere in Canada.

STUDEBAKER'S

ERSKINE SIX

40 miles an hour when NEW —62-mile speed later

YOU can trace Studebaker engineering genius in the New Canadian Edition of the Erskine Six in the velvet ease with which it delivers 62-mile-an-hour speed. It is further evidenced in your ability to drive 40-miles-an-hour the first day . . . and you need change oil only at rare intervals.

The exceptional performance of the new Erskine was demonstrated when a stock Erskine Six Sedan averaged in excess of 54-miles-an-hour for 24 consecutive hours. No stock car selling in its class has ever equalled this record.

You will find the new Erskine Six a Studebaker quality car . . . for 76 years that name has stood for fine transportation. Drive this high quality car of low first cost and of low operating cost.

ACCEPTS OFFER FROM THE PRESS

Churchill's Announcement That He Will Turn To Journalism Arouses England.

LABOR AGAINST IT.

LONDON, April 14.—Lord Birkenhead's magazine article, attacking women and claiming their failure in the realism of industry, finance, etc., and also an announcement just made that Hon. Winston Churchill intends to again turn to journalism and write a series of articles under the title of Personages I Have Known, has aroused fresh controversy in Great Britain over the rights of members of the Cabinet to earn money through journalistic writing. It is claimed this is contrary to the recent ruling of Premier Baldwin.

Attacked By Labor.

The Daily Herald, organ of the Labor party, leads the attack on Birkenhead with "Chuck It, Smith," a line borrowed from a satirical poem on Birkenhead, written by G. K. Chesterton. The Herald points out that it is inconsistent with political decency and honor for Lord Birkenhead to retain his seat in the Cabinet while he is opposed to the franchise for young women, and calls upon Premier Baldwin to invite Birkenhead to resign.

Salaries Insufficient?

The Morning Post inquires whether ministerial salaries are insufficient, so that the ministers find a difficulty in living thereon. It satirically remarks that if the Chancellor of the Exchequer has not discovered how to check the growing public expenditures may it not be because his mind is forever running away upon these literary excursions. Churchill, it is said, expects to receive $15,000 for his articles, which are to be non-political and non-controversial.

The Daily News, joining in the outcry, laments that Cabinet discipline has altogether disappeare Balfour, it says, contributed to it his mild limpness, but he was martinet compared with Baldwin.

MORE EVIDENCE HEARD AT MINE

Royal Commissioner Hears Testimony of Several Hollinger Foremen.

TELL OF PRACTICES.

HAILEYBURY, Ont., April 13. — (Canadian Press).—Switching temporarily from consideration of suggestions for safety measures to the hearing of evidence relating to the dumping of powder thaw waste in the workings, Mr. Justice Godson, Royal Commissioner enquiring into the Hollinger disaster, to-day listened to a number of mine employees on this point. Dick Stevens, now a shift boss, testified that he had put refuse in the stopes, carrying on this practice from Murdoch McLeod, the man he had relieved.

To Peter White, K.C., counsel for the Commission, witness said no back filling was done on his shift, this work being carried out during the night. Captain Delahunt was transportation captain at the time. He had received no instructions from Delahunt, he said.

A. Young, in charge of back filling in the stopes, was questioned by the Commissioner regarding the use of sand for back filling, and told of the method employed. His evidence concluded this phase of the hearing today.

The League of Nations

(Contributed)

The League of Nations Society of Canada is organizing for a special drive for increased membership on Tuesday, April 17th. Canada is officially a constituent unit in the League of Nations and we have reason to be grateful for the recognition which has been shown us at Geneva. Readers who are interested in the work of the League will have observed that it is making history in a direction which has never been attempted before, though it has been dreamed of for generations. Already its achievements have been such as to inspire the hope that in the years that lie ahead it may be effectively instrumental in outlawing war as a barbarous method of settling disputes, worthy only of primitive man. Civilized nations ought to be able to compose their differences without the arbitrament of war. That reasonable conviction underlies the institution of the League of Nations. Conciliatory and judicial methods such as are employed within civilized countries ought to be applicable also to international differences. The League of Nations is bent on discovering a means of adopting these methods. Already it has successfully quenched the smouldering fires of half a dozen incipient wars. There has never been such a concerted world effort to establish and maintain permanent peace. If it fails the civilized world faces moral and material bankruptcy.

It is recognized that the effectiveness of the league cannot be maintained and increased so as to accomplish its great task by the support of governments alone. It must have the intelligent interest and moral support of all the peoples whose governments are represented at Geneva. The one way of cultivating and enlisting public opinion in all the countries in behalf of the objects of the League is by independent organization of citizens in societies in which all who see the wisdom of preventing war may be able to express their desires and exercise their personal influence. It is, therefore, through the League of Nations Society of Canada that private citizens can bring their moral support to bear upon the great enterprise of world peace. There is really no other way. Citizens of Peterborough are accordingly urged to believe it worth the effort of coming forward voluntarily and joining the local branch, at the nominal fee of one dollar. It is a small thing for each one to do, but it is something each one can do. If we are anxious to see the accomplishment of the aims and objects of the league, then we ought to be willing to do what we can, individually, to express our own interest and to co-operate toward that great end. Each member of the Canadian Society will receive "The Bulletin," which is the official organ of the society and which provides a steady flow of interesting information with regard to the work and activities of the league.

BRIDGE COMPANY SEEKING CHARTER

Will Continue Efforts To Get Permission To Build Across St. Lawrence.

OTTAWA, Ont., April 13 (Canadian Press). — The Thousand Island Bridge Company, of which W. Gilbert Freeman, of Glen's Falls, N. Y., is the president, will go ahead with its efforts to have its application for permission to build a bridge across the St. Lawrence ratified by the Dominion Parliament. Announcement of this was made by the solicitors of the company in Ottawa.

Yesterday another company, headed by Senator George Graham, Col. G. P. Murphy, and others had its charter for a bridge across the river at Brockville endorsed by the Railway Committee of the House of Commons. The sites of the two proposed bridges are some twenty-two miles apart, the Thousand Island Company planning to construct a bridge from a point just west of Alexandria Bay, N.Y., using several islands with bridges connecting them to reach the Canadian mainland. Both companies have yet to overcome the objection of Governor Smith, of the State of New York, who has vetoed such proposals on the ground that they should be undertaken by the Governments rather than by private interests.

GREAT HELP TO YOUNG MOTHERS

Baby's Own Tablets Have Many Uses and Are Absolutely Harmless.

To have in the house a simple, harmless remedy for the minor ills of babies and little children is a great boon to young mothers, and this is exactly why Baby's Own Tablets have been found in thousands of households. The Tablets regulate the stomach and bowels, break up colds and simple fevers, allay the irritation of cutting teeth, yet they have no drug taste and the children like them.

Concerning the Tablets Mrs. Ruthven Crommiller, Ruthven, Ont., writes:—"Kindly send me your little book on the Care of the Baby. I have two children, one four years of age and the other a year and a half. Both are in excellent health and the only medicine they have had is Baby's Own Tablets. I always keep the Tablets in the house and am happy to recommend them to other mothers."

Obituary

MRS. W. J. LONG.

The death occurred on April 11, 1928, of Annie Elizabeth Webster, widow of the late William J. Long, in her 70th year.

Funeral service is being held at her late residence, 374 Delaware Avenue, Saturday, April 14th, at 3.30 p.m. Interment will be in Prospect Cemetery.

WILLIAM HASTIE.

The death occurred early Sunday morning, April 8th, of William Hastie of Lang, one of Otonabee's oldest and most respected residents, at the ripe old age of 96 years and three months.

The deceased was born in Uphall, Scotland, January 17, 1832, coming to Canada in 1856, first settling in Keene, eight years later moving to Lang, where he resided until his death. Mr. Hastie, despite his age, was still quite hale and hearty until a few months ago, having only taken to his bed one week previous to his death. He was a member of the Presbyterian church and a life-long Liberal.

Of a family of ten, there are left to mourn his loss, three daughters, Mrs. Ellen Smith of Harvey, Mrs. Thomas Graham of Indian River and Miss Kate at home, also four sons, William of New Ontario, James of Edmonton, Alta., Joseph of Villiers, and David of Lang, besides a large number of grandchildren and great grandchildren. His wife predeceased him eighteen years ago.

The funeral was held from his late residence on Tuesday afternoon at two o'clock to the Keene Cemetery. Notwithstanding the very bad condition of the roads, a large number of friends and neighbors, many of them from distant places, turned out to pay their last respects to one who will be missed throughout the community. The flower tributes received were many, which testified to the high esteem in which he was held. The Rev. Mr. Clary of Keene Presbyterian Church officiated at the house and cemetery and paid eloquent tribute to the many virtues of the deceased.

29 KNOWN DEAD IN DANCE HALL

Explosion Wrecks Building in Missouri Town—Gasoline Tank Blamed.

WAS UNDER BUILDING.

WESTPLAINS, Missouri, April 14. Canadian Press. — Death stalked into this little Ozark city and turned a dance hall, with its merry making throng, into a holocaust, with 29 known dead. Rescue workers were today tearing away the debris, where laughter changed to shrieks of terror as an explosion wrecked the building late last night, seeking 12 persons missing and thought to have perished beneath the falling walls.

Sixteen injured are in the hospitals, many in a serious condition.

The cause of the explosion has not been determined.

It is believed that those listed as missing may be included among the unidentified dead.

Fire followed almost immediately and destroyed three buildings before it was brought under control.

The property loss was estimated at between a hundred and a hundred and fifty thousand.

The dance was being held on the second floor of a two-story building The ground floor was a garage and motor sales room. Officers to-day are investigating a report that a large gasoline storage tank, thought to have been under the building, was the cause of the blast.

Several score persons, knowing friends and relatives were attending the dance, made frantic attempts to enter the wrecked and burning structure.

The intense heat of the fire and the total darkness caused when the power plant was damaged, hindered the rescuers. Soon after the explosion, the walls of the building collapsed.

GREENLY ISLAND TERMINUS OF FIRST FLIGHT

when they return to their native land.

New York, thrilled to the core, is preparing a "Lindbergh" reception for the three intrepid birdmen when they finally reach that city, while every plane in the country had followed the flight with tremendous interest.

Landed at Noon

NEW YORK, April 14 (Canadian Press).—Having made the first non-stop airplane flight across the north Atlantic from East to West, the crew of the German Junkers monoplane Bremen was safe to-day on lonely, icebound Greenly Island, Quebec, in the Straits of Belle Isle.

Any ill luck there may have been in the quest of fame at the risk of death on Friday, the 13th, was offset by a four-leaved shamrock carried in the plane.

After fighting storm, headwinds and fog in its flight from Dublin, the plane came down some 1,077 miles short of its destination and far off its course at noon yesterday. It had covered some 2,125 miles in 34 hours, 32 minutes., airline and presumably more much more when deviations from the course are considered.

Propeller Broken

The propeller was broken and the landing gear damaged. It was assumed that this occurred when the plane landed. It was regarded as impossible for the plane to have landed on the island itself, which is little more than a square mile in area and it was assumed that the landing was made on the ice.

As soon as word was received from Baron Huenefeld, preparations were made to bring him and his companions to New York. The Junkers plane, sister ship of the Bremen, was ordered to fly from Mitchel Field to Greenly Island to enable the fliers to continue on to New York. The Canadian Government patrol steamer Montcalm, now in the St. Lawrence River, wirelessed that she was proceeding at once to the island. If the ship gets through, she will take the men to North Sydney, N.S.

THE FLIGHT IN A NUTSHELL.

Distance covered: 2,125 miles from Dublin, down 1,077 miles from destination, Mitchel Field, Long Island.

Elapsed time: 34 hours 32 minutes from 12.38 a.m., eastern standard time, Thursday to 11 a.m., eastern standard time, yesterday.

How and when the news came: Friday evening by wireless, from Point Amour, ten miles by airline from Greenly Island, messages being sent to the North German Lloyd Lines in New York and others by Baron Huenfeld.

What Greenly Island is: A narrow, barren area near the mouth of Belle Isle Straits, half a mile long, treeless, rocky, and linked to the mainland, two miles away, by thick ice, which will not break up until May.

Landed at Noon

NEW YORK, April 14 (Canadian Press).—The Radio Corporation of America announced last night that its station at Chatham, Mass., had received from the Point Amour station via Belle Isle station and Louisburg, N.S., a message that the German plane Bremen landed at noon on Greenly Island. The plane was slightly damaged, the message said, and the crew were well. The message was regarded as official by the Louisburg station.

Reported Over Fundy

"A plane was sighted passing over the Bay of Fundy at 6.59 p.m., although too far distant to identify, it was considered as possibly the Junkers plane Bremen."

At 7.40 p.m. the same station picked up additional message from the Louisburg station saying, "We have just received a report that the plane landed at Greenly Island, near Point Amour, Labrador, but this is not official. We are trying to get in touch with our station at Point Amour and will advise as soon as possible."

Landed Safely

SYDNEY, N.S., April 14 (Canadian Press).—The Marconi wireless station at Glace Bay reported last night that their information from Point Amour radio station was that the German plane, Bremen, had landed safely at Greenly Island.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., April 14 (Canadian Press).—A wireless message addressed to The London Times and believed to have been sent by one of those aboard the German plane Bremen, stating that a safe landing had been made on Belle Isle, was picked up last night by an operator of the Reading Railway.

The message read:

"Landed Belle Isle 6.06 Atlantic time. All well. Unaided."

Steamer Sent Out

OTTAWA, April 14.—The Government steamer Montcalm has been dispatched to Greenly Island to return members of the crew of the monoplane Bremen to civilization. Early this morning the Montcalm was in the Gulf of St. Lawrence, 200 miles from Greenly Island. The steamer reported that she was then steaming for the island with sufficient coal on board. The vessel was diverted from her patrol course between Anticosti and Labrador, on instructions rushed to Captain Mercier of the Montcalm, at midnight.

The lightkeeper, who spent the Christmas holiday in Quebec, travelled afoot or by dog team to the island, and reported that it took from December 26 to March 17 to get to his destination.

Relief will not be an easy matter because of the thick drift ice and the fact that usually the straits are not navigated till the end of May or even later. The first incoming steamer, the Philip Dodge, was off Cape Ray last evening, but not as near Greenly Island as is the Montcalm.

The possibility of sending a flying boat from Ottawa is also being discussed, but there is only one capable of carrying five passengers, while the hazard would be very considerable, and as the aviators are not suffering any hardship, rescue by means of a boat is preferable, especially as the Bremen could also be salvaged. If this plan is carried out, the landing would be at North Sydney.

INTERESTING TALK ON MISSION FIELD

by Mrs. H. W. Johnston, was much enjoyed before the address by the Rev. Joseph Wilks.

Refreshments were served at the tea hour by Mrs. Burnham, assisted by her daughter and other members of the committee in charge, being: Misses Marion Earle, Marjorie Skitch, Elsie Spence, and Wilma Fallis.

There were more than thirty in attendance including three new members, M rsn ,nyW, ,lgx' -,.. uevTEE bers, Mrs. Wynne, Mrs. Mumford, and Miss Martha Earle.

The Easter thankofferipg amounted to more than seventeen dollars, with a number of envelopes to come in. The C.G.I.T. group joined with the circle for the Easter gathering.

Bible Study Class

The Leadership Training Class and Bible Study Service, which is held each Tuesday evening, at 7.45 aclock in the school room of the United Church, has completed the course on "The Teaching Values of the Old and New Testaments, and on Tuesday evening next will begin a third section, "The Teacher's Study of the Life of Christ," by Barclay.

A cordial invitation is extended to anyone interested to join in this weekly service, whether preparation for an examination on the work covered is intended or not. Miss Estelle Hetherington is the teacher, and was last week presented with a copy of Stanly Jones' new book, "The Christ of the Round Table." Four or five of the pupils who covered the course on the New Tiestament are writing on the examination this week.

The subjects in the new section include the following: (a) "The teacher's study of the life of Christ"; (b) "The life of Christ in outline"; (c) "The four-fold gospel"; (d) "The forn and content of Jesus teaching"; (e) "The Personality of Jesus."

Wins Scholarship

Alfred Needler, son of Dr. G. Needler of Toronto, has been successful in winning a scholarship valued at $1,000., according to announcement of recent awards at the University of Toronto. Mr. Needler, who is in his twenty-first year, took his B.A. degree in 1926; his M.A. in 1927, and this year has won the scholarship in connection with post-graduate work in biology in which he is specializing. His father is an old Millbrook boy, the Needler family having been intimately connected with community life here for many years past.

GIVES ADDRESS ON THE WORK OF UNIVERSITY

ed a large fortune to the trustees, he believed the Baptist denomination worthy to be entrusted with it. Now, the university comes for the first time to ask the denomination to help financially.

"One argument in its favor is its worthy showing in the past. She has justified her claims by service to individuals, to the church and to the country as a whole. Seventeen hundred persons have passed through the university, all impressed with her ideals.

"McMaster has attained a proud scholastic record, contributing worthy graduates to every profession. However, we, as Baptists, are more concerned with the university as a Christian school of learning. The founders wished that the students should feel a distinctly Christian influence. She has fulfilled her requirements in that regard as proven, partly by her graduates, though none of them feel worthy to represent the ideals of the university. They do represent a worthy realization of Christian ideals as impressed upon them. They have shown an appreciation of the ideals of service. Those graduates will say that it made the most important contribution to their lives. He thinks of the men he met there, especially the professors as well as the students. Truly her record has justified her claims.

"McMaster's contribution to the denomination has been a great one—she has been termed the greatest asset to the Baptist denomination, for she has played a large part in training leaders, ministers and missionaries, as well as members of the Baptist Church in other professions.

McMaster's representation in the affairs of the denomination has been willed by the denomination itself.

"Then, if we would consider a still broader field, we may think of McMaster's contribution to our country for many of her graduates are not Baptists. She has contributed to the education of the life of the country just as other universities have. A small college can contribute a special equipment's and ideals' effect upon eduction. There is the case for McMaster based on her record and contribution to the individuals, church and country.

"This contribution has not been formed and made without criticism. Constructive criticism has been and is welcomed at McMaster, but she has also suffered from false and unfriendly criticism from those who wished to injure her work. She has been the fortress which has protected the denomination with her defence of principles dear to the hearts of all true Baptists.

"Truly, the university is lacking in equipment and in personnel, and the endowment is inadequate to increasing demands. The fact is, McMaster cannot carry on as she is, and the decision has been to remove to Hamilton after careful consideration.

"It would take much time to outline the careful investigation and steps leading up to this decision, so I shall ask you to accept as fact, the necessity for the removal. In Hamilton, the university can make a fresh start under friendly conditions with an opportunity to become a factor in the community life. There is every prospect that she will be able to carry out her ideals on a wider plane."

The speaker went on to outline the growth of Acadia University in Nova Scotia. "It is quite up to and beyond McMaster," said he, "and any Baptist who sees it, will be enthusiastic for a larger McMaster.

"So we come to the problem of raising the necessary funds. Do you realize that the people of the denomination have never before contributed in a large way to McMaster,? In helping to bring about the new McMaster, we shall gain a new interest in and new appreciation of her value to the denomination."

Other Speakers.

The Rev. Sutcliffe expressed the appreciation of all for the address delivered by Mr. Gray, and in so doing, also thanked the ladies and all who had contributed in any way to the success of the evening.

A. S. Zavity also spoke, stating that the opportunity was at hand for Baptists to take upón themselves a responsibility not hitherto felt. He moved that a committee be appointed for Murray Street Church to take up the matter in its behalf, and L. L. Pettit seconded his motion. Accordingly, the following were named to constitute the committee:

J. H. Madill, A. S. Zavitz, Walter Garbutt, W. Shiner, A. H. Campbell, Miss M. Montgomery, and Mrs. H. H. Graham.

Previous to the closing, the Rev. J. L. Harton, of Park Street Baptist Church, voiced his appreciation of the splendid address delivered by Mr. Grey, and explained his belief that the sentiment and loyalty of McMaster's graduates and friends would make the removal possible.

"O Canada," followed by the benediction, closed the meeting.

WEDDING BELLS

HUGGINS—TATE.

A pretty Easter wedding was solemnized in Centreville Presbyterian church on Wednesday, April 11th, at 1 o'clock, when Emma May, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. A Tate, Centreville, was united in holy bonds of matrimony to Wilbert Karl Huggins, son of Mr. Joseph Huggins and the late Mrs. Huggins, South Monaghan.

Rev. J. Riddell officiated at the marriage ceremony and the wedding music was played by Miss Gwendolyn Hutchison, organist of the church.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a becoming dress of rose georgette with rose beige trimming and carried a bouquet of sweetheart roses.

DISORDERS OF METABOLISM

The word "metabolism" simply means tissue change, and is the sum of all the physical and chemical processes by which the living organized substances produce and maintain.

The diseases of metabolism can be divided into three classes. In the first one, there is a perversion of the carbohydrate metabolism which is called diabetes. In the second, there is perversion of fat metabolism, called obesity. And in the third, there is the perversion of protein metabolism, producing gout and rheumatism. All of the diseases of this group are intimately related to one another, both chemically and clinically. Each is characterized by an inability on the part of the organism to convert sugar, fat, or albumin in a normal manner. There is such an intimate connection between the metabolic perversion in these three groups that we often see combinations of diabetes and obesity, of diabetes and rheumatism, or of rheumatism and obesity, or even all three together.

In diabetes the first important thing to do is to increase the general nutrition of the patient; secondly, to substitute protein as much as possible for the carbohydrates, and then to build up the patient's strength so that metabolism in general will become more perfect.

In obesity the essential thing to do is to cut down on the quantity of food. In this way the body will be encouraged to use up its fat reserve, and a reduction of weight is bound to be produced. Starches, sugars, and fats should be reduced to the minimum, and the patient must be urged to use a plentiful amount of all the greens, both cooked and raw, and a limited amount of proteins, such as meat, fish, eggs, fowl, etc. Exercise should be increased, as this will assist metabolism and, while hardening the muscular tissues, it will destroy many of the fat cells.

Where perversion of metabolism results in rheumatism, the first important thing to do is to rid the system of all the extra toxic material which has accumulated, such as the uric acid poisons, etc. This can best be accomplished through taking a strict fruit fast. The fast should be continued a matter of weeks rather than of days if one expects to entirely free himself of the accumulated uric acid and inorganic elements that have been precipitated in certain parts of the body. After all soreness has left the tissues and joints, the diet must then be resumed very carefully, and only good combinations of foods used. One with a tendency to rheumatic diseases must not be afraid of using limited quantities of flesh foods, but must restrict himself carefully in the use of carbohydrates.

In all of these diseases of faulty metabolism, the general bodily strength must be increased by systematic physical culture exercises, and by taking long walks each day in addition to the proper dietary treatment.

Questions and Answers.

Question: W. .K. writes: "Kindly inform me if there is any way of helping me. I have terrible head noises, and am very hard of hearing."

Answer: Your head noises are doubtless due to catarrh of the inner ear which also causes your deafness. Send a large, self addressed stamped envelope for my article, "Those Mysterious Ear Noises."

Question: Mrs. I. O. asks: "Do our bodies require milk? If so, when should we drink it?"

Answer: Milk is a wholesome food if used properly, but of course is not absolutely necessary, as other foods can supply the same elements. Study the menus published in this column each Saturday, and you will soon learn how to use milk properly.

Question: Inquirer asks: "Will you kindly advise me what would be the cause of stiffness and soreness in the side of the neck? Might this be the result of cold or do you think it might come from a hurt? Is it a form of rheumatism or neuralgia, and what treatment would you advise? I have suffered from this condition for six months. Have tried rubbing with different kinds of liniments, also used hot applications without any good results."

Answer: Go to an ostegpath or chiropractor and get his opinion. An x-ray picture of your neck vertebrae and a personal examination will surely disclose the cause of your trouble.

Question: Mrs. G. S. asks: "Is liquid paraffin oil a safe laxative to take?"

Answer: Paraffin oil may be used as an intestinal lubricant, but cannot be considered a laxative. It is a safe thing to use while you are correcting constipation through removing its cause.

The "Flu"

Mrs. Beulah Demone, Pleasant River, N.S., writes:—"Having suffered with the 'flu' a few years ago, I was left with a very weak heart.

"I was unable to go about, and could not do my housework.

"I would get dizzy spells and would have to go and lie down.

"I could not sleep at night as the least little noise would wake me up.

"I tried different kinds of medicine, but they seemed to do me no good.

"A friend recommended MILBURN'S HEART AND NERVE PILLS I have used five boxes and am much better; do not get those dizzy spells, and can do my own work as well as ever."

Price 50c. a box at all druggists and dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

REV. J. W. GORDON ACCEPTING CALL

Will Go To Welland Avenue United Church, St. Catharines, in July.

The many friends of the Rev. J. W. Gordon, B.A., B.D., of St. Andrew's United Church will regret to learn that he is leaving at the end of the present conference year to accept a unanimous invitation to Welland Avenue United Church, St. Catherines.

While regretting to lose Rev. Mr. Gordon from Peterborough, where he has endeared himself to people of this city, yet all will rejoice at the very splendid call which has come to him.

Welland Avenue Church in the city of St. Catherines is considered the most promising church in that city, having recently erected a very fine Sunday school, with full gymnasium equipment, for carrying on a complete program of young people's work.

Mr. Gordon will be an added acquisition to the ministerial strength of the city. Possessed of a fine mind, and a charming personality, he is sure of a very successful ministry in the growing and progressive city of St. Catherines.

GRAND JURY SAYS ADVICE UNHEEDED

Recommendations of Previous Juries Not Acted On At Toronto.

TORONTO, April 14.—(Canadian Press).—On the subject of Grand Jury recommendations the Mail and Empire says editorially:

"The Grand Jury complains that the observations of previous Grand Juries have received little or no attention, and submits that it is not performing a useful service if its recommendations are not given serious consideration by the authorities. It may be that such recommendations in the past did receive attention but that for various reasons they were not all acted upon. They are largely in the nature of social reforms, and social reform is notoriously slow. Nevertheless the Grand Jury did well to call attention to this neglect; it will fasten public opinion upon the necessity of these reforms, and 'hammering away' by successive juries will hasten the improvements advocated."

NEW BLOOD NEEDED IN THE SPRINGTIME

Try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills as a Blood Improving, Health-Restoring Tonic.

Every man, woman and child needs new, rich, red blood at this time of the year. That is a scientific fact. All doctors know it. The blood grows thin and poor in the winter; there is not enough of it, and spring shows the effect. Take notice and see how many people are pale and sallow at this time of the year. They complain of being easily tired, their appetite is poor, and they are often depressed and low-spirited. That is Mother Nature urging them to improve their blood supply; but often their digestion is weakened so that they cannot turn food into blood without help. Here is where modern medical science comes to the rescue. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have a direct action on the blood and enable you to get full use of the blood-making elements in your meals. You soon feel their effect—your appetite improves, your nerves are steadier, color returns to the cheeks and lips, you have more vim and energy, and can work with less fatigue.

The value of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to all who are in what is known as a run-down condition of health is proved by the experience of Mr. John A. O'Neil, Port Hood, N.S., who says:—"It is not possible for me to recommend Dr. Williams' Pink Pills too highly. I had been gradually growing weaker, and found it hard to do my work. I suffered from severe headaches and pains in the back. I was nervous and easily irritated, and altogether my condition was deplorable. A friend urged me to take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and I got a half dozen boxes. I had only taken them a short time when I found them helping me, and by the time I had taken the supply I got, I was again enjoying good health. Headaches and pains had disappeared, my nerves were strengthened and I had good reason to be thankful that I had followed the advice of my friend."

Whether you are seriously ill or merely feel easily tired and out-of-sorts, you should try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills this spring. They are sold by medicine dealers everywhere, or will be sent by mail at 50 cents a box by writing The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

LYRICS OF LIFE

SOMEWHERE.

Can I pass out of yonder door
And not go somewhere? Though no more
I came, would those who held me dear
To-morrow say, in grief and fear,
"He is not, since he is not here"?

No, one would say, "He loved the hills,
And there he wanders as he wills,"
Another say, "He loved the sea,
And somewhere, where he longed to be,
The sailor's soul is glad and free."

Yes, they would think of other streets
When this no more my step repeats,
Aye, if I passed beyond their ken,
Passed on, and came not here again,
Would think me somewhere, even then.

Just yesterday a friend I knew
Who was not here when day was through:
Her spirit passed from out the clay,
Even as travelers go their way;
But she is somewhere else to-day.

Cavan

CAVAN, April 14.—The last dance of the season was held in St. John's Parish Hall, Ida, on Wednesday evening. Mrs. Lloyd Kennedy, of Bethany, was presented with a beautiful bouquet of flowers, Mr. Kennedy having been the efficient floor manager for the season. Byan's orchestra supplied the music.

Personals.

Mrs. George Cobley and daughter, Dorothy, are visiting friends in Toronto.

Mr. R. Weaver, of Coboconk, is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Armstrong.

Messrs. Milton Carr and J. S. Cathcart motored to Westwood on Friday.

DRESS

By MARY MARSHALL

A skirt slip of solid color is worn under a printed chiffon blouse that shows a patch of the slip at the opening in the neck.

Skirts are once more almost invariably mounted on slip tops. We tried for a season or so—just for the sake of novelty, I suppose—to go back to the old-time separate skirt that was a separate skirt, but without success. Unless we wear corsets that produce an actual waistline—a neat sort of groove above the hips where the belt or elastic at the top of the skirt may be placed—the slip top seems to be a necessity.

For wear with opaque silk blouses or sweaters the slip top is usually made of thin wash silk, like old-fashioned china silk, and extends to a low hip line unless the overblouse or sweater is exceptionally short. These slip tops ought to be rather better fitted than they have been and when you buy your costume slips ready made it is advisable to fit them up a bit so that they will produce no unnecessary bulging beneath the closely adjusted overblouse or sweater. Usually they are cut straight at the top with shoulder straps attached.

For wear with transparent blouses or lace sweaters the slip top should be of the same material as the skirt portion—or at any rate of silk to match in color the lower portion. Sometimes the overblouse is cut in a fairly low line at the front and a triangle at the top of the slip forms a sort of vestee.

Many of the ready-to-wear slips in the shops are accompanied by neck squares of the material of the skirt portion, thus making possible a pleasing ensemble effect. In almost every wardrobe there is room for a slip of pleated black crepe or satin which may be worn with good effect with overblouses of green and black print on tan or white background, or of a print showing red and black.

TALK ON GEOLOGY MOST INTERESTING

Mrs. A. J. Madill Gives Ladies Insight Into Ancient Canada.

An insight into a subject which comes but seldom within the scope of audiences, whether of men or women, was afforded the members of the Women's Art Association yesterday afternoon, when Mrs. A. J. Madill gave an extremely interesting talk on "The Geological History of Canada and a General Survey of Ontario." Mr. Madill operated the slide machine which illustrated the lecture by means of a series of pictures. Although the subject itself is considered a heavy one, Mrs. Madill presented it in such a fashion as to enchain the attention of her audience from start to finish. Her talk was not too long, it was delivered in a pleasant fashion and with a modulation of voice that made it restful, and it touched only on the highlights of the subject, while giving a very graphic idea of it.

Illustrated throughout by slides, the lecture took the listeners through the various periods of earth formation, alluding in turn to the various types of rock, the Kewatin, consisting largely of greenstone or trap, the Laurentian, an igneous or melted rock, the gneiss, or granite, the conglomerate or pudding stone, the Huronian rock, the basaltic, limestone, shale, and sandstone, the great growth of cycads and club-mosses and horsetail vegetation. The pre-Cambrian period, the Azoic, without life, the Eozoic, or dawn of life, the Paleozoic, the Mesozoic, or middle period, and the Cainozoic, which marked the beginning of the era in which we live, all gave place in turn to one another, each with its distinctive form of earth growth.

Views from different parts of Canada were shown to illustrate the various periods and Mrs. Madill also had with her a table covered with specimens of rocks, which were examined with much interest at the conclusion of the lecture.

Pictures of pre-historic reptiles, of the great dinosaurs, some almost ninety feet long, of mammals and mastodons, were shown, also a number of interesting slides descriptive of the great glaciers which provide icebergs at the present time, of the moraines which tell to present generations the story of past and mighty glacial formations, and of the "pot holes" worn through by the action of running streams. In the glacial era, said Mrs. Madill, a great western lake called by geologists Lake Agassiz occupied the prairie district which now furnishes so much of Canada's wheat lands, and the Erigan River was another glacial manifestation of nature Lake Ontario has receded also since that period, when it occupied much more territory than it does at present. From researches such as these, geologists have reached the conclusion that it is 75,000 years since the Great Glacier covered the land, and that the earth itself is sixty million years old.

A very interesting review of what these periods have done for Canada, in the formation of her mineral wealth, was given. To the different epochs we owe the gold and silver and copper deposits, the silver of Cobalt, the nickel of Sudbury, the mica at Sydenham, the gypsum beds at Paris, the coal beds of the Maritime Provinces and of British Columbia, the saltwells at Goderich, the peat beds of Ontario, the oil wells at Petrolia, and the gas wells of Dunnville and Welland. Even the cement which has a home at Lakefield owes its existence to formations through the ages of time. Some interesting slides of the famous Rouyn and Flin Flon mining areas closed the lecture.

A very sincere vote of thanks to Mr. and Mrs. Madill was voiced by the president, Mrs. W. Blackwell.

HOROSCOPE

The Stars Incline, But Do Not Compel

(Copyright, 1928, McClure Syndicate.)

SUNDAY, APRIL 15, 1928.

Astrologers read this as rather a fortunate day, for while adverse aspects are read in the horoscope friendly planets dominate.

There is a sign that should be favorable to the ministry making for better financial rewards and general prosperity.

Interest in the churches is to increase, for there is to be an access of religious zeal in many denominations.

Although there are aspects that indicate prejudice and even gibotry these will disappear under a national condition that will cement all the forces of good, the seers prophesy.

Crime is to reach a degree of organized activity that will arouse all who are law-abiding, it is foretold, and the churches will join in a reform crusade.

On this day in April the stars smile on old faiths and there is an indication of return to more careful observances.

The sway is most favorable to the ancient order of things and should be inspiring to church-goers.

The clergy are well directed while this configuration prevails and they should benefit from this positing of the stars.

Music is subject to planetary conditions most beneficial and helpful in church services.

Wooers are warned that this is not an auspicious sway for lovemaking. The Sunday evening call should be omitted.

Women and children are now under a more protective and more helpful planetary influence than they were during the winter.

Persons whose birthdate it is may enjoy benefits that are bestowed by elders or employers.

Children born on this day have the augury of success in life. The subjects of this sign are fond of secrets.

MONDAY, APRIL 16, 1928.

While this is read by astrologers as a day of unimportant planetary direction it is said to be marked by opposing aspects.

There is a fairly good sign for literary workers today and for all who belong to the strictly intellectual classes.

Education is subject to first rate influences making for daring departures from old lines of study.

This should be a sway beneficial to women in their chosen vocations outside the home as well as helpful to those who confine themselves to domestic activities.

There is some encouragement to romance and lovemaking under this rule but the mind should dominate the heart while this configuration prevails.

It is a fairly lucky wedding day so far as material success is concerned, but there may be frequent quarrels.

Under this planetary government big deals may be temporarily thwarted and important plans delayed.

Increase of interest in military matters here in this country is strongly indicated.

This is read as an unpromising day for starting on journeys as accidents or dangers due to storms are indicated.

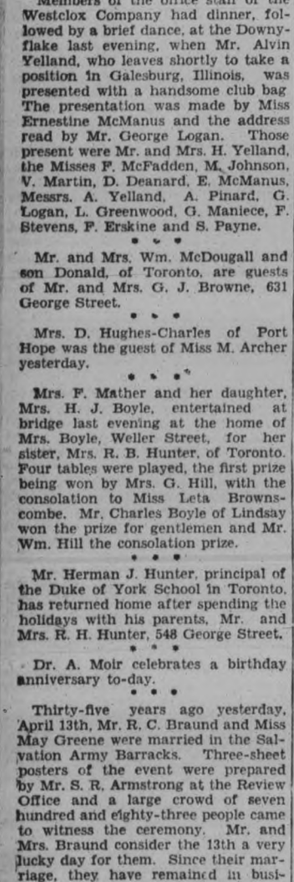
There is a favorable outlook for newspapers and magazines and much profit indicated from advertising.

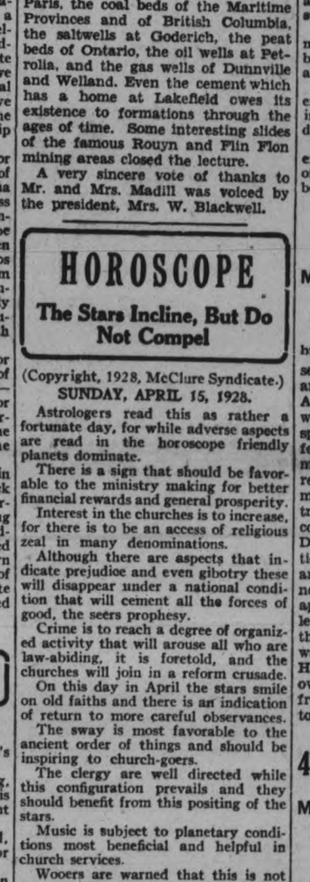
One of the reform campaigns of the year will be directed against kissing and the seers foretell a return to old standards of unapproachableness.

This is not an auspicious day for making an effort to obtain money by borrowing. It is well to be careful about financial matters.

Persons whose birthdate it is may experience many changes in the coming year and it is well to beware of disputes of every sort.

Children born on this day may be exceedingly temperamental and fond of change. Sailors and yachtsmen are born under this sign.





GOITRE NOT A DISEASE.

Milwaukee Doctor Makes Remarkable Discovery.

MILWAUKEE, Wisc.—It has been brought to light by scientific research that goitre is not a disease and is not to be treated as such. Dr. A. A. Rock, Dept. 730, Box 737, Milwaukee, Wisc., a prominent goitre specialist for over 24 years, has perfected a different method of treatment for his patients that has proved remarkably successful. This same method is now being used for a home treatment of goitre cases all over the country with astonishing results. The Doctor states that goitre is a condition which grows worse with neglect and recommends immediate attention no matter how small the growth may appear. He strongly opposes needless operations. Dr. Rock is the author of a book that tells in a simple way about treating goitre at home. He has published this book at his own expense and will send a copy free to anyone interested. Write him to-day.—Advt.

4TH BATTALION RE-UNION

Members of the Famous "Mad Fourth," Will Meet in Hamilton April 21.

To commemorate the second battle of Ypres "The Mad Fourth" is holding a reunion and banquet at Hamilton, Ontario, on Saturday, April 21, 1928.

Will fall in at Hamilton Armouries, 5.30 p.m., proceed to Cenotaph and return to Armouries for banquet.

From present returns it looks as if this is to be one of the largest reunions held by any unit since the end of the war.

A splendid program has been arranged, and it is earnestly requested that all old Fourth men interested in this will immediately get in touch with Capt. R. S. Watson, 66 Beulah avenue, Hamilton, Ont., who will furnish all particulars required.

Lou Gehrig Starts 1928 Home-Run Record

POLES OUT HIS FIRST HOMER OF THE SEASON

Yankees Win 7-8 Decision From Athletics in Batting Feast.

COMBS AND MEUSEL STAR.

Last Game of Cleveland-White Sox Series Called in Sixth.

NEW YORK, April 14. — Canadian Press. — The New York Yankees apparently have lost none of the bone-crushing power that carried them to an American League pennant by an overwhelming margin last year.

The champions put together three home runs two triples and a pair of doubles along with sundry singles, to nose out the Athletics at Philadelphia yesterday 8 to 7. Lou Gehrig started his 1928 home run campaign in the second inning with a tremendous drive that sailed into a window in a house across the street from the park. But homers were the rule rather than the exception.

Six drives good for the circuit were poled out each team getting three. Joe Hauser hit two and Cochrane one for the Athletics while Combs and Meusel aided Gehrig in upholding the Yankees' prestige. Ruth got only one hit a double.

Game Called.

The last game of the Cleveland-White Sox series at Chicago was called at the end of the sixth inning yesterday on account of the rain. The score at the time was 1 to 1.

Lefty Miller hurled for the Indians while Grady Adkins a young rookie right hander from Shreveport hurled for the white Sox. Adkins was wild walking three men and hit George Burns twice. However he allowed only four hits. Each team left seven men on bases, the Indians being retired twice, with the sacks loaded.

Boston Defeated.

Though Phil Todt smashed two home runs into the stands at Boston yesterday, Washington defeated Boston 6 to 4. The Red Sox first baseman collected both of his homers off Zachary in the third and fifth innings. Boston gave Wiltse a three run lead in the third but Washington collected four runs in the next innings with four hits, a base on balls and Bluege's doubles.

The St. Louis Browns led by former Tiger players, defeated the home team at Detroit 4 to 3, for their third consecutive victory. Clyde Manion's home run in the ninth inning which tied the score 3 all, and a wild pitch by Holloway in the 11th handed the Browns the opening three series.

Detroit held a lead throughout 8 inning after scoring three runs in the first inning. Heinie Manush, former Tiger centrefielder, and Marty McManus, the Detroit third baseman, engaged in an argument on the third base line, and were banished from the game.

"KID" ROY WINS FROM JOHNSTON

Knocks Out Toronto Man in the Second Round of Title Bout.

TORONTO, April 14. — It took Leo "Kid" Roy of Montreal, only five minutes and forty five seconds to turn aside the challenge of Jackie Johnston of this city, Dominion bantam champion for the Canadian featherweight title, at the Arena Gardens last night, but it took Johnston considerably longer to revive from the left hook to the jaw that terminated hostilities just 15 seconds before he end of the second round. While there was nothing left to chance or argument as to the ending of the bout there was sufficient shown by the local lad in the brief time that the affair lasted to give the Johnston supporters much support for their argument that he is a strong contender for the lighter of Roy's two titles the Montrealer also holding the lightweight crown.

The knockout punch put an end to an attack by Johnston which gave promise of a change in the owner ship of the title ,and while Johnston was unlucky in a way Roy quickly took advantage of a punch that was partially blocked to terminate the affair. There was little action in the first round, but whatever edge there was belonged to Johnston. The pair started off like a pair of game cocks and neither landed a blow for over a minute. The action was confined to a moving of shoulders, feet and gloves until finally Roy landed a couple of lefts, but Johnston came back with enough lefts and rights in the final thirty seconds to take the round by a small margin.

MUST REMAIN ANGLICAN.

Widow of Toronto Man May Have Income of Estate On This Condition.

TORONTO, Ont., April 14.—(Canadian Press).—Under the will of her husband, Hans James Caulfield, who died February 7, leaving an estate of $95,065, the widow, Mrs. Mary Louise Caulfield, may retain her inheritence, should she marry again, only on condition that she see that the son, James Gordon Caulfield, is brought up an Anglican, and that she herself does not embrace or countenance the Roman Catholic faith. Should she re-marry, she receives 22½ per cent. of the income provided she fulfills the obligation mentioned above. In this case the other 15 per cent. would be divided among the children.

VIEWS ON SPORTS

ENTER TEAM

C.G.E. to enter team in City Softball League, decided at meeting of the association held yesterday.

Bill Bennett will pilot the Canadian General Electric softball team in the City League this season, and with about sixteen teams in the intershop league to choose from the Electric boys should trot out an all-star aggregation. Rules and the drawing-up of a playing schedule were the chief topics of discussion at an enthusiastic meeting of C.G.E. softball association held last night. It was decided that a single schedule would be played with the first three teams playing off in the finals. Fourteen teams were represented and it was considered likely that more would be entered before entry list closes on April 20th. It was also decided to hold a girls' softball meeting on next Monday night.

• • • • •

A lively tilt is booked for Monday night, April 16th, when "Spin" Hefferman's Canuck Sports will clash with Bill Coursey's Millionaires in opening game of Canuck Boys' softball league. Casey Masterson will do the twirling for the Sports.

• • • • •

The Holy Name league got under way to a good start last night when team representatives and others interested gathered at a meeting held in St. Alphonsus Lyceum to elect officers and to hold a general discussion of matters connected with the working of the league. It was decided to stick to O.B.A. rules, while a resolution was passed which allowed for these rules to be amended from time to time. The league will hold their second meeting on Thursday, April 26th, when a playing schedule will be drawn up and matter of ball field will be discussed.

PETERBOROUGH MEN BOWL HIGH SCORES

Win All Aggregate Prizes and Some Others in Oshawa Tourney.

OSHAWA, Ont., April 14.—Yesterday, the first day of the Oshawa Recreation Club's five-pin tournament, bowlers were present from Toronto, Peterborough and Belleville. In the five-man team event Toronto Acorns No. 2 were 41 pins up on Belleville No. 1 team. Rogers and Cobb, of Toronto, led in the doubles; Anderson, of Belleville, was high in the singles; while four Peterborough bowlers were the only ones to finish in the prize class for the high total in the nine games rolled. The following were the entries in each of the events and total scores:

Five-man Teams.

Doubles.

Singles.

Three-game scores — Anderson, Belleville, 774; Naples, Peerboro, 688; Doughty, Peterboro, 683; Thomas, Peterboro, 603; Fitzgerald, Peterboro, 604; Curvin, Peterboro, 573.

The four bowlers who finished in the prize money class for the high total in nine games which includes three in each of the five-man team event, doubles and singles were all from Peterborough, as follows: Doughty, 1787; Thomas, 1662; Curvin, 1661; Naples, 1622.

For Saturday afternoon and evening the following five-man teams are entered: Toronto Acorns No 1, Toronto Danforths (2), Toronto Public Utilities (2), Robert Simpson Company (6), Toronto City Hall (2).

RETAINS FOURTH PLACE IN DERBY

Phillip Granville, of Hamilton, With Leaders in Bunion Derby.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., April 14 (Canadian Press)—Phillip Granville, Hamilton, retained fourth place in the bunion derby last night after completing the 33.5 lap from El Reno in 5:48f:57, his elapsed time or the 1,491.5 miles from Los Angeles was 282:20:50.

Henry Swabey, York, Ont., withdrew at El Reno yesterday. "I am utterly exhausted," Swabey said.

"I have tried to plug along thinking that I might regain my strength, but it was to no avail."

Other Canadians:

John Cronick, Saskatoon, 5:27:52; 291:38:42.

George Liebergall, Bellevue, 5:42:29; 321:43:06.

A. Constantinoff, Toronto, 6:37:02; 320:59:46.

Eugene Germain, Montreal, 8:20:31; 383:00:16.

S. Steveno, Calgary, 7:36:11; 402:-06:56.

Harold McNutt, Bellevue, 8:37:12; 404:51:44.

VETERAN POLOIST DIES.

Victor Louis Garnett Introduced Game on Prairies Forty Years Ago.

VICTORIA, B.C., April 14.—(By Canadian Press).—Victor Louis Garnett, who captained the first polo team in North America, died at his home at Cherry Point, Cowichan district, recently, aged 78.

Garnett came to Canada in 1879 and established a ranch in southwestern Alberta, near the Crow's Nest Pass. It was there that he assisted in organizing the first polo team on the continent. The team made several exhibition tours, but it was not until several years after it had disbanded that the game began to flourish on a large scale in this country.

GIANTS TAKE SECOND GAME

Genewick, Weakening in the Eighth, Aids in Braves' 7-3 Defeat.

COHEN GOOD.

NEW YORK, April 14 (Canadian Press)—Joe Genewich weakened in the eighth inning yesterday and the New York Giants pounded out five runs to make it two straight over the Boston Braves, 7 to 3.

Genewich entered the eighth inning with a three to two lead, but was derricked after doubles by Roush and Jackson and singles by Lindstrom and Terry had scored two runs. Bunny Hearn was called to the rescue, but was relieved by Arthur Delaney after he had hit Mann with a wild pitch. Andy Cohen then doubled to score two more runs. Delaney forced the final Giant tally over with a walk with the bases loaded.

"The battle of second basemen" again ended in Cohen's favor. He got only one hit, but Rogers Hornsby went hitless.

Win 6—1 Victory

With Dazzy Vance in mid-season form, the Dodgers coasted to a six to one victory over the Philadelphia Nationals at Brooklyn, evening the series at one triumph apiece.

Vance held the Phils to five scattered hits and fanned six men. Two singles and a sacrifice fly gave the Phils their lone tally in the third.

Ray Benge, Texas League recruit, went the route for the Phils and was touched up for eight hits, including home runs by Del Bissonette and Harvey Hendrick.

Reds Lose Out

Errors which defeated the Chicago Cubs in the first two games of the season's opening series, shifted to the Cincinnati Reds team yesterday and the Cubs won the third game at Cincinnati 2 to 0.

Walker's muff of a long fly sent Stephenson across the plate for the first score in the second inning, and Dressen's wide throw to first in the seventh put Butler on third and enabled him to score on Maguire's fly.

Philadelphia at St. Louis—Postponed, rain.

SWEETSER TO SEEK JONES' GOLF TITLE

Golfer To Enter National Amateur at Brae Burn This Year.

NEW YORK, April 14.—Interest in the national amateur championship, dimmed somewhat for the last few years by the fact that one man overshadowed the field to the extent that the outcome was almost a foregone conclusion, will be revived at Brae Burn this year. The reason is that Jess Sweetser, the metropolitan district's only outstanding golfer since the days of Jerry Travers and the late Walter Travis, will be among those present.

To all appearance in good physical condition once again after an illness that overtook him during the British amateur championship at Muirfield in 1926, Sweetser has laid his plans for the resumption of competitive golf this year. He has allowed himself three tournaments, and one is the amateur in which he has not played since 1925, but in which he was the winner in 1922 at Brookline and the runner-up in 1923 at Flossmoor.

Will Compete at Newport.

Another event in which Sweetser will be a competitor is the gold mashie tournament at T. Suffern Tailer's famous Ocean Links at Newport, and the third, the Walker cup international matches at the Chicago Golf Club in the event he is selected on the American playing side. The qualification is Sweetser's, not the writer's, for there is just about as much chance of the U.S.G.A. leaving him off the list as there is of substituting some one for Bobby Jones.

Outside of these three tournaments Sweetser's golfing activities will be confined to week-end play. He may play in the qualifying round of the metropolitan amateur, but he says now that he will not attempt to play through. His decision is one of choice, not of necessity. Like some amateurs, not many, Jess is a business man and he finds that golf and business do not mix to the extent that some players think they do.

So far as his physical condition goes, Sweetser could devote as much time to the game as he did a few years ago, although he has never been one of those tournament fiends who play in everything that comes along. He is big and husky, so big and so husky that he is thinking of doing something to reduce, and apparently he can go on endlessly.

Appears to Be Up to Form.

His first time out, last Saturday and Sunday, he did thirty-six holes each day and felt no ill effects. And apparently his aim has not suffered from lack of practice. Playing at the Westchester Biltmore recently, he did a respectable 75 on the long course, and in two out of three rounds at Siwanoy he was 70 and 71. Not bad scoring for a fellow who has hardly touched a golf club since last Fall.

With Sweetser back in the fray there is every chance that Bobby Jones will not have things entirely his own way at Brae Burn, unless, of course, the amateur champion's interfering back, Watts Gunn, should again become suddenly inspired as he did at Oakmont in 1925, when he gave Jess a bad beating.

Ever since 1923 Bobby has had such a margin over his field in the amateur event that he has lost only one match out of the last nineteen. After seeing him go through the field at Minikahda last Summer we ventured the opinion that none of the old-timers would ever stop him and that if he was stopped it would be by one of the youngsters and in an eighteen-hole match.

With Sweetser back we'll have to Jess as the greatest match player revise that prophecy for we regard among the amateurs and the greatest match player that golf has seen since Travers's day. There's no way to prove it, but his record in the amateur championships of 1922 and 1923 and in the British amateur championship at Muirfield, when he won in spite of his illness, is a record that stands as mute evidence of his prowess.

Inside Sportin' Dope—By a Wise Cracker

Mister Sporting Editor:

Since I wrote you last week the Petes has decided to stick in sr. ball, and Mister Tommy Holyman has accepted the big job of managing the outfit. Both of them items is good news, because Peterborough without sr. ball would look as odd as George st. with no parked cars, and Mister Holyman oughta make a good job of piloting the home talent. He knows his baseball groceries, and is 1 of them peppery cusses what will fight until the last man is out in the 9th, and after that, two, if he thinks the umps has called them wrong. If the material what is here can be dug out Mister Holyman oughta have a smart squad to throw into the Central League dog fight when the lid is pried off next month.

The most new faces to be introduced this year will be by the Oshawa crew. The O.B.A.A. let 7 newcomers ticketed for Oshawa slip through last Sat. without no more hesitation than friend wife takes the pay envelope or what percentage you hand her every week. Of the birds that went through was the same guy as the Oshawa paper reported going back to Michigan a few weeks ago. They said then that his return to Flint showed that there was no baseball reason for the new arrivals in Oshawa, but in spite of that his name was in the list and went through Sat. They may be able to kid some of the troops that all them changes was on the level, but if they're trying to sell that idea to me they gotta fat chance.

Well, Mac, the hockey season ain't over yet, seeing this is wrote Thurs. I can't get excited over the N.H.L. finals, however, for they's two things I don't like, and this play-off system is both of them. Out in the league where our own Mister Bert McLeod and Mister Ranger pastimed this winter the team what finished 3rd in the long schedule win the play-offs. Championships don't mean a thing under that kinda of a wind-up serious.

Anyway, the ball season is open, so the hockeyists can hang up the fiddle and the bow. The American League already has furnished 1 sensation with the Boston Red Sox leading the parade the 1st day, but it ain't likely to become a habit with the Sox, which feels more at home further down the ladder. The opening games didn't supply much excitement except for Mister Andy Cohen, just a young Jewish filler what is trying to get along, and, which looked like a million in the Giants' infield the 1st game. Time was when a bird with a name like Cohen couldn't have sold peanuts in the Giants' park let alone play ball, but times has changed, Mac, and Mister McGraw don't care what they're called so long as they don't fall over their own feet and can smash the old horsehide right on the beak in a tight corner.

I ain't got nothing to report re hardball in the schools. Some of the customers has told me they hope the real game comes back, and I wish they'd tell some of the Board of Education bosses the same thing. We don't wanta to raise a crop of little Lord Fantleroys in the city schools, but it looks to me like we're headed that way if we don't wake up.

Sportfully yours,

A. WISE CRACKER.

WILL CLASH IN FINALS TO-NIGHT

Maroons and Rangers Will Meet in Final Game For Stanley Cup.

MONTREAL, Que., April 14. Canadian Press.—Deadlocked after four games with two wins each, the Montreal Maroons and the New York Rangers, finalists for the Stanley Cup and the pro hockey championship, will enter the fifth and deciding conflict of the series here to-night, with the probable outcome a toss-up.

The Rangers are conceded a much stronger chance than would have been accorded the New Yorkers earlier in the finals. Taken player for player, regulars and reliefs, the Maroons are rather a stronger combination than Lester Patrick's blue clad galaxy. But the Rangers have shown a fighting spirit which has raised them to the pinnacle in the present series, and their victory on Thursday gave them a winning morale which should serve them well in the deciding game. If Rangers carry the same fight and the same will to win, which they showed in the fourth game on Thursday their bid for the honors will be a gigantic one.

Opposed to them will the powerful Maroon machine, again at full strength, once more able to work its alternating forward lines, with Joe Lamb back in action after a one-game suspension and a team that is noted as a mighty force of shock troops in a tight corner.

The game must be played to a finish regardless of how long the teams take to settle the issue. The prospects all point to a closely fought contest between two evenly matched teams. Hockey fans, despite the long season here, sense the possibilities in the deciding tilt, and the largest crowd of the finals wil witness the struggle.

ELECTRICS TO ENTER TEAM

Canadian General Electric To Have Team in City Softball League.

RULES DISCUSSED.

The Canadian General Electric softball association held their second meeting of the season last night in the lecture room of the laboratory. After the reading of the minutes by the secretary, the list of rules submitted as suggestions by E. Hardie and H. Foster were read and after much discussion approved by the meeting. Several new by-laws on the rules were also introduced and voted on.

The league will consist of teams from different departments excepting where there are not enough playing, in which case a team can be picked from the zones. Even then, if enough players are not available, they can apply to the executive for players from other "free" zones.

It was decided to enter a team in the city league softball. The team to be managed by Bill Bennett of the Tractional Motors. Fourteen teams were represented at the meeting and other departments were given until April 20th to make entries. A single schedule will be played with the three teams playing off in the finals. The grounds are to be placed in a better condition for playing this year and the men's league will play on the two diamonds three nights a week.

Loses Best Girl Because of Mop

That is a Broadway way of saying that Jerry has lost his girl.

And he blames it all on Jack Dempsey.

"I was getting along fine with that gal," moaned Jerry last night, "and I guess I would have been married if Jack hadn't butted in. She had more dough than there is tea in China, and she was goin' to build us a swell villa in Beverley Hills.

"One night in Dempsey's hotel in Los Angeues the champ gets to kickin' about the dirt on the lobby floor, and he makes me get a mop to swab the joint out. I'm half way through the job when my rich broad comes in and takes one look at me. That was all there was to it. She never looked at me again. The champ said he didn't have anything to do with it, but I think the thing was in the bag. What a chance I missed, and all on account of Jack."

COAST TO COAST DRIVE IS PLANNED

April 17 Will Be League of Nations Day Throughout Dominion.

Canada's representation in the League of Nations is a noteworthy compliment to the prestige that our country has in world councils and is a distinct recognition of the noble and effective part that our country, in proportion to its numbers, made towards the successful conclusion of the Great War. At the same time, it is the earnest hope of every right-thinking Canadian that such a sacrifice of money and men will never again take place if it can be prevented by any means. If there had been a League of Nations in 1914, such as exists to-day, there would have been no Great War. It is necessary that Canadians therefore get behind our Government in support of the League and that every possible citizen in Peterborough becomes a member of the local branch of the League of Nations in the coast to coast drive which takes place on April 17th which has been set apart by the Government as a "League of Nations Day." The membership is only a dollar and it is not so much for the object of financial support that the Women's Canadian Club is supporting this league in our city but to join with the rest of Canada to assure the Government and our representative at Geneva that the Canadian people prefer to pay a dollar for Peace rather than thousands for war. Because of the last war, Canada pays per year in taxes an additional $163,000,000. From an economic standpoint alone, not to speak of the humanitarian and moral value, we feel sure every right-minded citizen of Peterborough will support the local Women's Canadian Club in this drive. Political rulers will not earnestly strive for Peace unless they are supported and compelled to do so by the public opinion that can be best evidenced by strong membership. Get behind it therefore everyone.

KIWANIS MINSTREAL REVUE TO BE PERFECT SHOW

With the presentation of the Kiwanis Jollies of 1928 the big Minstrel show only a few days away, the chorus girls and boys and minstrels and soloists and those in the sketches or one minute plays, are working harder than ever to reach new heights of perfection. The production is rounding into shape, but the cast much continue to work hard to measure up to the standard set by Harrington Adams, the director.

Sacrificing every form of amusement, the performers have shown their loyalty to the Kiwanis Club by attending rehearsals and stiff workouts every day. One continuous round of rehearsals both afternoon and evening has been the program for over a week.

Frank H. Dawson, chairman of the ticket committee sent a letter to Kiwanians in which he wrote, "A cast of 100 of Peterborough's most talented younger set will take part in this revue of two acts and fourteen scenes. Gorgeous costumes and attractive settings as well as the most professional lighting novelties have been provided. The first part of the show will be a Minstreal with all the old favorites and plenty of smart singers, dancers and comedians. The second half is devoted to sketches and well staged musical and dance numbers." Mr. Dawson also impressed upon the readers that although the show is given for the benefit of underprivileged children, the club is not appealing to theatre-goers on charitable lines alone, but on the merits of the show itself.

President Joe John of the Kiwanis Club also sent out a letter to members in which he said, 'The Kiwanis Jollies of 1928 in the Opera House, April 19th and 20th, promises to be the best show we have ever put on."

Advance tickets have been selling fast, according to Mr. Dawson. The reserved seats go on exchange at the box office Monday morning at 10 o'clock. All those who hold advance tickets are urged to make their reservations early. Tickets can be secured from the cast or members of the Kiwanis Club.

A NEW ALIBI FOR PHILANDERERS IN "ADAM AND EVIL."

If you were a philanderer by instinct, had a suspicious wife and a twin brother, what would be the natural outcome?

Lew Cody can tell you!

Lew plays a philandering husband, and his own twin brother, in "Adam and Evil," which Robert Z. Leonard has just directed for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, and which is coming Monday to the Regent Theatre.

Every time Lew gets into a corner and it looks like wife has the goods on him, he becomes his own twin and manages to squeeze out of an untenable position.

For the first time in his screen career Cody is seen in a dual role. At the same time it might be added that Miss Pringle makes her intial appearance in this vehicle as a comedienne. Also it is the first time that Lew and Aileen have appeared together in the same picture—with the exception of the time, some years ago, when Miss Pringle played a very small part in Rupert Hughes' "Souls For Sale," and Cody played the lead.

At that time Aileen Pringle was an unknown quantity. It was before she had the lead in "Three Weeks" and "His Hour," two Elinor Glyn stories which established her as a popular screen player.

"Adam and Evil" is a roaring film comedy from the pens of F. Hugh Herbert and Florence Ryerson, who wrote "The Demi Bride," in which Norma Shearer was starred with Cody.

CHANGE SAVED KING.

MILAN, Italy, April 13. — Canadian Press. — Tales of a black clad woman and a man wearing a cap, were being sifted by the police today in their investigation of yesterday's bomb outrages which killed 16 persons. Bystanders and victims told how this couple showed signs of unusual uneasiness prior to the passage of King Victor Emmanuel, near the scene of the explosion.

The preliminary investigation seemed to reveal that the king owed his escape from death to a change in the traffic regulations. For the past two years the royal procession went to the right of the piazza instead of to the left, as yesterday.

What CAN a Man Believe?

By BRUCE BARTON

Author of "The Book Nobody Knows," "The Man Nobody Knows"

XXIV—Buddha—A Human Man

LEPERS and maimed men were not admitted to his fellowship, nor yet slaves or confirmed criminals, but every other class came, from nobles to mendicants. Often they quarreled and made trouble, but however much they disagreed among themselves their loyalty to him never wavered.

In time rich estates were given, and he and his followers walked in cool groves, which he dearly loved, but they maintained their simple living. He himself went forth at every dawn to beg his food for the day, and more and more the common people, to say nothing of kings and courtesans, counted it an honor to bestow bread upon him.

What he gave his followers was hardly a religion. He taught them almost nothing about God, prayer, forgiveness, or a future life. His was a way of holiness through self-denial, as opposed to self-torture on the one hand and self-indulgence on the other. Later, his disciples wrought this simple teaching into an intricate system of metaphysics and dogma which took on new forms as the religion spread.

China First Mission Field

China was the first mission field. About 61 A. D., while the books of the New Testament were being written and nine years before Jerusalem was destroyed by Titus, the Chinese Emperor Ming-ti had a dream in consequence of which he sent to India and imported Buddhist priests. Six years were spent in the translation of Buddhist books into Chinese, and the new religion was taking root in China just about the time the siege of Jerusalem was scattering Christians as missionaries all over Asia Minor, Greece and Egypt.

In this new environment a religion without gods or worship could not satisfy, so the worship of Buddha himself, already begun in India, was transported and made rapid headway.

Taken Into Japan

Six hundred years later Japan imported Buddhism. Colossal statues of Buddha were erected, and two of them still stand. The goddess of mercy, Kwannon, is often in the same temple, and there is a collection of minor gods sufficient for all the real or imaginary needs of the Japanese mind. There is prayer also, and provision for its mechanical continuity through prayer-wheels run by air or water power. And the doctrine and ritual are bewilderingly involved.

This intricacy of idol worship would scandalize Buddha, who never proclaimed himself an object of adoration and indeed taught very little about worship in any form. The earlier and simpler narratives show him very clearly for just what he was—a friendly, compassionate, but very human man.

"The Blessed One was troubled with wind on his stomach.

"Now when the Blessed One had eaten food prepared by Kunda, the worker in metal, there fell upon him a dire sickness, the disease of dysentery; and a sharp pain came upon him, even unto death."

He made no pretense. He never claimed to have attained perfection, and freely acknowledged four weaknesses, one of which was too much love of wine. He asked nothing of life except peace through self-forgetfulness and kindliness to others. He might have been a king. He might have molded his followers into an army and conquered vast territories. All this power and wealth and luxury he renounced to set an example of unselfish goodness. Said he to his first sixty disciples:

"Go ye now out of compassion for the world, for the welfare of gods and men. Let not two of you go the same way. Preach the doctrine which is glorious. Proclaim a consummate, perfect and pure life of holiness."

They were obedient to his command. But their successors carried a very different message. They proclaimed Buddha a god, and erected an institution which, with its wealth and ritual and forms, is as far from his character and ideals as darkness is from light. But it lives and grows and serves, after its fashion, to represent religion to some hundreds of millions of human souls.

She is Thankful She Read the Almanac

Says Dodd's Kidney Pills Worth their Weight in Gold

"My trouble started with a fall," Mrs. W. H. Garretson, Ridgeway, Ont., writes. "My left Kidney and Pains in the Back bothered me very much. I read in your Almanac where a lot of people were relieved of a complaint like mine. Four boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills made me feel better and I am thankful that I read your Almanac. I will recommend Dodd's Kidney Pills for Backache. They are worth their weight in gold."

For over a third of a century, grateful men and women have attested to the merits of Dodd's Kidney Pills. Others have found relief from Kidney Ailments—Why not you?

TORONTO, April 14 (Canadian Press). — Engineer Brooks of Toronto was instantly killed, and Fireman Green was slightly injured when the Canadian National Winnipeg flier was derailed near Bradford, Ont., to-day. The engine toppled over on its side, trapping the engineers, and five cars left the rails. None of the passengers was hurt.

FORT WILLIAM MAN HAS RELATIVES HERE

Police Asked To Find Relatives of Barton Hubman, Who Died Last Night.

Barton Hubman, a resident of Fort William, died in that city about 7.00 last night, and Chief Constable Newhall has been asked to locate his relatives, who are supposed to be living in Peterborough, as D. Hay of Fort William has information relative to the deceased for them. Any person who is a relative of the deceased or knows of them is asked to communicate with the police department of this city.

OBITUARY

MAXWELL McCALL.

The death occurred in Detroit on Saturday, April 14, of Maxwell McCall, only son of the Rev. George W McCall of Brantford, Ont. Interment will be at Peterborough, funeral announcement being made later.

HENRY DOBSON

The funeral of the late Henry Dobson, whose death took place in Lakefield, took place to-day, at 1.30 from Comstock's funeral home to Little Lake Cemetery, the Rev. Mr. Todd, of George Street United Church conducting the services.

REV. MICHAEL S. O'BRIEN

Word was received last night of the death in Notre Dame Hospital, Montreal, yesterday of Rev. Father Michael S. O'Brien, for several years past the parish priest at Huntsville.. The late Father O'Brien had many friends and relatives in Toronto. For some six months he had been suffering from heart trouble, and while visiting in Montreal he was stricken with a sudden attack. The remains will be brought to Peterboro where the funeral will be held.

Father O'Brien was born in Lindsay 39 years ago, the son of the late Michael O'Brien, for some time a Separate School Inspector for Ontario, and more recently the Secretary of the Catholic Education Council. He received his early education at St. Peter's School, Peterboro, and Peterboro' Collegiate. Later he attended St. Michael College, Toronto, and St. Augustine's Seminary, and completed his ecclesiastical education at the College of the Propaganda in Rome. On his return to Canada, in May, 1918, he was ordained by Right Rev. Bishop O'Brien in Peterboro', and served for a time in St. Mary's Church, Lindsay, where he was assistant to the late Very Rev. Dean Casey. Later he was moved to Huntsville, where he remained up to the time of his death.

Surviving him are his mother, Mrs. Johanna O'Brien; Six brothers, John D., William J., James M., and Gerald P., all of Toronto; Rev. Austin D. of St. Thomas's Church, Houston, Texas and Richard V. of Detroit, and one sister, Kathleen, Sister Emerentia of the Order of the Sisters of St. Joseph, in Toronto.

In his college years Father O'Brien became very well known as an athlete. It is said he was the first St. Michael's College undergraduate to receive the University of Toronto "T."

So far as could be ascertained this afternoon, the body of the late Rev. Father O'Brien will arrive in this city from Montreal this evening and will be taken to the Cathedral House whence the funeral will take place to St. Peter's Cathedral and cemetery on Tuesday morning at 9 o'clock.

IN MEMORIAM.

McMAHON. — In loving memory of Jack McMahon, who died April 14, 1926:

No stain was on his little heart,
Sin had not entered there;
And innocence slept sweetly on,
That pale white brow so fair.
He was too pure for this cold earth,
Too beautiful to stay,
And so God's holy angel bore
Our darling away.

—Greatly missed by friends.

IN MEMORIAM.

McMAHON. — In loving memory of our dear son, Jackie, who passed away April 14 1926:

He is gone but not forgotten,
As down another year,
In our lonely hours of thinking
Thoughts of him are always near.

Days of sadness oft come o'er us,
Friends may think the wound is healed,
But they little know the sorrow
That lies within the heart concealed.

—Inserted by Father and Mother.

IN MEMORIAM.

GRIFFIN. — In memory of my dear wife who died the 15th of April, 1927:

A light is from my household gone,
A voice I loved is stilled,
A place is vacant in my home
Where no farewell tears are shed.

—Inserted by James Griffin.

IN MEMORIAM.

GRIFFIN. — In loving memory of our dear mother, the late Mrs. James Griffin, who departed from us a year ago, the 15th of April.

Yet again we hope to meet thee,
When the day of life is fled;
Then in heaven we hope to greet thee,
Where no farewel tears are shed.

—Inserted by the children.

PART OF OLD DAM COMES DOWN CREEK

Recalls Days When There Mills Near Jackson Park.

During the high water last week in the creek that runs through Jackson Park, a relic of other days came floating down, and lodged at the railway bridge at Bethune street. It consisted of what looked like a large raft, about 12 by 15 feet, with heavy square timbers covered with thick plank. At first it was a mystery as to what it was or where it came from. Old timers, however, recalled that it was part of the "apron" or spill-way, of an old dam situated up the creek some two or three miles. It is at least sixty years old, and probably more. Part of the old relic was hauled out of the water at noon by a team of horses, and is now reposing on the shore.

At one time there was a mill in Jackson Park and a large overshot water wheel about where the Swiss bridge is now. There was another dam and mill farther up stream. The remains are a portion of the latter.

MINERS VOTE STRIKE.

Alberta Men Will Walk Out On May 1 Unless Demands Are Met.

LETHBRIDGE, April 14.— (Canadian Press.)—Alberta miners belonging to the Mine Workers' Union of Canada, throughout Southern Alberta coal fields, voted overwhelmingly in favor of a strike unless their demands are met by the coal operators. A check-up to-day revealed a three to one vote to down tools on May 1.

GENERAL NOBILE TAKES OFF ON SECOND POLAR EXPEDITION

Expected Italian Navigator Will Remain North Larger Part of Summer.

EXPORE NEW LANDS.

Established Base at King's Bay as Headquarters For Explorations.

ROME, April 16.—(A.P.) — With the departure of the dirigible Italia" on the first leg of the long journey and the vessel "Citta di Milano" at anchor in King's Bay, the second Polar expedition of General Nobile is actually under way.

Besides all those who participated in the expedition of two year ago when Nobile went to the Pole with Raold Amundsen and Lincoln Ellsworth in the dirigible "Norge," there is a large staff of scientists, officers, mechanics, sailors and soldiers of the Alpine Guards, amounting altogether to 200 persons in the present venture.

A very important member of the expedition, indeed, what might be called a veteran of Polar exploits, is "Titina," the small mongrel dog mascot, who remained constantly by General Nobile's side when he steered the Norge towards the Pole and has remained his inseparable companion since. Titina has several exclusive accomplishments to her credit. In the first place, she is the only Italian dog that ever reached the North Pole, and corssed America, but above all, she boast of being the only representative of the canine family throughout the world to put foot on the soil of England without permission, quarantine or examination to ascertain that she was free from rabies. Titina entered London boldly aloft, although unavoidably shrouded by fog—in the proud consciousness that she was not going to be subjected to any impertinent inspection.

Base of King's Bay.

Nobile has made arrangements to stay in the Polar region the entire remainder of spring and the larger part of summer. His base will be King's Bay, where she ship "Citta di Milano" will represent the headquarters of his exploration which will be numerous. They will diverge from King's Bay, where the ship "Citta di ing the form of a fan. He himself does not know how many times he will fly from King's Bay and what distance he will reach each time, as it will depend to a certain extent on atmospheric conditions, but he has planned to touch the North Pole again, probably returning there on May 12th, thus celebrating the second anniversary of his first attainment of that point. One of his flights will have for its object to ascertain whether there is more land on either side of the route followed by Peary in his expedition to the Pole in April, 1909, and whether there really is a land he thought he saw on his homeward journey, calling it Crocker's Land, which, however, the McMillan expedition of 1924 was unable to find.

Another flight will be on the opposite side of the Pole from Crocker's Land to the islands called Nicholas II Land, north of the Peninsula of Tainir, which were discovered in 1913 by the Russian expedition of Captain Ailkiski.

These islands, which the Soviets re-baptized with the name of Lenin's Land, are not well known and Nobile proposed to ascertain their extent and formation.

Stay Two Months.

The number of flights and their direction will depend largely on atmospheric conditions, but General Nobile believes they will continue for two full months. The Italia is so equipped as to be capable of landing on ice and it carries tents, sleighs, stoves, Canadian ice shoes, pneumatic boats, rafts, etc., so will form a second base. It is supplied with wireless instruments, keeping it constantly in touch with the "Citta di Milano," which in turn is fitted with such a powerful wireless station as to be able to transmit messages directly to the sister station existing in Rome near the Basilica of St. Paul's. During some weeks of this year, therefore, the Eternal City for the first time in her twenty-five centuries of history will be in direct communication with the North Pole.

Arrives At Seddin.

STOLP, Germany, April 16 (Canadian Press).—General Nobile brought his polar dirigible Italia through a night of head winds and electrical storms, landing at Seddin Aerodrome, near here, to-day. The Italian airship, with which he hopes to explore the North Polar regions, was immediately placed in a hangar. It had taken the craft thirty hours and forty minutes to come from Milan, which is about 680 miles from here by airline.

One touch of merriment makes the whole world grin.

Historic Landmark Destroyed By Fire

OTTAWA, Ont., April 16. — Canadian Press. — The Russell House, which in former years was Ottawa's leading hotel, was badly damaged by fire yesterday. The top three floors were almost completely destroyed and The three lower storeys also suffered considerably. The hotel itself has been vacant for over two years but several of the stores at the street level were still occupied although the tenants were to move out during the summer.

The Russell House formed the greater part of the block bounded by Sparks, Elgin, Queen and Canal streets, which is in the process of being taken over by the Dominion government authorities through the Federal District Improvement Commission in the development of its plans for the beautification of the capital. The Russell Company had agreed to a valuation of $1,250,000 for its property, which included the hotel and the Russell Theatre. The theatre was not damaged to any extent.

HANNA RESIGNS; DRAYTON HEADS CONTROL BOARD

Member of Dominion House For West York Will Be Chairman.

MANION MAY QUIT.

Members Had Understanding That They Might Quit After Organization.

TORONTO, April 16.— Sir Henry Drayton, M.P., for West York, and former chairman of the Board of Railway Commissioners for Canada, will succeed D. B. Hanna as head of the Liquor Control Board of Ontario. Announcing the appointment last evening, Premier Ferguson pointed out that Mr. Hanna, in accepting the chairmanship a year ago, had undertaken it only temporarily, as a matter of public service, and was now ready to be relieved. The Prime Minister expersssed gratification that a man of Sir Henry Drayton's administrative record and personal standing had consented to serve on the Board.

Sir Henry, who came to Toronto at the week-end to confer with Premier Ferguson on the matter, said last evening that he proposed to see Mr. Hanna to-day and discuss the whole situation, after which it will probably be possible to announce the date at which the transfer of duties will take place.

To Resign His Seat.

The new chairman will relinquish his seat in the House of Commons.

"I recognize that I will have to give all my time to the province," he said, "and it would be quite impossible to hold both positions. I am staying over to-mororw to meet Mr. Hanna, and would prefer not to discuss the matter further at this time."

Hon. R. J. Manion, who like Chairman Hanna acepted office on the board with a view to stepping out after a time, when organization was virtually complete, and therefore retained ihs seat in Parliament, is also ready to relinquish his duties. His resignation has not been submitted, as frequently rumored of late, but there has been a definite understanding that he would be relieved in due course, and it is now expected that his successor will be announced by Premier Ferguson in a few days.

"Mr. Hanna responded willingly a years ago, from the standpoint of public interest," Hon. Mr. Ferguson commented, "he made a great sacrifice, and I think he has done remarkably well. Personally, I am greatly indebted to him, and I think the Province as well owes him a great deal o f gratitude. Nevertheless, I felt I owed it to him to carry out what was more or less an understanding, and relieve him at this time. I am very glad I have been able to induce Sir Henry Drayton to undertake the work. He is an outstanding man who has to his credit along period of public service; understands human problems and has had a wide experience in administration. He was always recognized as an excellent lawyer. His work for this city was outstanding and his achievement for Canada in various capacities are well known. His acceptance, I may say, was obtained upon the same ground as that of Mr. Hanna— the duty of service to the public."

HEADS LIQUOR BOARD.

SIR HENRY DRAYTON, K.C., M.P. whose appointment to succeed D. B. Hanna as chairman of the Liquor Control Board of Ontario, was announced yesterday by Premier Ferguson.

EIGHT PERMITS ISSUED IN WEEK

One New Dwelling and Two New Garages Authorized in City.

REPAIRS PLANNED.

Eight building permits were issued last week by City Engineer Parsons, involving an amount of $2,460. A. E. Saunders is erecting a bungalow on Douglas avenue and has let the contract to R. Henry. The estimated cost is $2,000. Permits were granted to build two private garages, a steel one at 20 Park street north for Arthur Vannest, and the other at 117 Lock street for Mrs. Martin.

Mrs. Annie Halpin is having the building at the rear of 211 Hunter street repaired and turned into a blacksmith shop. Four permits were issued to re-shingle sheds or houses.

NIAGARA RIVER STILL BLOCKED

Ice Closes Lake Erie End of River at Latest Date in History.

BREAK-UP DELAYED.

BUFFALO, April 16 (Canadian Press).—Mid April, 1928, probably finds more ice in this end of Lake Erie and the Niagara River than ever before at this period of the year in the memory of the oldest lakemen. With the mercury still below the freezing point to-day, prospects for the opening of navigation soon are anything but bright. Ragged ice fields extend for a mile up the lake beyond this city, and cold weather and strong winds are having the effect of solidifying the anchor ice with huge cakes.

FITZMAURICE LEAVES ISLAND; GERMAN AVIATORS REMAINING

Irish Flier Will Go By Train To New York While Companions Repair Plane.

FLIES TO MAINLAND.

Second Plane, With Newspapermen, Leaves For Greenly—Skis Being Taken For Bremen.

QUEBEC, April 16. — (Canadian Press.)— (By Wireless from Clarke City, Quebec.) — It was learned by wireless operators at Clarke City this afternoon that Col. Fitzmaurice, member of the crew of the trans-Atlantic monoplane Bremen, had left Greenly Island in the Canadian Trans-continental Airways plane which flew there yesterday from Murray Bay, Que. Col. Fitzmaurice will be flown either to Father Point or Quebec as weather conditions permit. From there he will proceed to New York. Baron Huenefeld and Capt. Koehl, German officers on the Bremen, are remaining at Greenly Island, where they landed on Friday after flying the Atlantic, and will attempt to repair the plane, slightly damaged on landing, so as to complete the flight to New York.

Newspapermen On Way.

A second plane of the Canadian Trans-continental Airways Company, piloted by Romeo Vachon and bearing photographers and newspapermen, including a representative of the Canadian Press, left St. Agnes Que., this morning for Seven Islands, Que., to await further information from Greenly. It was from Seven Islands that Dr. Cuisinier and Duke Schiller made their flight to Greenly Island yesterday.

Weather Favors Steamer.

ST. JOHNS, Nfld., April 16.—(Canadian Press.) —With an east wind blowing at present, the steamer Montcalm has fair prospects of reaching Greenly Island and the stranded fliers of the Bremen, states a message from Capt. Bartlett, of the sealing steamer Neptune, in the Gulf of St. Lawrence.

Ski Runners Sent.

QUEBEC, April 16.— (Canadian Press.)—A pair of ski runners, capable of being fitted to the Junkers plane Bremen, was rushed to Murray Bay by train last night. It is not believed possible that the Bremen can take from the ice on her wheels. On the other hand, it is probable that with the assistance of the Canadian fliers, Cuisinier and Schiller, now on the scene, the pair of runners may be improvised.

Ice Is Heavy.

OTTAWA, April 16.— (Canadian Pres.)— The Canadian Government steamer Montcalm, which is attempting to reach Greenly Island, was off St. Mary's Island, a hundred miles from Greenly, at eight o'clock this morning. The steamer was then in heavy ice.

Brings Spare Parts.

MONTREAL, April 16. — (Canadian Press.)— Miss Herta Junkers, daughter of the president of the German Junkers Company, designers of the Bremen, is expected to arrive from New York to-day in a plane piloted by Melchior, one of the lead? ing Junkers pilots in the United States. The object of the flight is to co-operate better with the Canadian authorities in the relief of the fliers.

Send On Spare Parts

NEW YORK, N.Y., April 16 (Canadian Press).—Representatives of the Junkers Aeroplane Company here began last night the movement of repair parts and fuel to points as near as possible to the trans-Atlantic monoplane Bremen, stranded on Greenly Island in Belle Isle Straits, Quebec was chosen as the point of concentration.

Miss Herta Junkers, daughter of the airplane manufacturer, announced she planned to take off to-day or Tuesday in the Junkers plane EF-13 at Curtiss Field for Montreal to direct operations. Fred Melchoir, she said, will pilot the plane and it is possible that they may proceed to Quebec from Montreal.

Spare parts for the damaged Bremen were started from New York last night with a mechanic, Ernst Koeppen, who was instructed by Junkers representatives to take a train to Quebec and await instructions there.

A request to send six drums of benzol to Quebec, to be used to refuel the Bremen, was sent by Miss Junkers to the Ottawa flying service last night. She requested that the fuel be sent to the concentration point as soon as possible.

A message received by Miss Junkers yesterday from Baron von Huenefeld, asking for repair parts and saying no answer to previous messages had been received, resulted in prompt action by the representatives here.

Miss Junkers and Heinrich Schuengel, representative in New York of the North German Lloyd Line, radioed a message to inform the Bremen's crew of the steps which had been taken.

The message was sent, they said, in the chance that those on Greenly Island would receive it.

Addressed to Baron von Huenefeld, the message read:

"Mechanic and spare parts will arrive Quebec flying field Monday afternoon. Benzol following. Herta will fly EF-13 New York to Montreal Monday, weather permitting, and will take further action from there. Will keep you informed of further developments and plans. Please do

13 LOSE LIVES IN HOUSE FIRE

Family and Wedding Guests Burned To Death Near Altoona, Pa.

CAUSE UNKNOWN.

ALTOONA, Penna., April 16 (Canadian Press).—Thirteen persons were burned to death at Blairtown, near here, early to-day when fire destroyed the home of Embro Krepachalk. The dead included the mother, her six children, and six guests, who had gathered for the wedding of Krepachalk's daughter on Saturday. The bride and groom were among the dead. The cause of the fire was not determined.

WISHART CAMPBELL IS PLEASING SINGER

Delights Large Congregations at Both Services at St. Paul's.

Wishart Campbell, baritone soloist of radio station CKGW, was the guest of St. Paul's Presbyterian church yesterday. Radio fans have enjoyed his numbers "in the air," and many of these had the pleasure of listening to him in St. Paul's.

In the morning his voice, of a rich and musical calibre, was heard in two numbers, "The Voice in the Wilderneess" (Scott) and "The Gentle Shepherd" (Adams).

At the evening diet of worship an almost capacity congregation was delighted with his feeling and reverential rendition of three numbers, "Crossing the Bar" (Wegenast), "Spirit of God" (Neidlinger), "Come Unto Him" (Maunder). His pleasing, unassuming manner and clear enunciation were very satisfying to his auditors.

Thinks Son Swept Over Niagara Falls

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., April 16 (Canadian Press). — Robert Darr, Jr., is probably one of two men who were swept over the Horseshoe Falls to their death on Friday last. Robert Barr Sr., of Lasalle, N.Y., has notified the police that his son has been missing since Thursday night, when he is believed to have started for Chippewa in a motor boat, accompanied by an unknown man.

Welland Canal Open But Traffic Lacking

S. CATHARINES, Ont., April 16 (Canadian Press).—Although the Welland Canal opened officially for navigation to-day, there is a total absence of traffic, and indications are that there will be no boat movements until the latter half of the week. The ice at the Port Colborne entrance to the canal is yet impassable. In addition to this obstacle, a landslide at Ramey's Bend on Saturday intereferes with the passage of boats. Work is being rushed to clear the channel, but is not expected to be completed until Thursday.

REVENGE CAUSE OF FIRE IN HALL

Owner of Garage Below Objected To Dancing, Says Investigator.

DIED IN EXPLOSION.

WEST PLAINS, Missouri, April 16 (Canadian Press).—Revenge and financial troubles were two motives advanced to-day by Prosecuting Attorney Green as he pressed his investigation into the cause of the explosion that destroyed a dance hall here last week and killed forty persons. Green suggested that J. Wiser, who rented the garage below the dance hall, may have been responsible for the blast either because of pronounced views against dancing or because financial troubles may have led him to suicide. Wiser, a devout churchman, was killed in the gasoline explosion.

To Paddle 3,250 Miles For Holiday Outing

CEDAR RAPIDS, Iowa, April 16 (Canadian Press).—Paddling over lakes and streams in the uncharted forests of Northwest Canada, four University of Iowa students will attempt to reach the Arctic Circle this summer. Their goal is a little inlet at the north end of Hudson Bay, a few miles from the Arctice Circle. Permission has been obtained from the Canadian Government for the

ENGINEER'S BODY TAKEN FROM WRECK

Was Burned Under Engine Which Overturned When Derailed.

TORONTO, April 16.—Buried under his overturned engine since early Saturday morning, the body of J. W. Brooks was recovered yesterday near Bradford. Brooks was the engineer of the Toronto-bound express from Winnipeg when it left the rails a short distance south of Bradford Station. He was buried in the soft earth under the engine, which turned on its side after jumping the track.

Four investigators from the C.N.R. staff are on the ground making an inquiry into the accident. It is their task to find the cause of the mishap, as yet a mystery. One report was that the rails spread because of a wash out, but this was denied. Three other theories have been advanced, a broken axle, a broken wheel, or a break in the rail at the point.

Engineer Brooks was the only person to meet death in a crash which narrowly escaped having much more serious consequences. Some 125 passengers escaped with nothing more serious than bruises and scratches. Fireman Green was slightly scratched, when he was thrown clear of the engine in its fall, landing in marshy ground along the right-of-way.

Reports Differ on Speed.

Reports vary as to the speed of the train at the time. Some say it was travelling 60 miles an hour, while others place the estimate as low as 20 miles.

Steel equipment is given the credit for preventing more serious results. The front coaches of the train, leaving the rails, ground into the soft mud beside the roadbed, which brought them to an abrupt halt. The remainder of the coaches rammed forward against those in front, and passengers on the train declare that it was only the steel construction of the cars that saved them from being smashed, with a heavy loss of life.

No Further Statement.

TORONTO, April 16.— (Canadian Press.)—Beyond stating that D. B. Hanna had not as yet resigned from the chairmanship of the Ontario Liquor Control Board, Premier Ferguson to-day had little to add to his announcement, made last night, that Mr. Hanna would be replaced as head of the Board by Sir Henry Drayton, owing to the pressure of other interests on Mr. Hanna's time.

GENERAL CURRIE'S LIBEL SUIT FIRST ON DOCKET FOR ASSIZES

Heavy Property Loss In Melbourne Fire

MELBOURNE, Ont., April 16. —(Canadian Press.)—One house was completely destroyed, two others and a church damaged considerably and the entire village threatened by fire which broke out shortly after noon yesterday. The loss is variously estimated at figures ranging from $3,000 to $4,500. The credit for the saving of the village, in defiance of the high winds blowing, is given to the village bucket brigade and the men of the surrounding country who struggled against the sweeping flames for over two hours before the blaze was finally brought under control.

The home of Daniel McNeil, a one half storey fram house, saw the start of the fire and was completely destroyed. Mr. McNeil and his sister, Miss Annie, were absent from the village when the fire broke out.

They are at a loss to account for the blaze, which apparently started in the kitchen of the house.

PREVENTION OF ACCIDENTS IS GAINING GROUND

R. B. Morley Tells of Safety Sub-Committee Meeting at Geneva.

MANY SUBJECTS.

Workmen's Compensation Act Also Discussed By Speaker.

Splendid results from the meetings of the Safety Sub Committee of the International Labor Office at Geneva last fall were predicted at to-day's luncheon of the Rotary Club by Rotarian R. B. Morley of Toronto general manager of the Industrial Accident Prevention Association and overseas delegate to that committee.

Mr. Morley's instructive and interesting address covered the operation of the Ontario Workmen's Compensation Act as well as the proceedings at Geneva.

Rotarian Claud H. Rogers presided at to-day's luncheon in the absence of President Killaly, and the speaker was introduced by President John Crane.

Mr. Morley in beginning referred to the Rotary movement, declaring that it was a good sign that Rotarians everywhere were discussing the future of the organization and planning to make it of more service.

The prevention of accidents has a significance far beyond material values said Mr. Morley. "That is to say, the work has an incalculable human significance. We are told that that man cannot live by bread alone, although there are persons who think this is incorrect. Such persons however will never bring peace industrially or internationally We are all, as Shylock said, 'Fed with the same food; hurt with the same weapons; subject to the same diseases; healed by the same means; warmed and cooled by the same winter and summer.'"

At the first of the year 1915, the Workmen's Compensation Act for this province came into effect. By that Act, all the old procedure regarding payment for industrial injuries was scrapped and the newer, more important idea came into effect in Canada. There have been a number of amendments, always increasing the benefits and improving the condition of the injured worker, so that to-day we are working in Ontario with an act that is, I believe the most generous of any jurisdiction under compensation. An injured man receives 66 2-3 per cent of his earnings, provided he is laid off for seven days or more. He is given unlimited medical aid and hospital attention if the injury is serious, and if he is permanently, partially or permanently totally disabled, there is a pension for life. If he is killed, the dependants are provided for. In short the worker in industry under compensation in Ontario to-day is protected by the finest accident insurance policy in existence. In Ontario we took our lesson in compensation from Great Britain from Germany, and from the United States, and other countries. We took the best of their idea and our legislature made a compensation law that has proven a model for all of the other provinces of Canada.

I remember Mr. H. B. Butler, Deputy Director of the International Labor Office, while in Toronto 15

Great Preparations Made To Enable Press To Cover Case.

REPORTERS IN DOCK.

Great Crowd Attends When Session Opens Before Mr. Justice Rose.

COBOURG, April 16 (Special to The Examiner).—With the famous Currie libel suit to be the first case heard at the Spring Assizes in the Supreme Court here before Justice Rose, Cobourg Court was the scene of much bustle and confusion this morning as press men from two nations congregated for the hearing.

The ordinary accommodation for reporters was found to be hopelessly inadequate and rows of extra tables have been placed within the inner circles. Even the prisoners box was commandeered for use of press men, much to the amusement of fellow scribes. Photographers' cameras were placed at strategic points in the court room, while several officers of the court were photographed outside in full regalia of office.

The prediction that the case will continue for from two to three weeks has caused much speculation. In the opinion of many the hearing will be completed in from five to seven days.

With the opening of the session this afternoon, Justice Rose was presented with white gloves, a custom arising from olden times in English courts and only occasioned when no criminal cases appear on the docket for the session.

In order to give efficient service to the press, seven wires have been installed in a room on the second floor directly above the county judge's chambers. This service, complemented by a staff of messengers, will afford the public the details of the case as it proceeds.

Many Lawyers There.

Around the barristers' table when court opened were seated R. H. Parmenter, K.C., Toronto; W. E. N. Tilley, K.C., Toronto; A. L. Willmott, Cobourg; Archie Cochrane, Cobourg; K. Langdon, Brighton; Col. F. D Boggs, K.C., Cobourg; George Drewry, Brighton; W. A. F. Campbell, Port Hope; W. F. Kerr, K.C., Cobourg; J. M. MacColl, K.C., Cobourg; F. M. Field, K.C., Cobourg; Frank Regan, Toronto.

At one end of the table, General Sir Arthur Currie, G.C.M.G., D.S.O., was seated with his secretary, Col. Wilfred Bovey, Montreal.

With the opening of the court-room doors at one o'clock, the crowd in the lobby swarmed in to fill every inch of available room, and await in silence the formal opening at three minutes to two. Immediately the Hon. Mr. Justice Rose had entered and the court re-seated, Sheriff Nesbitt presented His Worship with the white gloves, signifying that no criminal cases were to be tried at this sitting of the Supreme Court.

First Case Settled.

The first case called by His Worship was Mary E. MacCaulley vs. T. F. Hall, K.C., Archie Cochrane, appeared for the plaintiff, informed the bench the case had been settled out of court.

The next case called was Currie vs. Wilson, with a special jury. Justice Rose proposed to proceed with the third case, Randal vs. Fellows. Col. F. D. Boggs, K.C., for the plaintiff, explained the case was not fully prepared by either side, since the Currie-Wilson case was expected to be given right of way. The case could be proceeded with, with possibly twenty minutes' delay.

Case Laid Over.

Counsel for both sides of the Currie case asked regarding the length of time the case will require. The Randall vs. Fellowes case would last perhaps one day or less, in the opinion of both counsels. Justice Rose ruled that counsel settle between themselves whether the case proceed at once or be laid over. They agree to have the case laid over till the next assizes or arrange to have the hearing in another court.

Justice Rose informed the petit jurors that they would not be required to hear any cases at the present assizes and dismissed them.

W. E. N. Tilley, K.C., R. H. Parmenter, and A. L. Wilmotte are appearing for plaintiff, and Frank Regan, Toronto and T. F. Hall for Mr. Wilson. Mr. Preston pleads his own case.

The jury called consisted of Henry A. Patterson, farmer, Cavan township; Heber J. Souch, farmer, Clarke; William J. Duncan, gardener, Seymour; James Swabrick, miller, Clarke; Ernest T. Syer, farmer, Clarke; George Anderson, gentleman, Cobourg; E. C. Ashton, yeoman, Darlington; Arthur Black, yeoman, Darlington; George Morrincey, agent, Alnwick; W. J. N. Gummer, farmer, Percy; Isaac Whitfield, farmer, Cartwright; W. H. Huycke, farmer, Percy; Ernest Syer was excused by Judge owing to illness of his wife. P. J. Borgenson, mill hand, Campbellford, was the next name down. The jury was sworn and the case proceeded with an address by W. N. Tilley, K.C.

TWO MEMBERS OF LINER CREW LOSE LIVES IN ICEBERG CRASH

C. P. R. Liner Montrose Has Narrow Escape on St. John's-Liverpool Voyage.

PASSENGERS INJURED.

Bow of Vessel Badly Damaged in Crash With Floating Mountain.

LIVERPOOL, England, April 16 (Canadian Press Cable).—Only the quick manoeuvring of the vessel by the captain saved the Canadian Pacific liner Montrose from being sunk when she struck an iceberg last Monday, when three days out from St. John, N.B., it was learned on the arrival of the Montrose here Saturday. Two members of the crew were crushed to death when the steamer struck the iceberg, while two passengers sustained slight injuries.

A member of the crew stated that apparently there were two icebergs and the captain had to make an instant decision. He steered straight for the smaller mass of ice which the ship struck bows on and split in two. The bows of the vessel were crushed right in from just above the waterline, the upper part being crushed back some twenty feet. Its superstructure was also smashed in. When the Montrose arrived at Mersey on Saturday night it was apparent that the Montrose had had a narrow escape. Her steel plates were badly buckled and there was a gaping hole high up from the water-line. One anchor was gone and the other was jammed into the steel plate which had crumpled like tin under the force of the impact.

Lifeboats Made Ready

Another member of the crew said that if the ship had gone between the icebergs her sides would have been ripped open and "we would have gone right down. The captain backed the ship up and lifeboats were swung out and passengers and crew put on lifebelts. There was no panic. A slight mist prevailed at the time of the collision and we were going dead slow. The berg towered nearly 100-feet over the ship and we had to move more than a hundred tons of ice following the smash."

After the crash a resolution of congratulation to the captain was passed by the passengers, who also made a subscription for relations of the two members of the crew who were killed.

Captain James Gillies, general manager of the Canadian Pacific teamships Company at London, who met the liner on its arrival at Liverpool, said that the vessel had followed the usual course at this period of the year. Until three days out the weather was alternately clear and misty and the ship's speed was adjusted in accordance with the prevailing conditions. Last Monday an iceberg was sighted ahead and Captain Landy altered his course to avoid it, but when he had swung clear of the one, another was sighted also right ahead and with great presence of mind he star-boarded his helm and took the blow end-on.

Never In Actual Danger

The ship arrived here only a few hours late and never at any moment was she in actual danger. Prior to leaving the vessel the passengers cheered Captain Landy and his crew, as an exprssion of their admiration for the skilfull manner in which the Montrose had been handled during the crisis.

"It is only by the grace of God and the skill of Captain Landy that we are here and not at the bottom of the ocean," said a cabin passenger commenting on the incident.

One member of the crew stated that the reverberation of the crash sounded "just like a cannon going off. The ship came to a sudden stop, then she rocked and we thought she was going over, but it was only for a couple of minutes and then she was as steady as before."

A passenger stated that the fog had been "pretty dense on and off several hours previous to the collision. The stewards acted splendidly for the welfare of the passengers and the vessel never listed."

"We have had a marvellous escape," said another passenger. "Fortunately it was dead calm, otherwise there is no knowing what would have happened. If we had hit the other berg it would have been another Titanic disaster, for we should have had the liner's side torn out."

Viscount Dies From Effects of Accident

PARIS, April 16. — (Canadian Press.)—Viscount Tremalon, the 21 year old nephew of Queen Mary, died here early yesterday from the effects of a motor accident after a courageous battle with death since April 3.

The young man, who was heir of the Earl of Athlone, governor-general of South Africa, had amazed the English and French physicians who have been attending him by his good spirits. He continually "spoofed" the doctors in true Cambridge undergraduate style.

He kept this up until late Saturday evening. Then he suddenly called for the old governesswho had come from London to nurse him.

"I am going to die soon," he told her. "Send a cablegram to father."

A few hours later he was dead.

Fire Destroys Store At Parry Sound

PARRY SOUND, Ont., April 16 (Canadian Press). — Fire which broke out on Saturday in the brick store owned by Rankins, Limited, at Falding, on Otter Lake, nine miles from here, completely destroyed the building and also the residence of Samuel Rankin. The buildings were situated on Otter Lake., which is a tourist centre, and have been there for more than thirty years.

The fire was discovered in the roof of the store, and as there was no available means of fighting the flames, they spread rapidly. A high wind carried the flames in the direction of the Rankin residence, which burned so rapidly that only some of the furniture could be saved.

Soviet Gold Transferred On High Seas In Effort To Frustrate French Plan

FALMOUTH, England, April 16 (Canadian Press). — A midnight drama of the high seas which rivalled tales of old where "gold worth a king's ransom" was at stake, took place off Falmouth in the dead darkness, just before dawn on Saturday.

Gold ingots worth $5,000,000, sent by the Russian Soviet to New York, claimed there by the Bank of France, but shipped to Germany on the steamer Dresden before that claim was adjudicated, were transferred from the steamer Dresden to the steamer Reiher.

The Reiher was chartered by the Soviet to frustrate what had been reported as French plans to seize the gold when the Dresden touched French territory at Cherbourg on Saturday morning.

By radio, arrangements were made for the steamers to meet in mid-Channel eight miles off Falmouth, and therefore outside the territorial waters of Great Britain as well as away from the jurisdiction of the French. They dropped anchor within a few cable lengths of each other, and for two hours the sailors of both vessels worked with a will, as they had been promised a bonus if the task was done quickly and without loss.

The element of risk in handling the heavy boxes at sea was considerable, but comparatively smooth water made the work of transferring them by small boats fairly easy. The entire affair occupied a little more than two hours.

After being relieved of her precious cargo the Dresden headed for Cherbourg and the Reiher for Bremen.

GIVES INTERESTING ADDRESS ON JAPAN

Rev. H. S. Sneyd Addresses United Church W.M.S. Meeting at Bailieboro.

BAILIEBORO, April 16. — Rev. H. S. Sneyd, a returned missionary of Japan, and a former Bailieboro boy, spoke at the W.M.S. meeting of the United Church held on Wednesday evening, the president, Mrs. H. W. Foley, presiding.

Mr. Sneyd stated in commencing his address, that one feature that made it most difficult for the missionaries to become accustomed to the ways of the Japanese people was that in Japan almost everything is done just the opposite to what it is in America. The Japanese read a book starting from the back; they cut with an axe or saw by pulling it into the wood instead of shoving it into the wood as we do. The speaker stated that he thought when he left for Japan, that he was going there simply to teach the people of that nation; but upon arrival, found they had much to teach him.

Japan took its place in the Great War as other civilized nations; she was represented at the Peace Conference. She is from every standpoint developing. She has the ability to copy other prosperous nations, and is succeeding.

Compulsory education has made it possible for ninety-nine per cent. of the children of Japan, between the ages of eight and fourteen, to be in the public schools. The Japanese race are very eager to learn, and annually there is a steady flow of teachers being sent abroad to America, Germany, France, and Britain, to the best universities, from from one to four years, to secure a post-graduate course, and almost every school in Japan employ one or more teachers who have studied abroad.

Trade and commerce is increasing very rapidly. Japan is fast becoming an industrial nation, and the rumor of Japan becoming a militaristic nation, the speaker stated, is entirely false. Japan is fast improving in not only a material line, but also greatly in the spiritual line. Although there are only as yet three hundred thousand church members in a population of fifty-six millions of people, there are many thousands who are Christians, but who have not yet joined the church.

Mr. Sneyd told the audience that the Y.M.C.A. and Tuxis Boys were moulding the lives of the young Japanese men and boys.

Japan is a country with fifty-six millions of people and it is not as large as California. The British colonies barring the race from their countries, have an immense bearing upon the work of the missionary.

Mr. Sneyd stated that his idea was to return to Japan, carrying with him the spirit of friendship and goodwill toward our attitude to the Oriental countries.

During the program, readings by Misses Ethel Falls and Elva Jewison were greatly enjoyed, while musical numbers were given by Fred and Keith Barnard.

LEAGUE MEETING.

Interesting Program Given at Meeting Held in Petherick's Corners.

PETHERICK'S CORNERS, April 16 —George Brunton, citizenship convenor, has charge of the program at the league on Thursday evening, with Don Kerr as leader. The devotional period was taken by Amos Barnum and Thomas Brunton, with the devotional talk by the Rev. Mr. Daniel. A vocal duet was given by Mr. and Mrs. Fred Barnum, and a reading, "Success" by Cora Irvin.

The singing lesson conducted by Mr. Daniel and a contest on the cities of the Bible, won by the Whippet group, completed the program.

This week's meeting will be held at the English Line church when the local debating team will meet the Line team on Tuesday evening.

River High

Seldom in the memory of this generation has the water of Crowe River risen to higher level than it has this year. Part of the roadway is flooded, with the water almost to the top of the bridge. The ice house at Mr. Dalgleish's summer home, is in the midst of swirling current, while the soft drink stand is just on the bank.

Bad Roads

This community has more than its share of bad roads; very few motorists care to venture out without extra help along.

Spring Work Later

Although indications from time to time have pointed to an early Spring, the beginning of work on the land is later than is usually the case. No plowing was done here before the 11th of April and then only on high ground, as the lower land is still very wet. No cultivating of fall plowed land has been done as yet and unless the sun shines more often than of late, seeding will be delayed for some time.

In spite of the backward weather the fall grains and clover show signs of growth and during the warm week at the first of the month it made rapid strides. Unless very severe frosts come, it is expected that these crops will be first rate, as nearly all danger of heaving is past.

Maple Syrup

The end of the sugar season lingers and though the looked for Easter week record run did not occur, yet the supply of syrup is fairly plentful and prices are ranging from $2.00 to $2.50 a gallon.

Cheese factories are getting under way. Rylstone opened on Wednesday of last week with Prince of Wales the following day. Bruce Cheese Company have installed a modern steel whey tank to replace the old wooden ones. Prices for cheese are quoted as better than last year while butter fat is selling around 44 cents a pound or about 6 cents below that of last year.

Calves are being fed in large numbers, and good prices around 10 cents a pound still rule.

Several farmers are trapping muskrats and report some good catches.

A few farmers are also busy drawing motorists out of the numerous mud holes in East Seymour.

Personals

Mr. Fred Barnum spent two days in Toronto, as a delegate to the Trustee's convention.

Mr. Everett Fairman, former teacher at S.S. No. 2, was renewing acquaintances here during the holiday.

Young's Point

YOUNG'S POINT, April 16. — The Spring meeting of the patrons of Young's Point cheese factory was held on Tuesday afternoon, April 10th, in the cheese factory, when arrangements were made for the coming season. Mr. Wilson will commence making cheese on Wednesday, April 18.

The Spring meeting of the patrons of Selwyn cheese factory was held in the factory on Thursday, April 12. Operations for cheese making will commence there in May, but at present they are making butter.

The water in the river is very high at present; it is many years since it was at such a height. Mr. Austin Walsh's boathouse broke away and went over the dam. The ice today is coming out of Clear Lake.

The many friends of Mr. Edward Young will be pleased to hear that he is progressing favorably after a serious operation in St. Joseph's Hospital, Peterborough.

The Rev. Mr. and Mrs. Dwelly motored to Peterborough and back on Tuesday.

TWENTY KILLED IN EARTHQUAKE

Report Reveals Toll in Bulgaria's 'Quake Smaller Than First Revealed.

HEAVY PROPERTY DAMAGE.

SOFIA, Bulgaria, April 16 (Associated Press). — The death-roll from Saturday's earthquake in Southern Bulgaria was reduced yesterday when authentic reports brought word that there had been far fewer casualties than the first panicky reports indicated.

The total is now placed at twenty dead and something less than 100 injured.

The smallness of the casualty list is explained by the fortunate fact that the earthquake happened on a public holiday when most of the populace was out in the streets of the various towns or picnicking in the country. Buildings in the affected region for the most part are not large nor are they close together.

Andrey Liaptcheff, who is Minister of the Interior, as well as Premier, visited the stricken districts and reported that the 'quake damage took place in an area about fifteen miles in circumference, with Tchirpan as the centre. This area has a total population of around 120,000.

Property Damaged.

The Premier described Tchirpan as uninhabitable with nearly all its buildings demolished or badly damaged. He said that Borrissovgrad was three-fourths demolished, and that the village of Dumourovo was completely razed.

There were twelve killed and fifty injured at Tchirpan and eight killed in surrounding villages. The hospital at Tchirpan collapsed, but through some miracle the patients were saved from death.

The first shocks occurred at 10.30 on Saturday morning, and were followed by twenty others spread over the entire day.

The 'quake was felt in Slovenia and as far north as Bucharest, Rumania.

Premier Liaptcheff said that the government has granted funds for feeding the population in the stricken district.

The League of Nations

(Contributed)

It would seem as if at last we are getting definitely forward in this immense business of killing the war spirit and making all war talk appear to be what it really is: disgraceful, disgusting, wholly stupid and hopelessly out of date. It would seem now as if we are really getting on.

No great movement can hope for success until its significance and appeal has laid hold upon the imagination, upon the rank and file of mankind, and the first step in seeking such an important result is to place the fact before the eyes of the folk most concerned—that it to say the average man and woman.

Hitherto to most of us The League of Nations has been a far away chimerical vague something, a sort of pious hope and unrealizable ideal. But now it is here in our midst, knocking at our doors, and here to stay. It begs leave to explain itself to us, and as details and plans and a more complete information comes to us, we begin to feel more hopeful about it. Here in our own community and throughout this entire land branches of a National League of Nations Society are being set up. People of every sort will be enthused and interested in the actual and realizable possibilities of world peace.

All people of good will should immediately become a member of the local organization and put the shoulder to the wheel. It is our first opportunity thus far to do our bit in this good cause.

Historic landmarks upon the Himalayan Peak, Mt. Everest, are shown in the ABOVE sketch. On May 28, 1922, Capt. G. Bruce and G. Finch reached a height of 27,300 feet, the peak of the mountain being 29,002 feet high. The 1924 expedition made a gallant attempt to better this record. G. H. Leigh-Mallory and A. C. Irvine being lost in the attempt. It has never been learned whether they lost their lives before or after reaching the peak. N. E. Odell, whose picture is inset, was a member of the 1924 expedition, being oxygen officer, geologist and glacialogist and having neraly reached the peak of Everest. He is now a resident of Toronto and has just been debarred from accepting a post in Harvard University by the United States restriction. The ABOVE pictorial diagram is from a sketch by G. F. Morrell which appeared in the Graphic, London.

The Business Girl Knows the Dollars-and-Cents Value of "That Schoolgirl Complexion"

AS beauty is rated a dollars-and-cents asset by women of the stage and screen, so too it is rated today by women in the business world. Note there the lovely complexions that you see.

The rule for gaining a good complexion is the same as for keeping one—soap and water, as advised by virtually every leading authority on skin care. This is to keep the skin and pores clean and free of beauty-impairing accumulations.

The one secret is in the kind of soap one uses. Only a true complexion soap can be wisely employed on the skin. Other soaps may be too harsh.

The rule for "That Schoolgirl Complexion"

Thus millions use Palmolive, in this way—a soap made for ONE purpose only, to safeguard the skin. A good complexion is worth too much to experiment.

Wash your face gently with soothing Palmolive Soap, massaging the lather softly into the skin. Rinse thoroughly, first with warm water, then with cold. If your skin is inclined to be dry, apply a touch of good cold cream—that is all.

Do this regularly, and particularly in the evening. Use powder and rouge if you wish. But never leave them on over night. They clog the pores, often enlarge them. Blackheads and disfigurements often follow. They must be washed away.

Avoid this mistake

D not use ordinary soaps in the treatment given above. Do not think any green soap, or one represented as of olive and palm oils, is the same as Palmolive. And it costs but 10c the cake! So little that millions let it do for their bodies what it does for their faces. Obtain a cake today. Then note what an amazing difference one week makes.

Retail Price 10c MADE IN CANADA

Palmolive Soap is untouched by human hands until you break the wrapper—it is never sold unwrapped

CELEBRATING DOMINION DAY.

Suggestions at the annual meeting of the Chamber of Commerce in regard to a fitting local celebration of Dominion Day this year will be well received.

The Diamond Jubilee ceremonies of last year very effectively served to give Canada's national holiday its proper status in the public mind, and it would be a pity indeed were the anniversary be allowed to drift back into its former meaningless form.

Dominion Day should from now on have its proper setting and its proper observance in every centre in Canada; nowhere should it be allowed to pass without attention being called to its significance as a landmark in Canadian history, and without it being made the occasion of a demonstration of patriotic interest in this country.

The elaborate nature of the Diamond Jubilee celebration, of course, cannot be duplicated every year, but it is possible at least to arrange a form of celebration that will emphasize the meaning of the occasion and that will permit Canadians everywhere to rejoice over the progress of their beloved homeland and over the bright prospects the future offers this favored country.

WHY ACCIDENTS HAPPEN.

THE SCENE: Intersection of Water and Murray streets.

THE TIME: 5.55, Friday, April 13.

THE ACTION: Delivery truck speeds up Water street, crossing intersection at between 25 and 30 miles an hour.

Twenty seconds later closed car, travelling east on Murray street at 15 miles an hour, speeds past stop sign without even hesitating and turns south on Water street, swinging wide over the wrong side of the road.

What happened?

Nothing; but just suppose these two glaring violations of the traffic regulations had taken place at the same time, instead of being separated by a bare 20 seconds!

Providence alone prevented an appalling accident in this case wherein both drivers invited disaster and came close to being its victims.

It looks as if there is a chance to start a "Just Kids" Safety Club for adult drivers.

THE BREMEN'S EXPLOIT.

The success of the Bremen, the German Junkers plane, in safely spanning the Atlantic in the perilous westward flight is a matter over which the world rejoices.

There will be general relief that at last this feat has been accomplished.

So long as the westward passage remained uncompleted there was a challenge to daring spirits to try the journey that had claimed so many victims, and experience has shown that challenges of that kind do not go long unanswered among the gallant brotherhood of the air, always ready to face death when adventure calls.

Canadians undoubtedly would have liked to have seen the prize for the first Europe to America flight carried off by an Empire plane, but there is a measure of satisfaction that one of the pilots of the Bremen was that skilful young Irish flyer, Commandant James Fitzmaurice, who was a member of the Royal Air Force during the World War.

It was a strange twist of fate that, less than ten years after that conflict was over, that Fitzmaurice should share the glory of making a new page in the history of aviation with two German flyers, against whom he may have matched his skill back in those dark days.

All honor to the airmen, German and Irish alike; bravery is international, and the world pays tribute to three gallant knights of the air, to their skill and to their fearlessness.

ONLY ONE-QUARTER REMAINS.

The people of Canada can hardly realize how fast fire and axe have eaten into Canada's forest resources during the present generation. Forestry experts state that of what was a primeval forest no farther back than 1810, practically untouched by the axe, little more than one-quarter now remains.

In Eastern Canada comparatively little timber of really prime sawmill quality is left, and it is stated that 70 per cent. of such timber in Canada now stands in British Columbia. In this Province also the work of devastation and waste is going on at a much faster ratio than the annual growth.

A great area of forest land still remains to the north of the populated parts of most of the Provinces, but this forest consists largely of spruce and other woods required for the great pulp and paper industry. This forest of recent years has come to feel full force of the United States demand for newsprint paper. It provides a very big factor in our list of profitable exports, but foresters point out we are cutting and burning at a rate that will exhaust our accessible timber supplies in twenty-five years.

These experts say that with proper regulation as to cutting, reforestration and protection from fire, it is possible for Canada to have her forest industries in perpetuity. Fire has always taken greater toll than the axe. Fire prevention, the forestry men say, is the only salvation.

Forest fire fighting methods are being improved. The aeroplane has been called into requisition to locate fires at their first outbreak and thus prevent fire spreading beyond control. But experience has proved to Canada's cost that fire fighting is not nearly as simple as fire prevention. Every single individual whose business or pleasure takes him or her into the woods, must, while there, be impressed with one idea above all others, and that is to prevent forest fire.

To that end the Hon. Charles Stewart originated an annual Canadian Forest Week in order to provide educational emphasis at the beginning of the dangerous dry season.

ISN'T THERE A BETTER WAY?

Reference was made in these columns last week to the distribution of advertising matter as part of their regular duties by postal letter-carriers, a development of the postal service that is general throughout the country, and the article apparently struck a responsive vein among many householders, judging by the comment it has occasioned.

Citizens object to the practice on two counts: (1) that it necessarily slows up the delivery of first-class mail, and (2) that it brings them each week a mass of useless advertising matter that they don't want.

The first complaint is probably the most serious; the second does not carry so much weight, for if the postoffice did not distribute this propaganda some other agency would.

There seems to be in the first indictment, however, a legitimate grievance.

Householders naturally want their letters delivered as promptly as possible, and there is a touch of the ridiculous about a system that requires a letter-carrier to visit every house on his route distributing patent medicine almanacs, extravagant claims for the merits of somebody's pills or details of a get-rich-quick scheme while citizens have to wait for their first-class mail.

Revenue at the expense of service is of doubtful value to a Government department; if this class of business is profitable it should be taken care of in some other way than being added to the bundles of the carriers delivering first-class mail.

AMERICAN SETTLERS.

In discussions of the influx of capital to Canada the wealth of the settler who emigrates from the United States to take up his home in this country, is not always considered in its full importance. When the ebb and flow of population between Canada and the United States is considered, most stress is laid, and rightly so, on the egress from the Dominion. When it is known that some 2,500,000 native-born Canadians are now resident in the United States, there is just reason to consider that phase of the problem in all its seriousness.

On the other hand, the past year found some 21,025 newcomers to Canada from the United States. That meant that out of every seven settlers who entered the Dominion during the last fiscal year, one was from the United States. Of those 21,025, there were 5,233 men, 1,203 women and 1,691 children, who came under the classification of farmers. In other words, out of every 100 people entering this country from the States, 40 were coming with the obvious intention of settling on the land and enjoying the fruits of Canada's rich agricultural advantages.

The figures giving the actual capital these American settlers bring with them to Canada, show that in the last fiscal year of 1926-27 the sum of $6,334,403 flowed into Canada with the newcomers from south of the boundary line. The year before that the amount was $7,604,209. In previous years the amounts varied annually from more than six millions to $16,584,895.91 in 1920-21. In 1921 the number of settlers from the States was 48,059.

In the big immigration years the number of newcomers to Canada from our next door neighbor was many more than at present. In 1913 there were 139,009; in 1912, 133710, and in 1911, 121,451. Other years also showed a steady tide of emigration from south to north of the continent. Although last year's numerical strength of settlers to Canada from the States was not nearly so large as in the banner years, yet the number is gratifying in that it shows the highest total since 1923. The 21,025 of 1927 compares favorably with the 18,778 of 1926, the 15,818 of 1925, and the 20,521 of 1924.

This year the indications are that last year's number will be exceeded. Canadians should welcome the fact. It is known that the farmer from the United States has proven himself a good citizen. In Essex County the tobacco growers include many who have come from the Southern States and made a success of their farming work here. They have brought brains and capital to the agricultural communities and have proven themselves valuable assets. In the West the same happy results have come from the immigration of wheat growers from the States. The name of Mr. Henry Wise Wood is probably the most outstanding. He has been in Canada for many years, and is now recognized as one of the dominant forces in Alberta's public life.

There is an increasing tide of favorable opinion growing towards Canada in the United States. It is well to foster the idea. When immigration authorities are seeking newcomers to the Dominion they should not overlook the immense possibilities that are present among the farming communities to the south of the Canadian boundary. The immigrant who combines capital with brains and adaptability for assimilation is always to be sought with energy.—Border Cities Star.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

While the trans-Atlantic flyers were hopping across the ocean, the cross-continent runners were covering some 35 miles of Oklahoma roads. Both probably were satisfied, however, that they had done a good day's work.

The people who thought they saw the Bremen passing in a south-westerly direction over Nova Scotia last Friday at least succeeded in getting their names on the front page of the world's newspapers.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE.

MONTREAL, Que., April 16 (Canadian Press).—There was a fairly good inquiry from United Kingdom buyers for Canadian Western oats here on Saturday, but as the prices bid were below exporters' views, little business was done. There was no further change in spot prices for oats, and the demand was limited.

A stronger feeling developed in the market for Winter wheat flour Saturday, and prices were advanced 20 cents per barrel. The undertone to the Spring wheat situation was firm under a moderate demand.

The demand for all lines of millfeed continued active and the undertone to the market was steady. The inquiry for standard grades of rolled oats was somewhat limited, but prices were firmly maintained.

A moderate amount of business was done in eggs, and values were unchanged. The receipts Saturday were 1,416 cases.

Little business was done in butter owing to the fact that the demand was confined to small lots. Prices were steady. The receipts were 707 packages.

The cheese trade continued dull, but values were firm. The receipts were 118 boxes.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

CHICAGO, Ills., April 16 (Canadian Press).—Breadstuff prices aimed for the zenith Saturday, every delivery both of wheat and rye establishing a new top price record for the season. Drought in the southwest with freezing temperatures and high winds, boding ill for the 1928 domestic wheat yield had much to do with bringing about something akin to a buying stampede.

Closing quotations on wheat were strong at virtually the day's highest level, 2⅝ to 3¼ net advance. Rye finished 3 to 3¼c up, corn showing 1¼c to 1⅝c gain; oats ⅝c to 1⅛c higher, and provisions unchanged to a rise of 12c.

Saturday climaxed three successive days of probably the heaviest grain dealing of the year on the Board of Trade, with wheat not only at the highest price of the present crop but also 25c higher than a year ago. In some quarters, it was asserted that big speculators who have been active of late on the Stock Exchange with sensational results had transferred their energies to the wheat pit.

In the general rush Saturday to purchase wheat, the May delivery prices was hoisted to $1.54⅝ a bushel, compared with $1.53 the best previous record which heretofore had been unsurpassed since last July. Immense profit-taking sales on the upward swings of the market were readily absorbed, and in some cases the rise extended to more than 11c a bushel above quotations current earlier in the week. Ordinarily such a volume of selling to realize profits would have resulted in a reaction of several cents, but the broad character of the trading Saturday made the market apparently immune to this effect.

In addition to fear of crop losses from unseasonable low temperatures in the southwest, advices at hand Saturday indicated that prevailing high winds there were sapping moisture from the soil, and that in various places the consequent blowing of dust had become a serious menace, especially as the official forecast pointed to continued absence of rain. On the other hand, word of heavy snowfalls in the Spring wheat belt failed for at least the time being to have any noticeable market influence.

Corn and oats as well as rye were active and higher, mainly in consequence of wheat strength. Wet weather over the corn belt was also a factor, and there was talk of good export business in oats.

Provisions were firmer, sympathizing with upturns both in hog values and in grain.

LAYMEN DISCUSS WORK FOR SUMMER

Will Visit Lakefield and Haultain Within Next Month.

Plans for work in connection with the churches of the surrounding district during the summer season, were discussed by the Anglican Laymen's Association at its monthly supper meeting held last night in Hooper's parlors. President Charles Lacheur presided and arrangements were made to go to Lakefield on Monday night to sponsor the organization of an Anglican Laymen's Association in that village. Committees were appointed to arrange for a concert at Haultain early in May.

The association will also help with the work of St. George's church during the absence of the Rev. J. L. Hughes this summer.

GOD'S MINUTE

So will we sing and praise Thy power.—Ps. 21:13.

Our Divine Father, Who in holy love hast created and art sustaining us, Thy children, we invoke Thy gracious blessing upon us at the threshold of this day. Bless Thou us in our going out and our coming in. May our lives be precious in Thy sight. Fill our hearts with love, and our minds with all high and worthy purposes. In our vocations assist us to see the divinity of labor, the expansive power of sympathy, the eternal might of righteousness and integrity. May we do good to all men as we have opportunity.

Prompt us to the relief of suffering; fill us with pity for the needy, gird us with might to oppose the aggressions of evil men; supply unto us courage to bear adversity and pain. Establish Thou the labors of our hands and hearts upon us. Encourage us to defeat temptation. Bring us from toil to our firesides in tranquility, and bathe us with the peace which floweth like a river, even that which the world cannot supply.

Teach us how greatly to live and greatly to love, and at the evening time of life may there be light. In that hour may we be worthy to stand before Thee and before the Son of Man, in whose name we seek from Thee these benefits. Amen.

JUNIOR AUXILIARY ARRANGES BAZAAR

Effort of Christ Church Young People Proves Very Successful.

CAMPBELLFORD, April 14. — Christ Church Junior Auxiliary met with complete success yesterday afternoon and evening at the parish hall Rear street, where they held a bazaar with the added attraction of afternoon tea, and a most enjoyable program. The work of the Auxiliary is under the direction of Mrs. Harry Moore, Miss Lilian Benor and Mrs. S. Smith. The affair reflected great credit on their efforts with the junior members of the congregation.

The articles offered for sale consisted of everything from home cooking to fancy sewing and notions.

Each of the booths, artistically arranged along the north and south walls of the auditorium of the building, reported an excellent market for their wares. In spite of the generous supply practically every article had found a purchaser before the end of the bazaar.

In the afternoon a short play, The Morning of the Sale was presented to an appreciative audience. The evening session found the same play being repeated by request. Miss Ivy Ray, who directed the number, and was herself one of the characters, received many sincere congratulations for its success. The characters were costumed to represent various articles invariably found on the counters of bazaar booths The cast consisted of Misses Ivey Ray, Aileen Linton, Dorothy Pryke, Lorraine Dunk, Dora Moore Gladys Poulton, Elsie Armstrong, Eva Moore, Evelyn Lofchy, Thelma Hollings, Lottie Poulton, Ina Lang and Marie Hollings.

In the evening the program was somewhat longer than in the afternoon. The first two numbers were a duet by Misses Viola Couch and Lillian Runions, and a solo by Miss Mary Elizabeth Free. The accompaniments were played by Miss May Maynard. The Morning of the Sale, the short play which found such favor in the afternoon, was given as the third number. Kenneth Collison's violin solo, Trafalgar (Murdock) was encored. He responded with Engleman's Melodie d'Amour. Miss Maynard presided at the piano for both numbers. The remainder of the program consisted of a reading by Miss Vera Wood and a duet by the Hollings Twins, Thelma and Marie.

The hostesses at the tea table were Mrs. A. J. Jenkins and Mrs. Fred Linton. Miss Muffit and Mrs. Goffin assisted at the tables. The bazaar may justly be considered a success and the proceeds will reach a much greater amount than was anticipated.

Why Not End Constipation?

"Fruit-a-tives" a sure remedy

IF your tooth were aching would you put painkiller in it all the time and let it get worse, or would you have it filled and made strong again?

The same applies to correcting constipation. The only satisfactory remedy is one which, while relieving congestion, strengthens bowels, liver and kidneys to act without daily medicine. That is why Fruit-a-tives is the public favorite. Made only of fresh fruit juices and tonics, its whole effect on the system is natural and strengthening. Try it. 25c

THE DAILY NEWSPAPERS OF CANADA stand ready to carry the message of legitimate business into every literate home in the Dominion.

Ninety-seven Daily Newspapers in all—distributed from Atlantic to Pacific—whose combined circulations total 1,900,000 copies per day.

These Daily Newspapers are invited into these Canadian homes—are paid to come into them—they never intrude.

Your advertising message has behind it the prestige and good-will and influence of the paper that carries it. It is introduced and recommended to the reader in a friendly way. It is sure to be seen and read sympathetically, and at a time when the mind is most receptive.

NO other form of publicity compares in effectiveness with advertising in the Daily Newspapers.

It costs less than any other form of advertising. Mr. Claude C. Hopkins, an American advertising man of world-wide reputation and great experience, of whom it is said that he changed the buying habits of a nation, states on page 77 of his recent book entitled "My Life in Advertising":

"We have learned that newspapers offer the cheapest distribution of any offer we wish to make."

ADVERTISING can be placed in every Daily Newspaper in Canada—giving complete coverage of the Dominion—at a combined cost of only $5.56 an agate line.

If your product does not enjoy national distribution, you will find Daily Newspapers published in the limited territory where it is sold. They cover your field.

ANY ADVERTISING AGENCY

officially recognised by the Canadian Daily Newspapers' Association will gladly quote advertising rates of any Daily Newspaper or group of Daily Newspapers by return of mail, and will study your marketing problems and prepare your advertising copy without charging you a penny for its services.

SMALL CATCH OF MUSKRATS

Price Low This Year in Spite of Small Catch, Says T. E. Curvin.

WATER HIGH IN MARSHES.

Many a muskrat in the marshes is gadding about in comparative safety this Spring because the high water has sunk the steel traps almost without a trace. True, hundreds of pelts have been stripped and stretched and some of them sold, but others are going to escape the trappers this year, thanks to the high water.

The freshet was an over-night arrival. In fact, some person must have imagined that a dam had been swept away so swiftly did the water rise in the Trent lakes and bays. Presently rumor had it that the dam at Bobcaygeon had disappeared, but the local office of the Canal department denied that there had been any casualties in its system of controlling the flow of water.

One April morning the trappers made their usual rounds, and the next morning their traps were deeply submerged. Tom E. Curvin, of the Peterborough Raw Fur Company, says that many a trap will not be recovered until the freshet has passed and the water subsides to its normal level, but that may not be until after the close of the season for trapping which ends on Saturday, April 21st. Some traps are two to three feet under water.

Mr. Curvin expects a lighter catch than last year, and he points out that the market is easier. The present price of $2.10 for heavy leather select pelts is likely to be the peak, according to his view of the market. One firm that took 9,000 pelts from him last year, has notified him that they will require only a thousand this Spring. And the dealers are culling the 'kits" and thin leather rats. The price a year ago was $2.65, and the catch was heavy. Sales on the Montreal fur auction have been gradually declining. The April quotation for selects was $2.30, which Mr. Curvin states is equivalent to $2.10 locally, when the royalty, commission, express charges and other items have been deducted from the Montreal price.

In fact, Mr. Curvin believes that for years the price will set itself at around $2.00 as a standard figure. At times it may exceed that figure, according to the conditions of demand and supply. Last year the Montreal auction price for rats at this season was about $3.00. Pelts which Mr. Curvin has already bought in this district are of good quality. They are well furred and show few cuts or other depreciating marks.

A trapper in the making, perhaps, is George Dolan, a school boy, who works the marsh east of the canal. Yesterday he brought in one pelt and collected two dollars, the full price for it. Last year he invested in one trap, and invested the proceeds from his first pelt in several more traps. This spring he bought some heavier traps and has made what a school boy should consider a large return on his slim financing.

CANADIAN NIGHT.

First of Series of National Programs To Be Given at S. A. Temple.

Six hundred presents (made in Canada) will be given away free tonight in the Salvation Army Temple, Aylmer and Simcoe at the first of the national popular Monday nights, which is Canadian night, under the direction of Mrs. Stanley Richardson. A fine program has been arranged, to be rendered entirely by Canadians. Everybody, especially Canadians, invited.

Alderman Cotton will be chairman and the program will start sharp at eight o'clock.

Next Monday night will be English night.

"GETTIN' BUSY at our HOUSE"

Children catch the spirit of the occasion; with very little encouragement they pitch in and do their share. And homes are so vitally interlocked with Childhood and all human progress. People are very largely influenced by environment. A dull and unpainted house; a home made up of drab rooms and uninviting surroundings is quite likely to dampen even the highest spirit.

Yes, a home has many responsibilities and there are many jobs to do, endlessly, to keep it fit and a credit to its community. But what of that? Anything we do for our home and house is money in our own pockets and measurable "investment." Whether it be soap powders or scrubbing brushes, paints and varnishes, flower seed or garden tools, they are the hardy perennials of the Home beautiful.

Use them this year to make Peterborough brighter and more beautiful in 1928.

BUY YOUR LOT WITH CARE.

A Few Safeguards When Selecting a Site.

A reliable agent or real estate man, on whose reputation you can count, is usually in a position to safeguard your interests and point out the advantages and disadvantages of locations you may think favorable. There are many things to be considered. For instance, you should find out whether there are any restrictions in the neighborhood, if you are expected to make improvemenss, or whether you are likely to be assessed later on for new sidewalks, curbs, roadways or gradings. Then there are the possibilities of railroads, trolley lines, public utilities or manufacturing plants later affecting the property. On the one hand, these may be beneficial, if not too close or of an offensive character; on the other hand, they are likely to be a detriment to the neighborhood and decrease the value of your land.

Another thing to investigate is the nature of what are called "easements." This is a term indicating the rights of certain persons or firms to install water or gas mains, telegraph or light poles or wires, etc., which may not occur to the land buyer at the time, but may disfigure the property when the district develops.

In a built-up locality these easements are generally apparent, and often are not objectionable. For this and other reasons it is almost always safer to buy a lot in a district that has passed the initial stages of development. The land will cost you more in the first place, but you are able to form a better idea of whether the locality will be a pleasing place to live when thoroughly settled and built up, and hence you are more certain of a steady increase in the value of your property.

In better class districts there are usually restrictions on the type of house permitted, and also upon the erection of places of business within the vicinity. This restriction is fixed in order to prevent good residential districts from being disfigured with shacks and other unattractive buildings which reduce values and greatly reduce the possibilities of re-sale. To build a substantial and handsome home in a district where small dwellings are likely to predominate is to court an eventual loss.

STUCCO LENDS CHARACTER

Allan W. Horwood, Architect.

Here is a little dwelling on which many, tired of the congestion of apartment house life, will look with longing. Consider for instance the half timbering. This is a feature which can be very easily overdone with dire results but here, confined to one projecting gable, it produces a little picturesque feature and obviates the possibility of monotony inherent in unrelieved stucco walls.

As the dining room, living room and owner's bedroom all rely almost solely on front windows for light, a lot facing south or west is of course preferred.

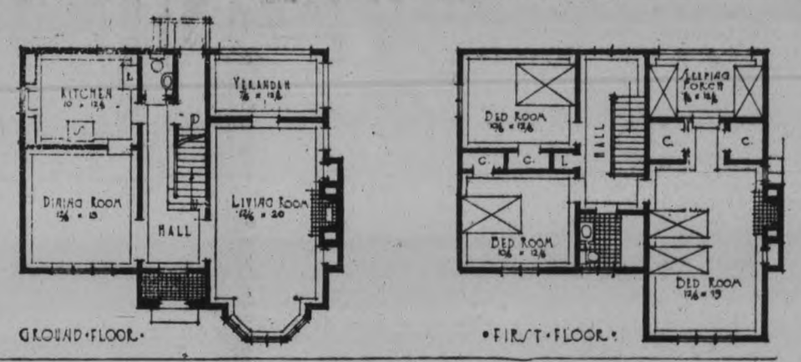
The living room has a large bay window, well designed fireplace with side cupboards and, directly opposite the bay, a door to a roomy verandah overlooking the garden.

In addition to a refrigerator and electric range the kitchen contains that deservedly popular arrangement of a sink flanked by cupboards with a window directly above.

Three bright, airy bedrooms and a sleeping porch are located on the second floor, in addition to a bathroom with a built-in recess bath. The ground floor is also provided with a two piece toilet.

The exterior dimensions of this home are 33 ft. x 24 ft. and with concrete footings, steel sash windows and hot water heating this house as described cost approximately $8,300 exclusive of lot. The cubic contents are 26,640 cubic feet.

Readers desiring further information regarding a house of this design should communicate with Home Building Information Service, 345 Adelaide St., West, Toronto, Ontario, who will see that it is supplied. When writing please mention design No. 119. Copyright 1928.



For once, his wife was mistaken!

"PUT in your Long Distance call," said Mrs. Blake to her husband, as she put on her hat. "I'll go ahead. You'll have to wait!"

But to their great surprise, the operator said, "Please hold the line." It didn't seem over a minute before Mr. Blake was actually talking to New Haven, 400 miles away!

There is practically no waiting for Long Distance connections nowadays, if you give the operator the distant number. She makes the connection usually while you hold the line.

If you don't know the distant number, and the Long Distance operator has to look it up for you, it naturally takes a little longer. She will tell you the number, so you can make a memo of it for use the next time.

INTEREST GROWS IN EMPIRE WEEK

Several Local Stores Make Windows Available To Committee.

That the Empire Shopping Week idea is rapidly gaining in interest was the declaration of the Chambers of Commerce secretary this morning. He stated that several retail merchants have signified their willingness to display made-in-Peterborough goods in their show windows during Empire shopping week and already a number of manufacturing concerns have made arrangements for down town display of their products.

The entire window space of the Teco store has been placed at the disposal of the Empire Shopping Week committee by the store manager, Mr. Butcher, and in addition, the services of the merchandise display men will be gratuitiously given to the manufacturers placing exhibits in the Teco stores.

J. J. Turner, chairman of the Shopping Week committee expressed himself as well pleased with the progress being made. He stated that the Kingan Hardware Store, the Peterbrough Hardware Store, Hall's and the C.D.S.L. and others had been made available to exhibitors and that many inquiries were being received from various concerns with goods to show.

" I believe that it will be good business generally for the exhibitors will gain much publicity for their goods, particularly if the wish of the committe is respected—that all the goods be in the windows by next Friday. This will mean that people coming from out of town on two busy Saturdays will see the goods as well as the regluar week day shoppers," said Mr. Turner.

Why We Do What We Do.

WHY WE ARE CHEERFUL
By Mehran K. Thomson, Ph.D.
(Author, The Springs of Human Action)

The normal healthy person is usually cheerful. Cheerfulness is the rule rather than the exception. The optimistic attitude is like a gauge. It indicates that all is well. The opposite attitude shows that there is something wrong.

We are cheerful because it is pleasant to be that way and we usually prefer the pleasant feelings and emotions to their opposites. Cheerfulness has in it the note of hope and expectancy. This is a decided asset in the struggle of life. Our chances of getting what we want and of overcoming difficulties and dangers are increased by maintaining a cheerful frame of mind.

It is because of this fact that we often pretend to be cheerful and optimistic when we are far from it. It helps us to keep up a good courage which is so essential to success.

We are also cheerful because we have discovered that it has a more favorable effect on others. No one wants to be associated with a grouch. "Laugh and the world laughs with you; weep and you weep alone." The world places a high premium on joy, laughter and cheerfulness. Those who make others laugh are extremely popular. They are welcome everywhere.

Cheerfulness is desirable not only as a means of getting what we want but it is also desirable in its own right as an end in itself.

Pleasure and happiness which cannot exist without a cheerful disposition are a part of life and a very important part. We live for these experiences. When we have them we seek to retain them. When we haven't them we move earth and heaven to attain them.

ABBEY'S
Sweetens the Stomach

Station Burned.

BOSTON, April 16 (Canadian Press).—A mass of smouldering ruins, fallen masonry, and twisted steel was all that remained to-day of the New York, New Haven, and Hartford Railroad's Back Bay Station, swept by fire early Sunday which caused damage estimated between half and one million dollars and disrupted the service on the railroad.

Youth must have its fling, especially when the girl throws him over.

Embarrassed by Dishpan Hands

Ill at ease . . . at her own dinner table

DICK'S 'chief' was pleasant and friendly, but I knew that he had the fastidious standards of a man of culture and wealth.

"I was so eager, as Dick's wife, to meet those standards.

"It was a little thing which upset me—just the merest change of expression on his face . . . I was pouring coffee, and for the fraction of a second his glance had rested on my hands.

"I knew my hands looked red and rough from housework and dishes—and knew he had noticed them . . . I became self-conscious, ill at ease.

"Foolishly, perhaps, I felt the evening was a failure.

"Now I know how NEEDLESS it was. Since I have been using Lux for dishwashing, for all cleansing my hands have to do—my hands are soft and smooth and white. I'm never embarrassed now by 'dishpan' hands."

So many soaps—whether flake, chips, or cakes—contain harmful alkali which makes the skin harsh.

There is NO injurious alkali in Lux! Made by a remarkable process—Lux actually SOOTHES the skin, leaves it a little whiter and softer than before.*

Dissolving instantly, before you ever put your hands in, a little Lux foams up into a mountain of suds—so rich, so cleansing, the dishes seem almost to wash themselves.

The big package of Lux washes six weeks' dishes. Lovely hands for so small a price!

* Many beauty parlors use Lux in manicuring the nails, to soften and whiten the fingers.

Lux keeps lovely the hands that wash dishes

Banks Maintain Strength On Toronto Exchange

TORONTO, April 16 (Canadian ress).—Banks as a rule maintained their strength on the Toronto Stock Exchange to-day though the two most spectacular gains of Saturday, in Royal and Toronto Bank shares, were lessened by moderate re-actions today. Royal eased back six at 424 and Toronto softened ten to 325. The remainder advanced again, Dominion gaining five at 280, Montreal five at 385, Imperial four at 259, and Nova Scotia three at 400.

The curb market was active but the regular list dull. Nickel softened another 1¼ at 89¾, and Massey Harris was down more than a point at 43 1-8. Hiram Walker weakened ⅛ at 62½, and Canada Dry was a point softer at 69. The strong spots, however, were Distillers, Seagram issues firming to 22, and the rights appreciating to 5½.

Mine Shares Weaker With Losses Large

TORONTO, April 16. — Canadian Press. — Weakness prevailed on the Standard mining exchange this morning with Hudson Bay, Sherritt and Mandy conspicuously weak.Mandy sold down to 260, a loss of 25; Hudson Bay eased 30 at 16.50, and Sherritt at 6.20 was 55 lower. Amulet weakened to 312; Howey at 85, Hollinger at 16.50 and Wright Hargraves at 440 were moderately lower and other weak spots included Pend Oreille at 18.50; Sudbury Basin at 9.55, Kirkland Lake at 1.92 and Barry Hollinger at 1.24.

Conspicuous by their strength in the general softness were Gold Hill and Pioneer. Gold Hill gained five at 20½ and Pioneer sold up one at 58 at noon, after touching 60.

Unseasonable Weather Causes Rise In Wheat

CHICAGO, April 16 (Canadian Press).—Reports of unseasonably cold dry weather in the southwest lifted wheat to-day to fresh high price records, with speculative buying of broad proportions. Heavy profit-taking sales caused only brief setbacks. Opening ¾ to 1 cent up, the wheat market later showed additional gains. Corn, oats, and provisions shared in the strength of wheat, corn starting unchanged to ⅛ cent higher, subsequently rising sharply all around. Opening prices were:

Wheat, May 154⅝; July 154¼. Corn, May 101⅜, July 104⅞. Oats, May 59¾, July 53½.

FIRE TOLL UP AT WINNIPEG

George Douglas, 60, Succumbs To Injuries and Shock Received.

SEVEN IN HOSPITAL.

WINNIPEG, April 16. Canadian Press. — The fire which ravished the Casa Loma apartment block here on Saturday, claimed its fifth victim to-day. George Douglas, aged 60, died in the hospital to-day from the effects of shock and smoke fumes. He failed to regain consciousness from the time that he was admitted to the institution. During the height of the blaze Douglas was one of many tenants who sought safety by climbing out on a window ledge on the upper story of the structure. He was eventually lowered to the ground by the firemen .His condition then was described as precarious. Three of the seven injured are still in a critcal condition.

Mine Annual Meetings Being Held Just Now

(Special from The Financial Post Syndicate)

Some important annual meetings of mines are being held about this time. Six of them are just over, Coniaurum, Gold Hill, Kirkland Lake Gold, Howey Gold, Harker Gold, and Amity Gold. In ever case there was considerable new information given shareholders in addition to what was revealed in the annual reports. It was expected by many that the Kirkland Lake meeting would develop into a Donnybrook, but it was quite a tame affair and since then there has developed quite a favorable feeling for the venture. This of course is largely the outcome of the optimism displayed by the leading officers who have always had a lot of faith in the outcome of the operation.

Gold Hill shareholders were told that the management hopes that the development of No. 3 vein which is being drifted upon, would reveal ore sufficient width and grade to put the operation on a profitable basis. It is being pointed out in some circles that there was little information given in regard to the work on this vein to date and no mention was made of the milling results.

Coniaurum shareholders were told that their mill will be operating in June. This property adjoins McIntyre and Hollinger on the east in Porcupine camp. It is expected that they will start with 250 tons daily. In addition to 1,200,000 shares, of which all but $120,000 shares are issued, of $5 par the company has also issued $800,000 seven percent bonds, due in 1934. The balance sheet showed that expenditure on mine development to date has just been slightly under $1,000,000.

Howey Gold shareholders were given the good news that some rich ore has been encountered on the 500-ft. level. However, the most interesting phase of the meeting was the detailing of the plans of Manager Horace Young to employ drills to drive a number of short holes from the present workings and to also employ drills as the work drove ahead on the different levels. This will give quick information and help in keeping in touch with the ore.

The next few months should bring a great deal of important news on Howey as at this moment the miners are about to drive into the section west of the present working where high values were secured on surface.

It will be some time before important news is to be expected from Harker Mines. The property has been dewatered and the manager and geologist have been studying the situation. Harker has opened a considerable tonnage of fair ore and the object of the management is to find a "sweetener" or higher grade ore that will make all the ore so far opened up, commercial and profitable.

Lake Shore will increase its mill to 1,000 tons daily. This announcement has been expected for some time as the mine has been in shape to handle a much larger tonnage than it has been. The surprise is that the company did not make the jump to 1500 tons daily which many believe is the ultimate goal of the management.

It is understood that Teck Hughes is now producing gold at a rate that will bring the 1928 production up to somewhere between five and six million dollars. If the new unit is added to the high grade mill, these figures will be exceeded. This presages a much higher profit for the year and should be reflected in a material increase in the dividend rate by the end of the year at least.

FOUNDATION DEFECTIVE.

Report On St. Francis Dam Accident Issued To-day.

WASHINGTON, April 16.—(Canadian Press.)—The collapse of the St. Francis dam in Southern California, was attributed to a defective foundation in the report made public today by Dr. Elwood Mead, Commissioner of Reclamation.

NO BROKEN RAIL.

Accident at Bradford Caused By Defective Wheel or Axle.

TORONTO, April 16 (Canadian Press).—There was no defect in a rail to cause the derailment of the Canadian National Winnipeg flier at Bradford Saturday, resulting in the death of Engineer Brooks, officials of the railway have decided. A broken wheel or axle is believed to have caused the accident.

Proposed Canadian Women's Memorial Building. Above is the first architect's drawing of the proposed Canadian Women's Memorial Buidling to be erected in Ottawa at an approximate cost of $250,000, in memory of the women poineers of the country and of those women who were sacrificed in the great war. This building which will contain a large convention hall and accommodation for offices for each of the nationally organized women's clubs of Canada is to be built of money raised by the women of Canada, assisted by the government.

FOUR LOSE LIVES IN WINNIPEG FIRE

Apartment House is Gutted — Firemen Rescue Many Persons.

WINNIPEG, April 16. — Canadian Press. — A deserted block, with scores of broken windows, above which were huge black smoke spots, mark the scene of one of the worst fires in the city's history, from the point of fatalities.

Four dead, two men and two women, with a score injured, eight seriously and in hospital, was the toll of the flames and smoke which swept the Casa Loma, a five story apartment-business building, here on Saturday afternoon.

The following are dead: W. E. McNeil Gregory Heake, Mrs. F. Hamilton, Mrs. W. F. Gassler.

Seriously injured:

Mrs. Gregory Heake, not expected to live. Both legs fractured; a possible broken back, scratches and bruises.

George Thorpe, 57, caretaker, burat on face, and suffering from shock.

David Yeddeau, district fire chief: district shoulder.

Mrs. R. Vanderwater: Injuries to legs, shock.

L. C. Brown, 22, fell from fifth floor, serious injury to back.

George Douglas, 60, suffocation; condition dangerous.

Mrs. M. McNeil, 30, leg injuries.

Mrs. G. Allan fractured legs, injury to the spine; serious.

Originating in the freight elevator shaft at the rear of the building, the flames quickly spread to the top floors, and many of the tenants were trapped on the third, fourth and fifth floors. Soon the exits were completely cut off, heavy, black clouds of smoke filled the hallways and rooms and caught in a building unequipped with fire escapes, residents were forced to the windows.

When the firemen arrived, screaming men and women were at the windows; others who had suites on the lower floors were rushing from the main and rear exits, while flames and smoke belched up the elevator shaft and through the room.

Escaped from Windows.

Immediately rescue efforts were commenced by the firemen and the police, aided by civilian volunteers, but before ladders could be placed some of the terrified tenants, with the flames beginning to lick away the window sashes, jumped to a main floor light well; where injured they were carried to safety. Others jumped into life nets, while still others were carried down ladders.

RUSH FOR SEATS FOR KIWANIS MINSTRELS

The box office of the Grand Opera House is a busy place to-day as the reserved seats went on exchange this morning for the "Jollies of 1928, the big Kiwanis Club Minstrel-Revue. The club committee decided to open the sale one day ahead of the usual time to avoid the long line and usual rush for seats. However many people were in line this morning, and it is expected that a steady stream of theatregoers will be reserving seats during the next three days. The production will be presented Thursday and Friday of this week.

According to those taking part in the Kiwanis show it is unlikely if such a modern and up-todate presentation has ever been staged here with local talent. An entirely new feature of the first part Minstrel is the use of dancing girls to back up the End Songs. The end men, Messrs. Vern Morphet, Walter Fitzgerald, Fraser Skinner, Norm Laing, George Nicholls and Dick Lush are also "dancing ends,' and each of the fast stepping numbers is staged in true professional style, making a real presentation of each number.

More than $10,000 worth of costumes and scenery is used in this pretentious production of two acts and fourteen scenes. Two groups of dancers wear five different sets of most artistic creations, while the end men and circle men are going to be seen in the finest satin minstrel suits obtainable. The scenery used is as modern and costly as the dress and thirteen sets of lines are required to hang the outfit. The Jollies of 1928 have been staged at Galt, Hamilton, Belleville, and this week is being staged for the Kiwanis Club at London. Reports from all these towns proclaim it the greatest amateur show ever seen.

Eight thousand programs of the local Kiwanis show are being distributed in the mail to-day.

A full rehearsal of the Jollies will be held at the K. of C. Hall tonight and the show will be put together for the first time; up to date, each group has been rehearsing separately.

Over two hundred under-privileged children will probably be taken care of at Jackson Park this summer, and the proceeds of the show will be set aside for that purpose.

months ago, making the statement that Ontario was strongly socialistic in its tendencies. He pointed to our Workmen's Compensation Act, to our Mothers' Allowance Commission, to our Hydro-Electric enterprise and to other and similar and kindred ideas. Possibly Ontario is socialistic but if so, it would appear to us that the things I have just mentioned are, in the main, good for the community and the ideas are worth following through. I have mentioned that an injured worker receives 66 2-3 of his earnings as compensation when injured. I quite realize that the average man has no true conception of compensations costs; for instance I am informed by the Workmen's Compensation Board that the cost of the loss of an arm at the shoulder is $11,900, at an average age and wage. A leg at the thigh runs to $14,600, a hand $6400, and so on, and the money which pays these costs is paid as a pension.The Pension Fund of the Workmen's Compensation Board has sometimes been called a Reserve Fund, but it is not that. It is a fund set aside to pay for accidents that have already happened, and on which pensions have been awarded, and when you read as you might possibly have done, in the discussion on the Hollinger fire, of a Disaster Reserve Fund of something over twelve million dollars, it should be remembered that the man who made the statement, or the reporter who heard the statement, made a mistake. The Disaster Reserve Fund of the Workmen's Compensation Board is about $250,000, but the Pension Fund is well over twelve million dollars.

Accidents and Costs.

Last year, there were 71,979 accidents reported to the Workmen's Compensation Board, including 429 fatalities. The Board awarded in compensation and medical aid a little over $6,086,000 and of that sum, slightly more than one million dollars was for medical aid. Our Act, as has been noted, came into effect in this Province in January, 1915, and in thirteen years under compensation, there have been 639,090 accidents reported to the Board, including 5,167 fatalities, and the Board has awarded the gigantic sum of $63,410,000 odd.

Prevention

Not long ago the press carried a report that Premier Taschereau of Quebec had said that he would improve on the Ontario Act when their compensation law came into effect. He was quoted as having said that the industrialist in Ontario had no incentive to accident prevention work. This palpably is wrong. It is the regular practice of the Workmen's Compensation Board to set up each year a provisional rate of assessment and for the various industries under compensation and, at the beginning of the next year when the experience of the former year is known, those rates are adjusted; that is to say, classes with a bad experience will pay a higher rate and classes with a good experience will pay a lower rate. In addition, the industrialist in Ontario is encouraged to carry on accident prevention work through Section 101 of the Workmen's Compensation Act which gives the industries in any of the classes power to establish associations for accident prevention purposes, and authorizes the Compensation Board to pay the cost of operating those organizations. The Industrial Accident Prevention Associations, for instance, is a federation of Accident Prevention Associations representing fifteen of the classes under compensation, and the membership of our organization includes over two-thirds of the total payroll of those in Schedule 1, which means practically all industries except railroads, telephone companies, telegraph companies, municipalities, and the like.

The Cross-Roads.

Geneva has been called the "Cross-Roads of the World." Geneva is, undoubtedly, the International city to an extent that can exist in no other part of the world. We find representatives of 55 countries included in the League of Nations, discussing accident prevention at the cross-roads, we must realize that a new day has dawned for the industries of the world at large.

The International Labour Office was set up in 1920 under the authority given in Part 13 of the Treaty of Peace, and is one of the bulwarks of the League of Nations. The staff of the League of Nations at Geneva consists of nearly four hundred people and the staff of the International Labour Office, which is practically run as a separate organization, has a staff of about three hundred and fifty. The International Labour Office exists for the purpose of securing, by international action, adjustment of conditions of labor throughout the world, and the success of that organization's work is reasonably apparent when one reads the list of draft conventions and recommendations that have been considered and approved.

Safety Sub-Committee.

The governing body of the International Labor Office is composed of representatives from governments, from organized employers and from organized labor. This body has set up a number of committees for the purpose of carrying on special duties and these committees include the Safety Sub-Committee which deals solely with problems of accident prevention. The members of the Safety Sub-Committee were approved by the various governments at the time of their appointment. For example, my name was submitted to the Canadian Government some years ago and was approved by Ottawa before I received an invitation to act on the committee.

In considering subjects for discussion at the International Labor Conference, the governing body realized the importance of accident prevention, and the matter has come up for consideration from time ti time. A year ago, it was definitely decided that the subject would appear on the agenda for its first discussion by the 1928 International Labor Conference. This meant, of course, that a meeting of the Safety Sub-Committee at Geneva was necessary in order to go over certain of the matters to be discussed, and it was pointed out to the governing body that at least one overseas delegate should be invited to the committee meeting. I was, fortunately for me, the one chosen, and, in consequence, got my first sight of Geneva on the 1st of November last.

The meetings of the Safety Sub-Committee began on the morning of the 3rd November, and lasted for three days. There were delegates from Great Britain, Finland, Switzerland, France, Germany, Belgium, Holland, Italy, and Canada. Sir Gerald Bellhouse, Chief Inspector of Factories for Great Britain, was elected president of the committee, a position which he had formerly held. Dr. Ritzmann had prepared a lengthy memorandum for the consideration of the committee, and, after listening to a short address by Mr. Albert Thomas, the dynamic director of the International Labor Office, we went to work. All proceedings were conducted in English and in French; that is to say, statements made in English were translated into French and vice-versa. This, of course, means that the office must maintain an efficient force of translators. The proceedings were not slowed u pas much as might be thought, as the translators, in our case at least, certainly learned that it was satisfactory to us to take the heart out of an argument and give that without adding all of the verbal frills.

After sitting for three days, we had considered a monograph on chains and turned this back to the delegate from Belgium with numerous suggestions, had approved a monograph on hydro extractors submitted by the Italian delegate, had decided that were not slowed up as much as might able regarding automatic railway couplings, and had worked out a detailed report for submission to the International Labor Conference in May. The director complimented the committee on the manner in which the work had been done, and I believe that a certain amount of surprise was expressed that the committee finished the work within the time allotted.

May I again express to you my own belief of the extraordinary value that must come from a conference of this kind on a subject that so vitally affects both employer and employee. In May, the International Labor Conference will consider accident prevention, and 55 countries of the world will have an opportunity of sitting in on the discussion and each contributing what they can for the benefit of others . The result of their deliberations next month will be printed and distributed to the countries comprising the membership of the League of Nations, and a final decision on the subject will be reached at the conference in May, 1929. As I see it, countries which have effective accident prevention organizations will be stimulated to greater results, those who have a moderate interest in the question will be "jacked up" in their ideas and those countries that are doing very little accident prevention work will be encouraged to start on the problem.

TODAY DENTISTS say keep teeth white and sparkling to keep them healthy. Miss Georgette Duval is advised to use the new-day dentifrice, Pepsodent.

Remove Film on Teeth

To make them crystal bright. Remove it to combat tooth and gum disorders

RUN your tongue across your teeth and you will feel a film. A slippery coating that covers them, absorbs stains and hides their dazzling whiteness. Film also invites tooth and gum troubles. You must remove this film to have lovely, healthy teeth. Ordinary dentifrices will not do it successfully.

Now, thanks to modern science, there is a new and different way to combat that film.

Just obtain a tube of the special film-removing dentifrice called Pepsodent at your druggist's. It clears off that film amazingly. Gleaming white teeth are beautiful. Note the difference in your smile.

PETERBOROUGH C.C. ARRANGES PROGRAM

Several Clubs Will Play Here During Coming Year— Trips Planned.

The Peterborough Cricket Club is looking forward to a successful season. Several home and away games have already been arranged and other fixtures will be closed within the course of a week or so. More interest in the game will likely be shown this year, as the C.G.E. has formed a cricket club ,and games will be arranged with them, which will give more local interest.

The Peterborough club has been fortunate in arranging games with the Toronto C.C., also with St. Edmunds and Birchcliffe, both of Toronto. Oshawa and Lakefield are also on the program.

A general meeting will be held at the Paragon Tea Rooms on Friday night, April 20th, at 8 o'clock. All members are asked to turn out. The club will also welcome any others at this meeting who are interested and would like to join. Permission to use the Oval has been given the club and as soon as the ground is fit, work will be commenced on it, and practices started.

The officers for the coming season are as follows:

President, Doug. Hammond; Vice-President, G. Monkman; Secretary, C. Thorpe; Treasurer, R. N. Stuart; Captain, C. Elliot; Vice-Captain, J. Dunkerley; Equipment, W. E. Massey-Cooke; Grounds, W. G. Davis; Transportation, F. Immng; Selection Committee: R. Dyer, F. Dyer, C. Elliot, D. Hammond and F. Jefferson.

If you buy out of town, and I buy out of town, and all our neighbors buy out of town, what in thunder will become of our town? Ever think about it?

Public Confidence!

The part the Daily Paper plays in the moulding of Public Opinion depends on the confidence placed in the paper by its readers—and the amount of business done by the Merchants is gauged by the way their advertising is lived up to. That The Examiner and its advertisers are held in high regard by the people of this live district, is the opinion of the writer of the following letter:—

Hamilton, March 19, 1928.

Peterborough Examiner, Peterborough.

Dear Sir,—After three weeks putting on a sale in your city, I want to say that your paper brings the earliest response of any paper I have had anything to do with in Ontario. My business takes me everywhere. It must be from the confidence the people have in your paper, and the advertisements you publish. Keep it that way. In many places we find advertisers who do not live up to their advertising, and have destroyed the confidence of their subscribers.

Yours Sincerely,
L. R. TOBEY,
With The United Sales, 360 Aberdeen Ave., Hamilton, Ont.

Mr. Tobey is a man of large experience in advertising, having been for some years one of Hamilton's heaviest advertisers, and such an endorsement as the above is authoritative.

TWO MORALS:

HAS MAUNDY MONEY

Following an ancient custom, his majesty, the king, on Maundy Thursday passes out coins to as many poor people as he is years old. This custom dates back through the centuries as a ceremony that each monarch has performed on "Maundy Thursday." A. Rosenthal, Toronto, who collects coins, has sets distributed by eleven different sovereigns. The coins have been sold to collectors at the different times by the recipients. This picture shows Mr. Rosenthal, and some of the coins he has collected.

SEEK POPULARITY AWARD

Above are shown four candidates in the popularity contest which is being held in connection with the Centenary celebration in Pembroke, Ont., early in June to decide who will be the Queen of the Centenary Pageant. They are (1) Miss Margaret Bromley of the Pembroke Collegiate Institute, (2) Miss Catharine Murray, a nurse-in-training at the Pembroke General hospital, (3) Miss Adele Kossoliz, and (4) Miss Olive Bennett.

MUCH PROGRESS MADE.

Dr. Charles H. Mayo, world-famous clinical surgeon of Rochester, declares that more has been done in the last 25 years for the advancement of medical knowledge of the causes behind disease, than in the preceding 25 centuries.

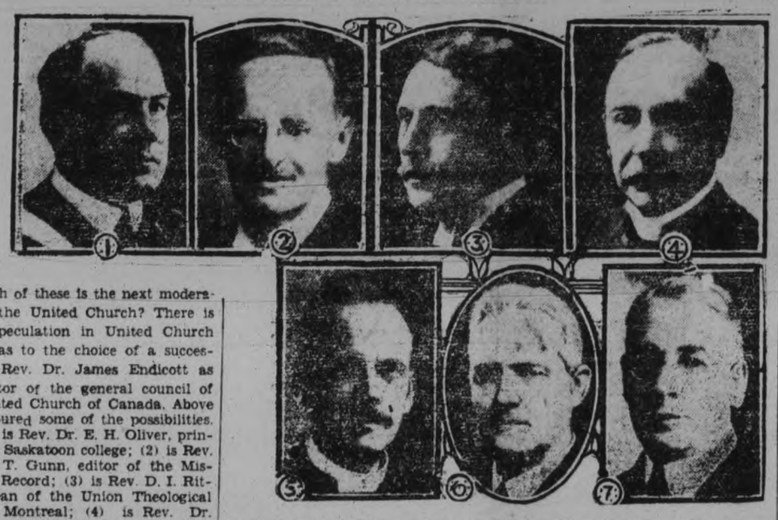
KING HEARS ADDRESSES

His majesty opens new science museum. The new buildings of the London museum of science in Kensington were recently opened with elaborate ceremonies, the king and queen heading a large number of notables who were present. Their majesties are seen seated on a special dais in the reception hall of the main building listening to addresses.

GRADUATE AS DEACONESSES

Here are six young women who have received their diplomas as deaconesses of the Presbyterian Church, in Knox College chapel, Toronto. They are: Miss Mary Murphy, B.A., of Milan, Que., who is going to British Guiana; (2) Miss Margaret Clark of Asbestos, Que., who is going to Fort William; (3) Miss Sybil M. Crawford of Carleton Place, who will take up work among the Chinese in Saskatchewan; (4) Miss Jean MacLean of Almonte, Ont., who is going to Japan; (5) Miss Anna M. Brell of Pambrun, Sask., who will do church home work in Saskatoon; (6) Miss Margaret Ramsay of Brantford, Ont., who is going to Formosa.

MENTIONED FOR MODERATOR



Which of these is the next moderator of the United Church? There is some speculation in United Church circles as to the choice of a successor to Rev. Dr. James Endicott as moderator of the general council of the United Church of Canada. Above are pictured some of the possibilities. No. (1) is Rev. Dr. E. H. Oliver, principal of Saskatoon college; (2) is Rev. Dr. W. T. Gunn, editor of the Missionary Record; (3) is Rev. D. I. Ritchie, dean of the Union Theological college, Montreal; (4) is Rev. Dr. Clarence McKinnon, head of Pine Hill college, N.S.; (5) is Rev. Dr. A. Gandier of Toronto, former principal of Knox college; (6) is the finance minister of the church, Rev. Dr. Robert Laird, and (7) is Rev. J. L. Alexander of Hamilton, who has been nominated for the post by Hamilton presbytery.

RECALLS FUN AT OTTAWA

Although only 12 years old when she left Canada in 1921, Lady Anne Cavendish, youngest daughter of the Duke and Duchess of Devonshire, still recalls with happiness the time she spent in Ottawa. Now 19 years of age and a modern girl in every way, she is recognized as one of the most beautiful titled ladies in the British Isles. The Duke of Devonshire was governor-general in Canada from 1916 to 1921. Lady Anne's sister, Lady Rachel, was for some time mentioned as the future queen of Great Britain, but her name has not recently been linked with that of the Prince of Wales.

Bruce Carey (No. 2), formerly of Hamilton, but now director of music at Girard College, Philadelphia. He believes Canadian and American singers as good as any. Eduard Albion (No. 3), director of the Washington Opera Company, also a Canadian, who also disagrees with Mr. Branscombe.

FOR TORONTO GALLERY

Canadian art gallery gets its first Sargent painting. A remarkably realistic portrait of Joachim, the celebrated violinist, painted by the famous John Singer Sargent, has been presented to the Toronto Art Gallery by an unnamed donor. The canvas was presented to the musician in 1904 on the occasion of the 60th anniversary of his first appearance in England. The presentation was made by the Rt. Hon. A. J. Balfour on behalf of the musician's friends.

HIDE SHORTAGE IS EXPLAINED

Shoe Retailers Told of Reasons For Increased Costs By Manufacturer.

LEATHER FAMINE LIKELY.

At the annual meeting of The National Shoe Retailers' Association of Canada, held in the Mount Royal Hotel, Montreal, S. Roy Weaver, manager of The Shoe Manufacturers' Association of Canada dealt in comprehensive manner, with the problems presented by a world shortage of hides and leather. Following is a summary of his statement:

"A world shortage of hides and leather, which is approaching almost famine conditions in some countries and which is making necessary higher prices for all leather products, has created a trying and difficult situation for the boot and shoe industry," declared S. Roy Weaver, Manager of The Shoe Manufacturers' Association of Canada, in an address at the annual meeting of The National Shoe Retailers' Association of Canada. Mr. Weaver explained that world factors, which are entirely beyond the control of any country or any industry, have been responsible for the runaway hide and leather markets of recent months, that the present shortage of hides can be corrected only by increased production and slaughterings of cattle and that, as cattle take time to grow, it is a matter not of months but of several years before the supply of cattle, hides and leather can be increased. The speaker added that an increase of 15 per cent. or more in the prices of boots and shoes was necessary, in order barely to cover the higher cost resulting from the big advances which have taken place in quotations for leather, and that still further increases in boot and shoe prices will be unavoidable if leather prices continue to mount.

"Cattle hides are now selling at prices which, on the average, are almost 80 per cent higher than those prevailing at this time a year ago, and 42 per cent higher than prices in 1913, with all indications pointing to continued strength in the hide market and with the possibility of still higher quotations", Mr. Weaver said. "In June, 1926, the average cost of packer hides used by the tanners was under 12½ cents per pound, whereas the present price is very close to 25 cents per pound. Last week one of the principal Canadian sole leather tanneries bought 16,000 South American heavy hides (frigorificos), at 30¼ cents a pound, whereas a year ago hides of the same class were purchased at 16 to 17 cents per pound. There has been a still further advance and today's quotations on similar hides is 31½ cents. It will be 6 to 9 months before those hides will be turned into sole leather for sale to the shoe manufacturers and their cost will determine the prices which the shoe manufacturers will have to pay for sole leather 6 to 9 months hence.

"The increased cost of hides has resulted in much higher prices for leather. Sole and upper leathers have advanced by from 40 to 50 percent, while quotations for some selections of upper leathers are now higher by more than 50 per cent. The tanners are reluctant to contract for large quantities of leather at present prices and are anticipating still higher prices as soon as the shoe manufacturers have to place large orders for their requirements for the new season's business. The shoe manufacturers have not derived any benefit whatever from the increase in leather prices. They have been obliged to advance the prices of shoes on account of the increased cost of sole and upper leathers and leather insoles, box toes, counters and lining leathers, but they have given their customers the benefit of any stocks of materials which they have bought at lower prices. As the lower-cost have been exhausted, however, the manufacturers have had no alternative but to advance their prices further, in order to cover their bare costs.

"The factory selling prices of boots and shoes are not yet on a basis which represents full replacement cost from leathers bought at present market quotations and further advances seem to be inevitable. It is obvious that the increase which the retailers are now paying on new purchases cannot be absorbed and will have to be passed on to the public.

"The present shortage of cattle and hides is a direct result of the low prices after the war. Cattle herds throughout the world were allowed to decline until the depletion has reached alarming proportions. Although the population of the United States has grown from 79 millions in 1902 to 118 millions at the present time, the number of cattle in that country is 11 million head less now than 25 years ago. Hides are a by-product from the slaughter of cattle for meat and the world has been eating less meat. While the supply of hides has been reduced, demand for hides and leather has increased. Dr. Stow, Managing Director of the United Tanners' Federation of Great Britain, stated recently that Russia's importations of hides for sole leather are now more than eight times as great as they were three or four years ago.

"The growing shortage of leather and steadily rising prices have caused alarm on the part of users of leather in all parts of the world. At a recent meeting of representatives of the Federated Associations of Boot and Shoe Manufacturers of Great Britain, a resolution was passed calling attention to 'the alarming situation arising out of the increased cost of leather' and a special conference of the boot and shoe and allied trades was held in the United Kingdom last month in this connection. The British tanners have been selling large amounts of leather to the United States, with the result that the United Kingdom has been denuded of stocks of leather and the leather-using industries there are now faced with almost famine conditions.

"There is no remedy for the present world shortage of cattle and hides except a period of higher prices, which will encourage the cattle industry to increase production. The public must pay more for meat and more for all leather products, including boots and shoes. Instead of calves being slaughtered in the spring, high prices may be expected to encourage the farmers to retain them for sale when they have matured. It will be several years, however, before the influence of an increasing supply of cattle can have much effect on the prices of hides and leather and it may be pointed out in this connection that, for sole leather, the tanners require the hides of fully-matured animals, four to five years old."

Mr. Weaver cautioned the retailers against panicky buying, which would only intensify the difficulties of the present situation and create dangerous possibilities. He advised sane buying for their normal requirements and avoidance of speculation.

An Unsightly Skin Needs This Corrective

"It is working marvels with me," wrote a grateful man who, suffering from painful and disfiguring eczema, got complete relief, and regained a clear and healthy skin, by using TRU-BLOOD.

HANDLERS OF BREAD MUST WEAR GLOVES

Toronto Health Department Makes Regulations For Unwrapped Loaves.

TORONTO, Ont. April 16.—(Canadian Press).—Hereafter, all persons handling bread not wrapped in wax paper or other suitable covering approved by the health department, must wear white laundered cotton or linen gloves when handling bread, or in the alternative use nickel-plated tongs.

The rules apply also to delivery wagon drivers, who in addition are required to have all bread, cakes, rolls, etc., placed in their baskets properly covered with a clean towel, which must not be removed from the time the driver leaves his wagon until he reaches the home of the consumer.

The regulations are in the nature of a compromise and were agreed to at the recent conference between the manufacturing bakers and Dr. Hastings, M.O.H. The latter had proposed to make it obligatory on the bakers to wrap all bread in sealed packages before it was sent out of the bakeries. The master bakers rebelled at this on account of the heavy financial outlay that would have to be made on the machinery, and they said that if this was done the price of bread would be raised.

CONSTIPATION PREYS ON HEALTH

You can overcome it with ALL-BRAN

If you are troubled with constipation, read Mrs. Hogan's letter below. It came to us unsolicited—a message of relief to every sufferer:

February 12, 1927

"I want to tell you how much good your ALL-BRAN has done me. It surely can't be beat for constipation. I have tried every kind of medicine and never in my whole life have been relieved until one of my neighbors told me to try bran. So I bought a box and read about your ALL-BRAN and thought I would see what it would do—and it surely did help me. I will never be without it in the house again."

Mrs. James Hogan
(Address sent upon request)

Constipation is almost universal. The cause of more than forty diseases. Dizziness, aching backs, circled eyes, bad complexions, are only a few of its symptoms.

Guard against it. Start tomorrow eating Kellogg's ALL-BRAN. Two tablespoonfuls daily—chronic cases, with every meal. Guaranteed. Doctors recommend it.

A healthful cereal. Serve ALL-BRAN with milk or cream—and add fruits or honey. Sprinkle it into soups. Use it in cooking. Sold by all grocers. Served everywhere. Made by Kellogg in London, Ont.

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN

QUICK PILE RELIEF

Dr. Leonhardt's Hem-Roid is guaranteed to banish any form of Pile misery, or money back. It gives quick action even in old, stubborn cases. Hem-Roid is a harmless tablet that removes blood congestion in the lower bowel—the cause of piles. It brings joyful relief quickly and safely or costs nothing. McDermid & Jury, Bond's Drug Store and druggists everywhere sell it with this guarantee.

BOILER EXPLODES.

TORONTO, April 14 (Canadian Press). — Three employees, two customers, and several passers-by were injured to some extent when the hot water boiler in a dining car stationed at Bay and Albert Streets exploded to-day, blowing out the side of the car.

RESCUERS UNABLE TO REACH ISLAND

same to North German Lloyd, New York."

MONTREAL, April 16 (Canadian Press).—News was being awaited today as to whether the crew of the German plane Bremen had decided to return to Murray Bay or Quebec in the plane piloted by Duke Schiller, noted Canadian pilot and Dr. Cuisinier. The relief airplane landed at Greenly Island yesterday. If necessary repairs to the Bremen can be made at Greenly, it is thougt the intrepid conquerors of the Atlantic will resume their flight to New York in their own plane.

Messages yesterday told of the gallant little crew of the Bremen almost giving up hope of making the East to West crossing when fog and changing temperatures held them back. Their fuel had almost gone when they sighted land which they took for Newfoundland and on which they decided to land. The plane, not equipped for ice landing, was damaged during the landing, which was made on a small lake on the island.

None of the fliers was injured. They found the utmost hospitality pressed upon them by the inhabitants of Greenly, while help was offered in anything the people could do towards repairing the plane.

Weather Changeable.

The first thirty hours of the flight was under most excellent weather. Then conditions changed and the Bremen was forced to fly very low. Just before sighting land they ran into one difficulty after another, running through heavy fog in which their compass "began to fail' and later through snow and hail.

The Government steamer Montcalm was to-day attempting to force its way to the island to take off the fliers if they preferred to return to civilization that way. The steamer was forced to seek shelter last night, being unable to buck the dense icefields in its path. While the Montcalm is only about seventy miles from the landing place of the Bremen, the chief hope of her reaching there appeared to be a change of wind, the strong southerly wind having blown large quantities of ice shorewards.

A third relief expedition is waiting at Murray Bay, Que., to take off by plane for Greenly if word is received that the two German fliers and Capt. Fitzmaurice are not returning with Dr. Cuisinier. This plane will take newspaper and camera men down to assist in welcoming the fliers to this side.

OBITUARY

THOMAS TANNER.

Thomas Tanner, on of the late William and Elizabeth Tanner, died recently following an accident at his home in Madoc townsihp. He was born July 18th, 1860, on the 8th concession of Rawdon township, where he lived most of his life. He had lived for the past eighteen years in Madoc. He was an Anglican in religion, a staunch Conservative, a member of the C.O.O.F. at Springbrook, Royal Black Preceptory, Queensboro, and Queensboro L.O.L. He joined the Orange Lodge when a a boy and was identified with the Order for fifty years.

Rev. Mr. Parker, chaplain of L.O. L. No. 437, conducted a short service at the home and the cortege proceeded to Madoc, where the Rev. Mr. Lansbury held the service in the Anglican church. Interment was made in St. Thomas' church cemetery on the 8th concession of Rawdon. The funeral was held under the auspices of the Orange Order. C. Tanner, D. Post, G. Lowe, and I. Delyea took part in the service. The bearers were members of the Order, Messrs. McMechan, Love, Lynn, Delyear, Sexsmith and Thompson.

Among those left to mourn his loss are his wife, two daughters, Mrs. W. A. Morgan, Belleville, Miss Annie at home, two sons, John of Belleville and Percy of Wolcott, N.Y., two sisters, Mrs. A. Holmes and Mrs. H. Moorcroft, Madoc, and one brother, Robert, of Springbrook.

MRS. JOHN DIXON.

At the home of her daughter, Mrs. H. J. Mackey, 92 Dufferin Street, Peterborough, there passed away on Saturday evening, April 14, after a lingering illness, Emmaline Chamberlain, widow of John Dixon, of Drummond's Station, Otonabee.

The funeral will take place on Tuesday, April 17, at 2 p.m., there being a short service at her late residence at Drummond's Station, Otonabee, followed by service at St. Mark's Church, Zion.

CHARLES R. FEENEY.

The funeral of Charles R. Feeney, who died suddenly on Easter Sunday, took place on Tuesday morning to the Sacred Heart Church, Madoc, from the home of his brother, Fred Feeney, and was largely attended by many neighbors and friends from far and near.

Requiem high mass was offered up for the repose of his soul by his nephew, Rev. Father J. Feeney, assistant at Brockville. Interment took place in the Sacred Heart Cemetery.

ARCHIBALD HANNA.

BONAR LAW, April 16. — On his arrival at Bonarlaw station from the north on Saturday, April 14, intending to visit witl. his son Thomas, of Bonarlaw, Archibald Hanna, aged 82, of Mayo Township, died suddenly due to apoplexy.

The cause was determined by Dr. Argue, coroner, of Stirling, and Dr. Crawford, of Marmora, who were at once called. Deceased had been in poor health for some time prior to his death.

The remains were sent to-day to his late home at Detlor, Mayo township. The funeral takes place Tuesday.

BLOOD STREAM SHOULD BE PURE

Scientist Says Intermarriage of Races Produces Weak Children.

JEWISH BLOOD PURE.

VANCOUVER, B. C., April 16. — (Canadian Press).—"We all have a common interest in keeping the blood stream pure," said Professor Boring, head of the Department of Agriculture at the University of British Columbia.

Studying the root crops over a course of years as a specialist in agriculture, he examined 6,000 cases of the crossing of species of turnips and had rarely discovered a normal descendant. The professor believed that the analogy held good in the human as well as in the plant kingdom—inter-mixture of racial strains almost invariably led to deterioration both in physique and moral character. Statistics from extensive investigations were quoted from the work of Swedish and other scientists, which showed that in the offspring of mixed racial blending there is a higher death rate, greater percentage of tuberculosis, and lowered powers of resistance to disease. Jewish people, he stated, who do not intermarry with other races, even when living under unfavorable hygienic conditions, show a much lower death rate than races which intermarry.

Campbellford

CAMPBELLFORD, April 16.—Mr. and Mrs. T. Fieldhouse (nee Ivey Clark) are visiting Mrs. Fieldhouse's sister, Mrs. J. Ray, Grand Road.

Miss Jean Innes, R.N., Toronto, spent the Easter vacation with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Innes, Seymour West.

Miss Hazel Innes, Belleville, who has been visiting at her home here, returned to Belleville. Miss Gladys Innes will be her guest there for a few days.

Arthur Campbell, Centre Street, who injured his head by running into an overhead bar across a gate, will be able to return to his duties to-day. While employed as delivery man for a local butcher, Campbell bowed his head against the driving rain and did not notice the obstruction which caused his injury. After receiving medical attention, he was taken to his home, where his condition is reported as not being of a serious nature.

Since the construction of the canal, it has been difficult for citizens to realize how high the water in the river would really be under the old conditions during the spring freshet. The level varies but little inside the town boundaries, but the flow increases to surprising proportions. The flow yesterday was estimated to be 22,000 cubic feet per second. By comparing this figure with the summer flow, slightly in excess of 3,000 cubic feet, some fairly accurate estimate of the high water may be obtained. Trappers on the reaches south of the town report small catches of rats. They gave as the reason, the high water that has flooded many of the marshes, and the cold weather that is not ideal for the rats to begin their annual spring migration.

The Rev. Ernest Harston, St. John's United Church, conducted the services in the church at Little Britain yesterday. The Rev. A. K. Edminson occupied the pulpit at both services here.

The congregation of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church were privileged to hear the Rev. Mr. Shaw of Menie at the evening service yesterday. The Rev. James Grier found that his services were urgently required in Havelock, and made arrangements with Mr. Shaw to take charge of the service in Campbellford.

People hate to get a reputation for being what they really are.

DRESS
By MARY MARSHALL

Elaborate use of faggoting is shown in this frock of light gray crepe de chine. The faggoting is of a darker shade of gray.

The first fringe was just the frayed edge of an unhemmed piece of material. The first tuck was taken when some pre-historic ancestress hit upon the idea of sewing up a smock or skirt so it would be small enough for a child to wear.

The first girdle was worn when some still earlier ancestor hit upon this device of holding in his rude fur garments so they would not get in the way as he ran in the chase.

The first hem was taken when some ingenious needlewoman, working with a pierced piece of bone for a needle and rough fibres or thongs of leather for thread, invented the trick for making a durable neat edge to her simple garment.

And the first faggoting, we may presume, was done when some other clever needlewoman went to work to put together two pieces of material and didn't want to take the time to make a close, tightly sewn seam.

From such humble beginnings came almost all the various stitches that are now used to embellish the fine hand made frocks we get from Paris. And just at present faggoting is very fashionable.

It is a matter of tradition with the French needlewomen that faggoting is done with thread of the same color and shade as the material. Sometimes it is done in contrasting color—but I think the matching effect gives more of the quality that the French call "elegance" to the frock. Too bad—isn't it?—that the word elegant as used in English doesn't indicate that same tone of good breeding and distinction that is implied by the French.

Of all the fancy stitches faggoting is fundamentally the simplest and the most easily done. But some of the new frocks show a more elaborate sort that takes a little longer and consequently adds more decoration to the frock that bears it.

LYRICS OF LIFE

WHAT SHALL I BE TO HIM?

What shall I be to him, after all?
Men speak of loving and talk of joys,
And they may be great and they may be tall,
And yet their will is the will of boys.
Whatever the path that we choose to go,
He will follow me there, that much I know.
Shall I be his blessing, or be his curse?
Shall I make him better, or leave him worse?

Oh, the foolish thing is the easy thing,
The wise is often the hard to do.
When the tempters come, when the sirens sing,
Shall I follow him lower, or bring him through?
For love, to man, is a thing like wine,
But love to a woman a thing divine.
Shall I drink the cup that he offers me,
Or be the woman I ought to be?

It is sweet to love, to be loved is sweet,
But, ah, that love must be crystal clear,
Or the glass will shatter around our feet,
The song a sigh and the smile a tear.
And I think I rather would lose his kiss
Than to hear him say, "You have made me this."
In this thing called life, will he rise or fall?
What shall I be to him, after all?

HOROSCOPE

The Stars Incline, But Do Not Compel

(Copyright, 1928, McClure Syndicate.)
TUESDAY, APRIL 17, 1928.

Another uncertain day, according to astrology which reads in the stars conflicting planetary influences.

The early morning is read as favorable to men and women in authority. It is a time to make plans.

Those who seek employment should make an early start today, if they would be successful.

Again the stars are supposed to encourage irritability and a tendency to quarrel.

Under this direction of the planets a strong sense of one's individuality may lead to quarrels and there is a distinct menace to domestic serenity.

The influence of the stars may affect labor conditions to a certain extent, but workers are likely to profit eventually.

Farmers may be temporarily depressed by weather conditions at this time, but they are to have reason to rejoice later.

Again the seers prognosticate religious controversies and the manifestation of prejudices that should have been outgrown.

The evening of this day is a lucky time for entertaining men in the public eye, a fortunate date for banquets or big meetings.

Jupiter appears to presage success for conferences or committees that seek to encourage peaceful policies of any sort.

Persons whose birthdate it is should be cautious in all property transfers. It is well not to travel far in the coming year.

Children born on this day may be inclined to be short-sighted and impulsive. They should be wisely trained.

LADIES BUYING BIGGER SHOES

Size Six Now Standard, Because of Athletics and Desire For Comfort.

"Comfort or style," the problem of milady in choosing her footwear a couple of decades back, has come to read "Comfort and Style." Recent surveys prove it—local shoe dealers declare it though their declaration carries something more, a thank-goodness tone resulting from a long and sometimes discouraging educational campaign.

Reposing greater faith in the salesman's ability to fit her as was Cinderella, the modern maid cares not that it is a "four" or a "six" (speaking of shoes rather than cars) and has long ago ceased to ask for her favorite size in a "won't-take-anything-else" tone. After all, there's only a difference of about three-fourths of an inch.

One Peterborough shoe man, in the course of a conversation on the subject, stated that due to her participation in more sports than did her mother, and due to a desire for comfort as well as style, the girl of 18 to-day requires a larger shoe than the 18-year-old girl of twenty years ago. As a result, the size six shoe has come to be regarded as the "standard" or most-asked-for shoe, though it was only a few years ago that the average woman took a four. Ask the man who sells them!

Though a recent government survey has shown that the average for men was size 9½, and is now eight, local dealers say they have noticed very little if any difference. The "eight" shoe is, of course, largely in demand, but they do not think there has been much of a change—at any rate, not such as that in the ladies' shoes.

"IT IS IMPORTANT TO USE ONLY THE BEST SOAP FOR YOUR WASHING"

by
HILDA DORAN ROSS
Home Economics Counselor

"IN my work as Home Economics Counselor, I have had hundreds of women tell me how they dread washing clothes because it means backaches and sore muscles and red smarting hands. My advice to them has been to use pure soap. In all my experience, the best soap I have discovered for all household washing is Princess Soap Flakes. Finest of pure soap—not just harsh soap bleached.

"And Princess Soap Flakes make washing easier. The thin white flakes foam up quickly into suds which dissolve the dirt and grease and eliminate so much rubbing. They are easier on the clothes and easier on you.

"Princess Soap Flakes will not harm anything which could be washed in plain water. And because they are all pure soap they are economical—a little goes a long way."

RANGERS WIN HONORS IN N.H.L. FINALS

NEW YORKERS TAKE 2-1 TILT FROM MAROONS

Stanley Cup Returns To U. S. For Second Time in History.

STRENUOUS GAME.

Joe Miller and Boucher Star For Rangers During Game.

MONTREAL, Que., April 16.—(By Canadian Press).—The Stanley Cup, that old and battered piece of silverware, emblematic of the professional hockey championship of the world, has gone to the United States for the second time in its long and colorful history. Seattle won the trophy in 1917 but the following year it returned to Canada and has been held here until Saturday night, when the New York Rangers secured a 2 to 1 victory over the Montreal Maroons in the fifth and deciding game of the 1928 world's series. Thus the New Yorkers, only in the second year of their existence as a team, have climbed the heights to capture the highest honors that hockeydom has to offer.

The Ranger victory was some measure of revenge for their veteran manager, Lester Patrick. Two years ago, Patrick, then mentor of the Victoria Cougars, champions of the now defunct Western League, led his team east in quest of a world's title. Opposing the Cougars, were the Montreal Maroons, then only in the second year of their existence. The result of that series is now history. The Maroons were easy victors by winning three games out of four.

This year, however, Patrick's battling Rangers put the skids under a powerful Maroon team, which after scoring a decisive 2 to 0 victory in the first game of the series were picked by the experts to breeze through to the championship of the universe with little opposition from the stubborn band of New Yorkers. The Gotham squad, forced to play all series games in Montreal owing to lack of ice accommodation in Madison Square Garden, unleashed some of the game fighting qualities of their manager, however, and after one of the most stubbornly-fought series in the history of the cup returned victors by a 3 to 2 game margin, with the climax to a five incident-packed contests coming Saturday night in the most exciting and thrilling game of titular fixtures.

Maroons Open Attack.

The Maroons, while beaten Saturday night, were by no means disgraced, and in defeat stamped themselves as a team of supreme fighting qualities. The locals opened on the attack, and practically throughout the entire sixty minutes of play, held a commanding margin in territorial play. They consistently outplayed, outskated and outshot the blue-clad Rangers. In fact, the Montrealers did everything but outscore the stubborn band from New York. However, as it is goals that count in hockey games, the visitors were returned victors.

Out of the heat and smoke of battle, there arose two outstanding heroes, both of them members of the winning team, Joe Miller and Frank Boucher. Miller, the goalie, who was called in to replace Lorne Chabot, regular Ranger netminder, who was seriously injured in the second game of the series, gave one of the greatest exhibitions of goal keeping ever seen on local ice, and it is doubtful if his performance has ever been beaten in the annals of organized hockey. From starting gong to finishing bell, the Maroons were almost continually on the attack. The Ranger defence was strong, but not strong enough to consistently turn back the swarming Maroon attackers. It was then that Miller rose to the heights to turn back the Montreal threat almost singlehandedly. Time after time the Maroons peppered him with shots from all angles and distances, but only once did they penetrate his marvellous blocking tactics, and that when the Rangers had a comfortable two goal lead in the last minutes of the final period.

Played Stellar Game.

Miller's performance was all the more remarkable when it is taken into consideration that he played practically the entire game with a pair of badly swollen eyes, the result of an accident early in the initial session, when he fell on a Maroon player's outstretched stick which caught him on the nose between the eyes.

While Miller looked after the defensive end of the game so well for the Rangers, Frankie Boucher, the clever little centre player, led what few offensive threats the Rangers did make, and scored two goals on clever individual efforts. He scored his first late in the first period when he broke through following a sustained Maroon attack. He snaked through Siebert and Dutton, the Maroon defence pair, and then cleverly fooled Benedict. It was an unexpected move on the part of Boucher, as the Rangers were short-handed at the time, and were hemmed in at their own end by a strong Maroon attack. His second goal was of a similar nature. The Maroons left only Munro on the defensive in front of Benedict and sent the rest of the team on the attack. It was late in the third period. Suddenly Boucher grabbed the puck at his own blue line, oustepped the pursuing opposition. Somehow or other, the puck slipped ahead of him out of his reach. Both he and Munro made a dash for the disc. The Montreal defenceman was just too late, and Boucher streaked in on the unguarded Benedict and once again the latter was out-guessed.

With only five minutes to go, and with the opposition leading by two goals, the Maroons did not give up hope. They immediately returned to the attack and once again were thumping shots off Miller's stick, pads and body with monotonous regularity. The pressure finally told and Phillips scored on a pass from Seibert. The Montreal team's efforts then became frantic and the last two minutes of the game produced some hectic hockey. It was heartbreaking for the Maroons and their supporter's but Miller turned back short after shot and the bell rang, thus sending the Stanley Cup to the United States.

An untoward incident occurred in the final period when the Rangers were leading 1 to 0. The Maroons were staging one of their most vicious assaults on the New York net. Russ Oatman, Maroon sub, finally got the disc into the net, but Referee Rodden ruled offside, and the count was disallowed. The crowd of 12,000, practically all Maroon supporters, were incensed by the official's ruling. They immediately went into action, and from all sections of the rink, bleachers, reserved seats and boxes, came a shower of missiles ranging from programs, pennies and hats, and finally a chair was tossed over the boards by a disgusted boxholder. He and many others who were caught throwing articles, were immediately ejected from the rink.

The teams:

Officials—Mike Rodden and Lou Marsh.

WINDSOR ALUMNI DEFEATS OTTAWA

Border City Takes Two Point Lead in Eastern Canada Semi-Finals.

OTTAWA, Ont., April 16.—(Canadian Press.)—Windsor Collegiate alumni defeated the Ottawa Basketball Club at the auditorium here Saturday evening by a score of 27 to 25 and thus take a two point lead into the second game of the Eastern Canada semi-final at Windsor next Saturday night. A record crowd for senior basketball in the city witnessed one of the greatest games ever seen in Ottawa.

A fast start and more accurate shooting won the game for the visitors. After Ottawas had broken through for two floor baskets, they faltered and Windsor jumped in to score fifteen points without a return. Ottawas got another free throw just as the first half ended, giving Windsor a 15 to 5 margin going into the second half.

In the second half Don Young, big centre-man of the Ottawa team, carried his team with him in a series of short passing attacks and with a few minutes to go they were leading 25 to 24. M Butcher clipped Young in the jaw and both were banished in the mix-up which occurred. After Young's departure his team went to pieces and Windsor went on to win.

Windsor showed more individual ability, more finish in their dribbling and pivot plays and more accurate shooting. On the other hand Ottawas showed up better in team play and were much faster than the visitors but failed to cash in on an percetnage of the easy shots which their floor play earned them. Edwards and Dawson were the stars of the winning team, with Don Young of the locals standing out as the finest player on the floor.

Stan Bowman of Windsor and Moe Appel of Ottawa, handled the game and their work was letter perfect. The score:

Windsor—W. Butcher, 9; Edwards, 8; Murray, 2; Dawson, 3; King, 3; Howell, 2; Kenny, 1; Butcher, Wood Dowd. Total 27.

Ottawa—Spear, 2; Farrell, 6; Don Young, 7; Dave Young, 6; Stanyar, 3; Langford, 1; Allan, Burke, McNee. Total 25.

VIEWS ON SPORT

All entries of City Softball League must be handed in to-night at meeting to be held in Chamber of Commerce rooms.

City Softball League meeting for the first time since his election to office a few weeks ago. Last year he was president of the Lock Works intershop league, and was also a strong supporter of the city league. This year the city league may not have as many teams, but there will be the same interest and enthusiam shown in the games. The entries are all expected to be in by to-night, and it is hoped that there will be a good turnout of team representatives.

• • • • •

The intershop leagues have done much to develop a greater interest in sport among industrial workers in the local plants the last few years. Probably the largest league of its kind in any branch of sport is the Canadian General Intershop softball league. About sixteen teams participate in the schedule and the games are played three nights a week on the works grounds. The De Laval, too, can boast of its own shop league, and the boys of the south end plant have attained quite a reputation by their lively interest shown in all branches of sport. The Lock Works, although a smaller plant, must not be overlooked either, for they have their own league. Last season there were only three teams participating, but there is good prospects of more this year.

The weather remains backward and it is to be hoped that the real "balmy" days that make ball players, tennis players and the rest will soon be here. This kind of weather makes the period of conditioning extend farther into the season than is good for the player and now that major league baseball is away, it seems as though the summer season should be here. Peterborough is entering upon one of her greatest years of sport. With the multiplicity of teams and leagues that will perform on every available space and lot this year, the fans will not lack plenty of opportunity to view their favorite sport. Softball will have a bigger season than ever with many teams in the leagues. Soccer will be boomed by both the C.G.E. and city league teams. Cricket has many new adherents. All we need now is propitious weather.—W.P. take notice.

GIANTS WIN THIRD VICTORY

Gotham Defeats Phillies 8 to 1 For First Time This Season.

ROBINS WIN 3-2.

NEW YORK April 16.—(Canadian Press).—The Giants scored their third successive victory here yesterday defeating the Phillies 8 to 1 for the first time this season. More than 40,000 persons ventured to the Polo Grounds in chilly weather.

Frank O'Doul, one time Yankee and lately a Pacific Coast Leaguer, led the Giants attack with a home run and two doubles. Jackson and Cohen also hit homers.

Hit hard by the Phils, Dutch Henry nevertheless kept safe drives scattered and never was in serious trouble.

Pittsburgh won at Cincinnati yesterday in a game marked by a pitchers' battle between Dawson and Luque for eight innings.

Frankie Frisch, after making his third home run of the season in the fifth inning of yesterday's St. Louis game with the Cubs, tripled with Holm on base in the seventh for the deciding run and St. Louis won, 4 to 3.

Chicago's big inning came in the second when Hartnett slammed out a home with two on bases. Pitcher Sherdel in addition to the full route for the Cardinals, drove out a circuit clout in the fifth.

Watson Clark shaded his fellow Southpaw, Dutch Brandt, Seattle recruit, at Brooklyn yesterday, and Brooklyn nosed out Boston 3 to 2, in the opening game of series. About 30,000 persons attended despite the cold, and several thousand more were turned away.

Brandt was found for seven hits while Clark held the Braves to six. Three Boston safeties were bunched in the sixth when the Braves tied the score.

Aconda's triple and Freigan's sacrifice fly gave the Robins the winning run in their own half of the sixth.

RANGERS WIN FINAL TUSSLE

Defeat Celtic 4 to 0 For Scottish Football Association Cup.

SCORE IN SECOND.

GLASGOW, Scotland, April 16 (Canadian Press Cable).—Rangers, in winning the Scottish Football Association Cup Saturday from Celtic, the holders, at Hampden Park, gave one of the finest displays of the dribbling game in the history of the competition. The score of four goals to nil by which the Rangers carried off the trophy, showed unmistakably their superiority. All the points were scored in the second half. In the first half Rangers had a nasty wind to face, and even with this disadvantage they easily held their own after a shaky start. With the wind at the back of Rangers, Celtic were made to look a very poor team. The record crowd of 118,000 people saw the match, and the best of feeling between the rival supporters of the two Glasgow teams was in evidence.

In the first half Celtic worried the Rangers' defence at the beginning, the wind doing strange things with the ball. Hamilton, the Rangers' goalie, however, was as steady as a rock and saved several shots brilliantly. This gave the Rangers increased confidence and they played through the scoreless first half without ever being in very great danger.

Directly Rangers got the wind behind them a change came over the match. Saving the goal from a shot by Fleming, W. McStay handled, and from the penalty kick Meiklejohn easily found the twine. The second goal came twelve minutes later following a corner, McPhail scoring. Two minutes afterwards Archibald scored a great counter, and the same player added a fourth tally just before the close. Rangers monopolized or easily controlled the play in the second half.

CANADIAN FOURTH IN BUNION DERBY

Reports of Granville Suffering From Injured Leg Proved Erroneous.

CHANDLER, Okla., April 16.—(Canadan Press.)—Philip Granville, Hamilton, Ont., walker, finished the 51.9 mile lap from Oklahoma City Saturday fourth in eight hours, 44 minutes and 29 seconds, making his elapsed time in the Los Angeles-to-New York marathon 219 hours 4 minutes and 19 seconds for 1,5443.4 miles. He is fuorth in elapsed time.

Reports of Granville suffering from an injured leg and withdrawing from the race proved erroneous. He says he is "feeling fine and going great."

John Cronick of Saskatoon, retained eighth place in elapsed time, with 303:09:14, his time for Saturday's lap being 11:30:32.

Other Canadians' standings Saturday:

A. Constantinoff, Toronot, 10:26:00—331:25:46.

George Libergall, Bellevue, Alta., 10:59:00—332:42:06.

S. Steveno, Calgary, 11:25:26—413:32:22.

Harold McNutt, Alberta, started late from Oklahoma City.

LEAGUE LEADERS TIE WITH ARSENAL

Huddersfield Town Leading English Soccer League By One Point.

LONDON, England April 16. — Canadian Press Cable. — The battle between Huddersfield Town and Everton for the leadership in the English first soccer division is on again. Huddersfield town saw their margin at the top of the averages whittled to one point on Saturday, when they could only get a draw in their match with Arsenal, while Everton scored an emphatic win against Sheffield United. Dean, the great international forward who plays for Everton, was the hero of match with Sheffield scoring two of the three goals his side secured.

There were 40,000 people at the match between Arsenal and Huddersfield, which was played at Highbury. In the first half Arsenal came near scoring on several occasions through Hoare and Hulme, but the Huddersfield goalie kept out their shots. After the interval Huddersfield were more lively and put strong er pressure on Arsenal at one stage. Brown, the Huddersfield centre forward, got the ball into the net but goal was disallowed as Brown was offside. The draw which resulted was a fair result. Doubtless. Huddersfield were not trying very hard as they were anxious to save their men for the cup final with Blackburn Rovers next Saturday.

Sheffield United were the first to score against Everton, the veteran Gillespie goaling. The United were still ahead at half time. Soon after the resumption Dean equalized from a free kick and in the 26th minute sent Everton in front. Martin added Everton's third goal.

Leicester City had an easy time with Birmingham, being two up at half time through goals by Barry and Chandler. Hine got Leicester's third goal on a pass from Adcock a minute from time.

Derby won from Bolton Wanderers by the one goal scored in blustery conditions. Whitehouse kicked a curly one into the net just before half time.

The strong wind favored both sides in the Burnley-Tottenham-Hotspur fixture and played a great part in the two goals each team scored. Osborne and Dimmock scored for Tottenham in the first half, and Page twice for Burnley after the turn-round.

West Ham and the Wednesday played in a bitter wind and the Sheffield team were able to pick up a couple of much needed points.

The Wednesday were behind at half time by one goal but after persistent attacks Allen came through twice and scored.

Portsmouth played impressively against Middlesbrough before the fine home town crowd of some 25,000 Smith and Weddell scored for the Southerners, and Bruce for Middlesbrough before half time. Smith registered Portsmouth's third on a terrific drive and another point came later for good measure.

Blackburn Rovers played carefully against Sunderland and tried hard to get a draw. However Halliday spoiled their chances by a neat counter in the second half.

There was plenty of scoring in the Bury-Manchester United affair with Bury doing more of it. The United's goalie Hardy, helped Bury to win by putting the ball through his own goal. Other scorers were, for Bury, Ball, Smith, Bullock; for Manchester United, Johnson, McLennan and Williams.

Aston Villa very soundly thrashed Cardiff City. The Welsh team was only once in the picture, and were lucky to get one goal.

In the second division 20,000 home fans rallied to the support of Leeds United and cheered heartily at their victory over Clapton Orient, which keeps them on top of the averages. Leeds first goal was headed in by Keatley just before half time. This player completed his hat trick in the second half. White also scored for Leeds.

Chelsea went down to a dismal defeat before the tailenders, South Shields. Weather conditions were positively wintry Grenyer scored for South Shields just before the interval. Chelsea threw every man but the goaler into the effort to score and Irving equalized from a corner. Matthewson put in the winner for South Shields 8 minutes from time.

Manchester City, also in the running for top honors in the second division, performed before 30,000 and easily defeated Bristol City. They had a lead at half time, Johnston registering on a penalty and Tait scoring soon afterwards Everton scored for Bristol; Marshall and Hicks tallied for Manchester after the interval and Keating for Bristol.

Preston North End fell out of the running for promotion when they were beaten by Southampton.

Ruth and Gehrig Slam Out Homers

BALTIMORE, (Md.), April 16.—(Canadian Press).—The home run twins, Ruth and Gehrig, gave Baltimore baseball fans, who jammed Oriole Park to-day, what they wanted by way of circuit drives when each of them together with Dickey, Yankee catcher, smashed out homers to win over the Baltimore Internationals by the score of 5 to 2.

TIGERS TAKE FIRST VICTORY

Cleveland Loses First Game of the Season By 8-2 Victory.

BILLINGS STARS IN GAME.

NEW YORK, April 16.—(Canadian Press).—Haskell "Josh" Billings held Cleveland to five scattered hits at Detroit Saturday while his mates were pounding out an 8 to 2 victory. It was Detroit's first victory of the season and Cleveland's first defeat.

Billings retired the last fourteen Indian batters to face him in order, besides driving out a double and single in three official turns at bat.

Charles Gehringer, Tiger second baseman, led the Detroit attack with a double and single which drove in four runs in addition to pilfering two bases.

The St. Louis Browns won their fourth straight victory at Chicago when Sam Gray held the White Sox to six scattered hits and defeated them 4 to 1.

Fred Schulte led the Browns' attack with the only extra base hits of the game, a double and two singles.

Timely hitting gave the home team a 6 to 5 decision over the Boston Red Sox at Washington, about 10,000 fans braving a cold day to see Marberry, former relief pitcher, turn in his second win in as many starts.

Boslin's home run in the third with two on bases, and his circus catch off Hofmann's bat in the second inning, while stretching high up on the left field wall, were features. Both Ruffing and Marberry were hit freely.

Braxton relieved Marberry in the ninth when Boston threatened to tie the score. He fanned Ken Williams for the final out.

Officials Re-elected In Hockey League

BOSTON, April 16 (Canadian Press).—Charles C. Clapp and Thomas J. Kanaly, of Boston, were re-elected president and secretary of the Canadian-American Hockey League at the annul meeting here Saturday. Representatives were present from each of the six clubs in the league. After the election of officers the league officials took up the matter of selecting referees for next season. Indications were that Hartford and Newark would have teams in the League next season, making it an eight-club organization.

Our Boarding House - - - - - - - - - By Ahern

Spring

Grandmother was a wonderful housekeeper in her day and generation. Every spring, up came the carpets; down came the pictures and heavy lambrequins; out went the furniture, and in came soap and water and scrubbing-brush. Soon the floors and woodwork gleamed like new; the carpets were replaced after a beating that sent every particle of dirt swirling away in a cloud of dust; the furniture was cleaned and returned to its accustomed place. Everyone was miserable, including grandmother—but it simply had to be done.

Women are better housekeepers than grandmother ever was or ever could be, for they have the modern conveniences to make them so. They have learned, through advertising, of the many utensils that make housework lighter and do it better. They have learned, through advertising, of better foods and how to prepare and serve them more attractively. They have bought, because of advertising, the many time and labor saving devices that we have come to regard as every-day necessities.

Because of advertising, women have more time for relaxation and the social amenities. They look younger. They are younger—by years—than grandmother at the same age. Advertising has made that possible.

JACK MINER AND THE BIRDS

AND SOME THINGS ABOUT NATURE

Do Birds Return to Their Same Homes?

"Do birds return to their same homes, year after year?" This is a question that has been put to me more than any one along the bird line, and it is usually followed by: "How do you know?" Then I have had to take father's advice, "drop it," and talk about the weather or some other side line. For while I was sure of this in my own mind, yet I had no proof.

On August 5th, 1909, a wild black duck lit with my ducks in the north pond. I started cozening around her, not by me going closer to her, but by letting her come closer to me. Finally she was eating out of the long-handled spoon that I had previously used for throwing little feed over to her. The spoon, of course, was on the ground, gradually being drawn towards me until it came over my left hand that was lying flat on the ground, and on September 10th of the same year this duck actually ate out of my hand. We named her Katie. In a few months Katie got so tame she would follow us in the barn where we went after the feed. So I scraped around in my hunting-case drawer and found a piece of sheet aluminum about three-quarters of an inch wide and one and a half inches long; I then took my sweetheart's best pair of scissors, and with the pointed blade I managed to scratch my post office address on it. Then I caught Katie and wrapped it around one of her legs. She disappeared on December 10th, and in January I received the following letter:

Anderson, South Carolina,
January 17th, 1920.

Box 48, Kingsville, Ontario.

Dear Sir,—On Friday evening, January the 14th, I was hunting on Rocky River, near this city. I killed a wild duck with a band on his leg, marked Box 48, Kingsville, Ontario. I suppose whoever sent him out wanted to hear from him, so I am writing to let you know where he came to his end. He was a very fine specimen. I must commend him for his judgment, for he came to the best County in the best State in America. If you will let me hear from you I will return the band I took from his leg. So hoping you will send me his pedigree I will close until I hear from you. Send me your address in full.

Very respectfully, W. E. Bray.

I at once wrote Mr. Bray and he kindly returned the tag. Mr. Bray made two distinct mistakes; one was when he called Katie "him" and another, equally as big, was when he stated that the duck came to the best spot in America, for the fact is that Essex County, Ontario, this duck's summer home, is the best spot on this beautiful earth; this, of course, will include all of North America.

In 1920 and 1911 I was so busy I didn't take the pleasure to tagging any more, but in the spring of 1912 I hatched four young mallard. No, I didn't hatch them; I stole the eggs from a black duck that had paired off with a gray, green-headed mallard drake and set them under a domestic fowl; a few days after they were hatched they accepted me as their step-father, and this old hen and I succeeded in raising four. I always fed them in one spot on the brick wall that surrounded the pond. The fish got so they came regularly for the bits that the ducks pushed overboard; as I would tap the tin to call the ducks, I also called the fishes. I was compelled to believe this, for before I would drop a bit of food, the fishes would be right there. They were what we call bull-heads, a little, miniature cat-fish, about six inches long. To see them with their whiskers up above the water all along the wall was quite interesting, especially when I would go to the opposite side of the pond from where I usually fed them, and tap the tin. This makes me think of the Irishman who was asked the question "Do fish sleep?" He replied, "I never caught any that way."

At any rate the little ducks got all they wanted to eat, for they grew like mushrooms. I took a day off for no other reason than to go to Detroit and buy sheet aluminum and a set of stencils, and when these four ducks had their growth, each was presented with a leg-band stamped with the following inscription: "Write box 48, Kingsville, Ontario."

Well, I looked to hear from the other three, all winter. But to my delight, on March 10th, 1913, Polly came home, and on the 18th, Delilah came; and although badly crippled in the wing and leg, Susan came squawking down out of the heavens on March 30th. I caught each one and examined their tags; and for the next three months I did all I could to induce people to ask me how I knew that birds returned to their same homes, for I had double proof: First, these ducks were mulattoes; they had a black duck's breast, and a grey duck's wings. But the climax was the tags that I put on their legs.

That summer, 1913, Polly and Delilah each raised a family, but Susan remained in the hospital nearly all summer. That fall they all three migrated again, and Noah Smith of Paris, Kentucky, shot Susan, February 27th, 1914.

On March 14th, Polly came home. On March 21st Delilah came; she was accompanied by a Yankee sweetheart and this spot seemed too good to be real for him. When Delilah would come to me, he would scour the heavens above, but finally he believed what she said and he, too, came to me for food.

That summer Delilah raised her family, but Polly came home May 20th without any, and both ducks migrated again that fall.

On March 13th, 1915, Delilah came home, and on the 16th Polly came, but Polly had had a narrow escape, as part of her beak was shot off. The sight was pitiful. With a fragment of her beak hanging down she could hardly eat, so I mixed up some corn-meal and put it in pills for her. Finally I reached out and grabbed the opportunity, then with the scissors in the other hand I clipped the dead fragment of her beak off, and in a few days she appeared to eat quite naturally.

My boy said Polly got her beak a little too far ahead. At any rate she appeared to think that was a close enough call for her, and the next winter she did not migrate, but stayed here with our domestic fowls, and she was shot by a wild goose hunter in April, 1916. But Delilah continued to migrate and returned for the sixth time on March 25th, 1918. That summer she raised a family of twelve, which, by the way, the largest family of mallards I have ever known to grow to maturity. The last I have any positive proof of seeing her was in September, 1918. During the six years she brought to my home five families, two eights, two nines, and a twelve. In 1917 she came home without a family.

Providing all of her descendants multiply as she did, how many ducks have you got in six years? Surely this is worth thinking over, and when we see that it runs up into the thousands we cannot help but be encouraged, and our confidence increased in His lovable truthful promise to us, His children; for He says "Let the mother go that it may be well with thee, and that thou mayest prolong thy days." Who could ask for a plainer fulfilment of His promises?

Now in case the reader might think that possibly I am mistaken in the ducks, and this was not the same bird, I will say that outside of other proofs of other proofs of her being the same duck (such as coming when we would call her, and now and then eating from our hands, her peculiar marking, and so forth), we caught her each year and examined the tag. In the spring of 1917, after she had returned the fifth time, Mrs. Miner and I caught her and gave her a new tag, as the old one was so badly worn.

Now before I go farther I want you to stop and think. Remember, these are just wild ducks that we are apt to think know so little. Yet the fact is, these birds have shied out around thousands of hunters who are hidden in the ambush with all kinds of decoys to assist them. Yet these ducks have outwitted them all, year after year. Then when they return they will almost eat from my hand the first day they arrive, when if they had allowed themselves to have ventured within two hundred feet of the hunters' decoys it would have been almost sure death to them. Can you blame me for enjoying nature study? Do you wonder that I have hung up the gun and am trying in my A, B, C fashion to tell you these unpolished facts? Yet I doubt if the best writers on earth could give you a taste of this grateful feeling in having your pets return to you year after year for food and protection; really it almost makes you feel you were personally present when He said, "How often would I have gathered thee as a hen doth gather her brood under her wings."

Another thing that interests me: These ducks always leave here in flocks, and return singly, except those that have doubled by bringing mates. I have never seen two with tags on return together. In 1914 I tagged twelve. One was shot at Gueydan, Louisiana and one at Cooksville, Tennessee. In the spring of 1915, day after day added to the number until on March 28th there were six sittings on the brick wall surrounding the pond with bright aluminum tags on their legs. In the fall of 1915 I tagged fifty-three, and in the spring of 1916 nearly half of them returned. In the fall of 1916 I caught and tagged fifty-four, and in catching these fifty-four I caught twenty-three that had been tagged previously.

Calder Mobbed By Rink Crowd

MONTREAL, Que., April 16.—(Canadian Press).—One of the highlights of the sullen display by the crowd following Saturday night's Stanley Cup game between Maroons and Rangers here, was an attempted attack upon President Frank Calder, of the National Hockey League, in the lobby of the Forum. The crowd had taken exception to Referee Mike Rodden's ruling in the third period by which he disallowed a goal by Oatman, Maroon sub, and many of the more rowdy element were hanging around the front lobby hoping to get a glimpse of the official and tell him what they thought of him. Rodden, unknown to the crowd, had left the rink by a back entrance. As they waited, President Calder attempted to force his way out to the front door. Someone recognized him, and immediately began to call that Calder was to blame as he had appointed Rodden as referee. The crowd then closed in, but quick work, by the red-caps, Forum employees, routed the mob and hustled the league president in the rink's business office.

Bomb Gang Uncovered.

MILAN, April 16 (Canadian Press).—The police intimated to-day that they had discovered the existence of a band of dynamiters whose program went much further than the bomb outrage at Milan Fair on Thursday.

W.M.S. GROUPS MEET TOGETHER

Trinity Ladies Hold Successful Gathering in Reid Street Hall.

On Tuesday April the 10th, the different groups of the Women's Missionary Society of Trinity church met in the Reid street hall for a get-together afternoon.

The place was like a busy hive of industry for a while, each group carrying on its particular line of work. A refreshment hour followed. About seventy members were present.

This is the second successful gathering of this kind this year.

THEATRES

AT THE REGENT.

IS GOLD-DIGGING CHORINE IN FILM.

Gwen Lee, screen player, who never was a chorus girl, could step right out on Broadway and give the professional chorines cards and spades and beat them at "gold digging."

Not that Gwen would do it; because she wouldn't!

Two years ago Miss Lee made her reputation as a chorus girl with a mind that never rose higher than a fur coat.

She's still at it!

In "Adam and Evil" Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's new farce comedy now playing at the Regent theatre Gwen has the role of a blonde chorine nourishing five years of grief and plans for revenge on the man who promised her a fur coat—and went to Brazil without getting it for her.

Naturally when she sees the man's twin brother in the lobby of a fashionable hotel where fur coats are on display her mind turns towards winter fashions. In trying to get the coat which she believes she has rightfully coming to her Gwen finds herself up against a series of circumstances which would baffle many a lipiomat.

The sudden appearance of the man's twin further complicates matters and it is up to Gwen to get the gentlemen alone one at a time, before she can make sure who is going to be the purchaser of the fur coat.

She does succeed in identifying the rascal but all she gets is a wedding ring and a honeymoon in the tropics where even an Esquimaux wouldn't look at a fur coat.

"Adam and Evil," directed by Robert Z. Leonard, is the initial co-starring vehicle of Lew Cody and Aileen Pringle, and is based on an original story from the pens of F. Hugh Herbert and Florence Ryerson, authors of "The Demi Bride," "On Ze Boulevard," "Smarty" and other film stories.

Cody plays the role of the twin brothers while Miss Pringle is seen as the young wife. The cast includes Roy D'Arcy, Gertrude Short, Hedda Hopepr and others.

A pessimist is a man who expects to find microbes in kisses.

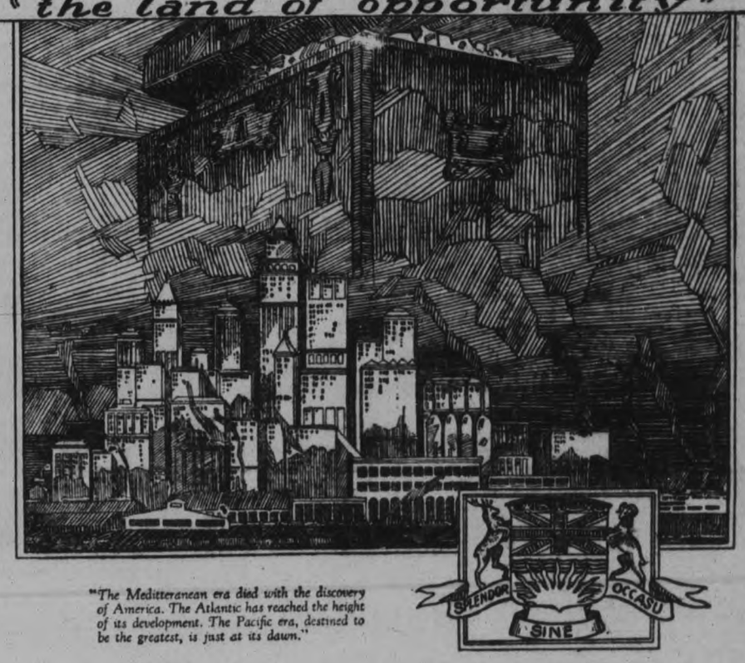
BRITISH COLUMBIA
"the land of opportunity"



"The Mediterranean era died with the discovery of America. The Atlantic has reached the height of its development. The Pacific era, destined to be the greatest, is just at its dawn."

The Treasure Chest

NATURE has endowed British Columbia with resources, amazing in their diversity and abundance. Canada's Pacific Province bids fair to be her most prosperous. With the comparatively small population of 617,000 people, it is already the source of millions in revenue. The whole United Kingdom could be three times placed within its boundaries, and its productive area is estimated to be greater than the states of Washington, Oregon, and California, combined . . . a vast domain capable of sustaining twenty million people in prosperity! Here is a brief resume of revenue and potential wealth:

Great Timber Resources

In British Columbia, climate, soil and drainage conditions have combined to create the greatest soft wood forests in the world . . . one-fifth of the British Empire's supply . . . from which the cut in 1927 yielded 84 million dollars.

Agricultural Prosperity

Of approximately 22 million acres of possible farm lands, only three million acres are at present occupied, and yield an average of $23.67 per acre, as compared with $12.13 per acre for all Canada. Total revenue derived from agriculture is 73 million dollars a year.

Earth's Treasure

In 1927 mineral wealth produced within reach of present transportation belts, yielded British Columbia 62 million dollars. Mining engineers state that unbelievable mineral wealth lies hidden in undeveloped territories of this province.

Leading Fisheries

As the oldest industry in the Dominion, fishing has been a great revenue producer, and it is significant that Canada's Pacific province in less than 20 years should secure a leading position in the world market, with export to seventy countries, and an annual revenue of 27 million dollars.

Hydro-Electric Power

While it ranks only sixth in population, British Columbia ranks first in electric development, per capita, in Canada. Water-powers available at six months ordinary flow, are estimated to be more than five million horse-power, and many more millions are awaiting survey.

Industrial Position

Industrial production has in the last ten years increased 101.3 per cent. Still greater increases are promised with the world's realization that within the confines of this one province lie all the basic factors . . . in raw materials, power, transportation and climate . . . that ensure maximum production . . . while the great markets of the Far East with their teeming millions, and the prairie provinces are rapidly developing.

Come to the West!

The march of progress has always been to the westward. Today, the Pacific era is at its dawn, and the vast treasure chest of British Columbia is ready to spill its wealth into the lap of the world. Follow the pathway of progress! Come West this summer, and see the Land of Opportunity, while you enjoy . . .

The Vacation of a Lifetime

British Columbia has long been known as "The Evergreen Playground of Canada" . . . abounding in wondrous scenery, and delightful recreations. Here, amid towering snow-capped mountains and glorious forest parks, through sun-kissed valleys or close beside the sparkling sea, vacationists revel in hunting and fishing, mountain-climbing, motoring and golf, and the Pacific calls with silvery beaches, and pleasure boats plying hundreds of alluring trips. What CAN a Man Believe?

By BRUCE BARTON

XXV—Confucius

THE real name of Confucius was his family name, Kung. He was called Kung the Master, Kung Fu Tze. That combination of syllables was too difficult for European tongues, and so it was Latinized into the form with which we are familiar. The great teacher was born in Shantung in 551 B. C., and died there in 478, and his grave is one of the sacred shrines of China.

What we know about him is contained in twenty small books called the Analects, recording conversations with his disciples, and certain other descriptive and biographical matter. There is some material also in another book, Doctrine of the Mean.

His father, Shuh-liang Heih, a military officer, was seventy years old at the time of his birth and had ten children, but Confucius, the youngest, was the only able-bodied son. His birth, as embellished by later admirers, was accompanied by divine portents. Genii announced to Yen Ching-tsai, his mother, the approaching hour of her deliverance, and fairies attended the cradle.

He appears to have been reared in poverty and to have been self-educated. We are told that he played at the arrangement of vessels and at postures of ceremony, which would seem to show an innate love of ritual. He was an earnest student of history.

Married and Divorced

At the age of fifteen he "bent his mind to learning," and at nineteen he was married. The marriage appears not to have been a happy one. There is a tradition that he divorced his wife; we know for certain that he reproved his son in later years for mourning her death.

The relations between Confucius and this only son were not intimate. When the boy became one of his father's students his fellow disciples were eager to know whether he was learning more than the rest of them.

"Have you heard any lessons from your father in addition to those he has taught us?", one of them asked.

"No," replied the boy. "He was standing alone when I passed with hasty steps through the court below, and he asked me: 'Have you read the Odes?' On my replying, 'Not yet,' he said to me: 'If you do not learn the Odes you will not be fit to converse with.' Another day in the same place and the same way he asked me: 'Have you read the Rules of Propriety?' On my replying, 'Not yet,' he said: 'If you do not read the Rules of Propriety your character can not be established.'"

Learned Three Things

The enthusiastic fellow pupil exclaimed: "I asked one thing and you have told me three. I now know about the Odes, and I have learned about the Rules of Propriety, and I have learned that the Superior Man maintains a distant reserve towards his son."

We are not informed concerning the reason for this reserve, and it is difficult to reconcile with Confucius' own theory of parental behavior. For he held that if a son did not honor his father the father was probably as much to blame for it as the son.

At one time when he was in an official position under Duke Ting of Loo, a father brought a charge of unfilial conduct against his own boy. Confucius caused them both to be imprisoned for three months. He was about to release them when he was asked why he did not put the son to death instead, and he replied: "The father who does not teach his son his duties is equally guilty with the son who neglects them."

Same for Government

He held a similar theory with regard to the State. Human nature, he said, was inherently good. If the State did not produce good citizens, it reaped the harvest of its own bad sowing. "Let the government be good and the people will be good."

The native state of Confucius, Loo by name, was in North China, on the Yellow River, and is included in the present province of Shantung. There he grew to manhood and mainly spent his life. About the time of his marriage he obtained a small government post, first as keeper of stores of grain and later as guardian of the public fields and lands. But he did not hold these positions long. At the age of twenty-two he was released from official responsibility and became a teacher.

Fish or Fee

He received all pupils who came to him, no matter how small the tuition price which they were able to bring. He who came with "a bundle of dried fish," the cheapest of all national products, was welcomed as heartily as the student who brought an adequate fee. But he had little patience with those who were not in earnest.

"I do not open the truth to one who is not eager for knowledge. Nor do I help one who is not anxious to explain himself. When I have presented one corner of a subject, and the listener can not from that unfold the other three, I do not repeat my lesson."

He taught a well rounded curriculum, his three principal subjects being history, poetry and literature. After these came four others, proprieties, government, natural science and music. He had pride in those pupils who displayed virtuous, oratorical, administrative or literary abilities, but he avoided feats of strength, prodigies, disorder, and the supernatural.

Lumbago Has Not Bothered Him Since

So Writes Appreciative Wife of Ontario Sufferer

"My husband suffered for several years with Lumbago," writes Mrs. Robert H. Davey, George St., Brampton, Ont. "He tried everything without success. Reading about Dodd's Kidney Pills he decided he would try them. Lumbago has not troubled him since." People all over Canada have tried Dodd's Kidney Pills and found them excellent. They have been used by thousands of people who have suffered from various forms of Kidney Trouble, such as Rheumatism, Dropsy, Sore Back and Weakness. If you wish to keep young to a good old age—Dodd's Kidney Pills will most undoubtedly help you. Don't delay.

THE BIBLE CONTROVERSY

(J. H. BURNHAM)

The controversy between modernists and fundamentalists instead of abating is now at its height. It has got from the religious papers into all the secular magazines, newspapers and circulating libraries. There is no sign of agreement or conciliation either. The war can end only in the passing of evangelical christianity (including Protestantism) into the limbo of forgotten things or to the re-establishment of faith as more of vital and intimate belief than ever.

As time advances it becomes clearer that the extremists on both sides fail to represent the reasonable and proper doctrine as accepted by the laity—that is the plain unvarnished tale of God and men as received by the great body of the laity and believed in by them.

What are these three different positions? They are:

1. The extreme fundamentalist view that the Bible from cover to cover contains what God said, and only what He said. That all the ideas there expressed are His and that nowhere have men expressed ideas of their own.

2. The modernist maintains that there is so much in the Bible that is nonsense and incredible that the fundamentalist theory of an inspired Bible must be given up and with it the idea of a God-inspired message to mankind as contained in the Bible. It is impossible to maintain they hold that a book full of errors and follies is a true record of God's ideas and authentic.

3. The third theory of the Bible is that God directed men to put down their own thoughts, hopes and ideas from time to time. It is also that He likewise directed them to put down in the sacred record His teachings and promises. This theory is exactly like the case of a great novel where the writer makes his characters speak as such people would speak not as he himself would speak and wherewith a great moral purpose, he so manages it that a great moral lesson is taught his readers. If to this could be added the promise of eternal life the similarity would be complete. To attack the author for the errors of his characters is evidently absurd. So it is with the modernist and the Bible. To attack God and the Bible because He has caused men, as human and fallible beings, to speak their own words is to miss the purpose of the message altogether. This is the mistake made, however, by both modernists and fundamentalists. God made man a free agent and left him to his own devices, giving him knowledge of the better way and leaving him free to go that way or not. No one denies that fact.

A great Biblical record, the greatest of all records, contains also for the benefit of humanity the account of man under these circumstances then and now, and for that matter for always and also the remedies furnished to him by God. This theory is the one which will triumph in the end as it is plainly correct. Meanwhile the modernist is making a fierce attack on all authority but his own, and the fundamentalist is going to the opposite extreme.

Out of this epoch-making strife a new order will emerge. Meanwhile it is the laity that is keeping the faith.

However the retreat of modernism has been sounded. Sir Robert Falconer, one of its greatest leaders, has seen the hopelessness of trying to identify material things with things of the spirit, of faith with the works of nature, of science and religion. He announced at the great world conference of religion at Pihaeldiphia recently, that the things of this world and of the spiritual world must no longer be confused the one with the other. We may now hope that the writer of scepticism has collapsed and that modernish will die with it.

It requires no especial conviction of sin or pretence of sanctity to see that without spiritual aspirations separate from and beyond his earthly grossness the future of man can be but little better than that of an animal. To reduce the poetry in man to the level of his needs (the social evangel) is to put him at the mercy of big business or the stupidity and treachery of democracy. To step from the pulpit of a simple and a very humble faith and then return to it overnight, a conqueror, a modernistic, and dictator is surely a lightning change that ought to have aroused the suspicions of even the most vacuous. When men have their faith of any kind torn from them and are compelled to turn from God to man from an eternal hope to the petty insolence of the self-sufficient, time quickly proves that it cannot last.

Dog Not Entitled To a Single Bite

TORONTO, April 14.—(Canadian Press).—Justice J. F. Orde, of the Second Appellate Division of the Supreme Court of Ontario, in an appeal at Osgoode Hall recently upset the popular idea that a dog cannot be proved vicious until it has bitten a person or persons twice. "Whatever may have been the origin of the popular idea that a dog is entitled to one bite", said Justice Orde, "there is no foundation in modern times for the theory that to make its owner liable the dog must have been guilty to his knowledge of at least one previous act of precisely the same character as that charged. Knowledge of a propensity or disposition to do things which may naturally result in injury to other people is enough to fasten liability on the owner." His Lordship held that in this case there was ample evidence of such knowledge.

In the case in question, the owner of a collie dog, F. W. G. Fitzgerald, appealed against a judgment given in a lower court in favor of Mrs. Dorothy Norton, a nurse, for $300 damages, she having been attacked by the dog and fallen and broken her leg. She was not bitten by the dog, however. The appeal was dismissed with costs.

KINDERGARTEN CLASSES.

Pupils of five years of age and over are regularly admitted into the Kindergarten classes at the beginning of the school year in September. This is the regular time of admission and all of legal age are then admitted. Parents should aim to start their children at this time so that they may enjoy the whole year's work.

Where room is available, Kindergarten pupils are also admitted in January and at Easter, but the number admitted at these dates depends upon the size of the classes.

Some of the Kindergarten forms have room for a limited number of additional pupils and these are now being admitted, preference being given to the older applicants. All will be provided for in September.

OBITUARY

At 11.30 on Saturday morning, April 14, there passed away in this city after an illness of five months, George Joseph Hickford, aged fifty-three years. He was born in Bankshot, England, but for the last sixteen years had lived in Peterborough. For some time past he has been employed at the C.G.E., and was well known to the congregation of Knox United Church, which he attended.

He leaves to mourn besides his sorrowing wife, five daughters and two sons, namely, Mrs. Roberts, 265 Lake street, Peterborough; Misses Agnes, Winnie, Hilda, and Veronica of Toronto; Anthony of Crystal City, Mass., and Harold of Toronto, as well as other relatives in England.

The funeral will take place at 10 o'clock from Belleghem's funeral home; the service at 10 o'clock being conducted by the Rev. William McDonald, of Knox United Church. Interment will be in Little Lake Cemetery.

THOMAS TURNER

Thomas Turner, an employee of J. J. Turner and Sons during the past twenty-one years, passed away on Saturday evening, after a short illness Deceased was as usual until Wednesday last, when he was seized with dizzy spells and took to his bed, passing away on Saturday.

The late Thomas Turner was a sailmaker of the old school, serving a long apprenticeship ,which resulted in his becoming a first-class artisan at his particular trade. He married rather late in life and leaves, beside his sister Mrs. Drummond, formerly of this city and now of Toronto, his wife Amy and son Harold of Ramsgate, Tngland, to mourn his loss. Deceased was the brother of the late J. J. Turner and the last male member of his family.

The funeral was held at 3.00 o'clock this afternoon, Monday, from the residence of his nephew, ex-Mayor Turner, 515 Water street, the bearers being his former associates and fellow workmen, John Dallin, John Hobson, Robert Gavine, Robert Hendry, James Ball, and George Wells.

Interment took place in Little Lake Cemetery.

The officiating clergyman was the Rev. G. J. Bousfield, rector of St. Luke's Church.

IN POLICE COURT

Magistrate Langley found Lloyd Redmond guilty this morning of operating a Border Transit bus while intoxicated, and sentenced him to one week in the common jail. J. Wearing, counsel for the accused, asked that the sentence be made as light as possible, for it was the first time the man had ever been up in Police Court, and he would lose his job. Chief Newhall did not press for anything more than the minimum sentence.

His Worship, in delivering judgment, said: "I have considered the evidence very thoroughly, and I have found that I could come to no other conclusion but that the man was intoxicated while driving the bus. A great many witnesses said he did not appear to be intoxicated earlier in the evening, and one man as late as 6.40 said he did not see any signs of intoxication, but the evidence of the police on the other hand was that he was intoxicated at 7.15.

"It is an awful thing to be guilty of operating a public vehicle while intoxicated, and how a man could so far forget himself and do such a thing I cannot see. I think in this case the lowest term will be justified, as the man will probably have his driving permit cancelled."

A local man pleaded guilty of being intoxicated in a public place on Saturday night and was fined $15.00, and costs, or 10 days in the common jail. He took the jail term, as he said he had no money.

CHARLEMAGNE'S TOWER FALLS

The tower of Charlesmagne at Tours built in the year 800 and since that time a revered landmark and shrine for tourists, collapsed without warning about two weeks ago. No one was injured.

Charles the Great, otherwise known as Charlesmange, and after whom the tower was named, was king of France from 742 to 814 A. D. and also emperor of Rome.

HOWSON MOTORS AGENCY IS OPENED

W. S. Howson and T. H. Shields Will Handle Three G. M. Models.

A new firm, Howson Motors, handling a new agency, Oldsmobile, LaSalle and Cadillac, in newly appointed and entirely renovated quarters, is to come into being with its official opening to the public on June 1. Business is now being carried on from temporary quarters on Hunter Street, near Water.

With a ten-year record in motor car dealing behind him, W. S. Howson, former Chevrolet dealer, has decided to postpone retirement and has gone back into the car business with Thomas H. Shields as his partner, his "wares" to consist of the above-named products of General Motors. The present quarters are in the old Sarginson garage, Hunter Street, where Oldsmobile cars, six different models, and a La Salle are already to be seen, while A. S. Porter, factory representative, and A. E. Parsons, technical expert, are spending a week in the city, assisting the newly appointed agents in preparing for their summer business.

The showrooms and service garage of Howson Motors will be at 388 Water Street, the present garage of Hughes and Lillico, which will be completely re-appointed. There will be seen various models of the three makes of cars, and Messrs. Howson and Shields, both well-known locally, are certain to receive many callers on their first day of open house.

The car on display is the new Oldsmobile that has created a sensation at the motor shows throughout Canada. It is new, not only in form, but in every phase of comfort and satisfaction, presenting a new standard in automobile values; in short, it is a General Motors achievement, the result of three years of earnest, constant labor put into its design and construction, proven by 117,700 miles of testing on the highways and General Motors proving ground.

A unique individual test was made on one new Oldsmobile car taken from the assembly line at the the factory to the proving ground. This car was subjected to a practically nonstop run for 50,000 miles after which the carbon was removed. It was then given a hundred-mile run, being driven at its maximum speed on the speed track at the proving ground, when it attained an average speed over the hundred miles of 67.6 miles per hour.

On the 114in. wheelbase, rubber-silenced chassis is mounted a Fisher body, establishing a new vogue of ultra-modern design, with attractive two-tone colors in Duco. The interior appointments are very attractive. Upholstering is in an excellent quality mohair, and one is surprised at the roominess and the abundance of leg room.

The 55 horse-power six-cylinder motor is rubber-mounted, insulating it from frame and body. This type of construction ensures vibrationless performance at all speeds, even up to its maximum speed of 70 plus miles per hour. An exceptionally efficient system of four-wheel brakes is employed. This combined with the Jacox steering system ensures the greatest factor of safety obtainable.

Standard equipment includes built-in radiator shutter, heat indicator, bumpers front and rear, spare tire, tube and tire cover, with a complete set of Love-Joy hydraulic shock absorbers.

The great demand for Cadillac and its companion car, La Salle, has made it possible only to have for show and demonstration a La Salle five-passenger sedan, which is built by Cadillac.

LOCAL MEN FACE PERJURY CHARGE

James Akey and Milton Barnard Committed For Trial at Port Hope.

PORT HOPE, April 16.—James Akey and Milton Barnard of Peterboro were committed for trial at Port Hope on Thursday by Magistrate W. A. F. Campbell on a charge of perjury. Bail was fixed at $1,000.00 for each.

Akey appeared in police court here on March the 26th on a charge of being intoxicated while in charge of a car. Akey was called at that time as witness on his own behalf, and on Thursday he was charged with committing wilful and corrupt perjury. In his former evidence Akey stated, "I did not drive the car from Lowe's garage," whereas it is charged that in truth and in fact he did drive it from the garage.

Milton Barnard was also charged with a similar offence arising from the same occasion, in which Barnard's former evidence was as follows: "I also drove away from the garage and out to Dale," whereas it is charged that in truth and in fact the said Akey did drive from the garage.

Chief of Police Murphy gave evidence to the effect that in response to a phone call he had requested Allen Meadows and Sherman Gifford to accompany him to Dale. There he had found Akey behind the wheel of his car. A lady friend sat beside him and Barnard was reclining in the back seat. Chief Murphy asked Barnard if he could drive and the defendant told him that he could not.

The garage of J. C. Lowe, Ontario Street, was the first place that Sherman Gifford had seen Akey and Barnard, when they drove in there for repairs. Gifford stated that the engine of their car was very noisy, and that when he went to look at it epithets were hurled at him which he did not care to repeat. Gifford stated positively that when they left the garage Akey was driving the car and Barnard was in the back seat.

Allen Meadows, who was in the garage at the time, also stated that Akey was driving the car when they left the garage and that when he saw them at Dale, Akey was behind the wheel. Meadows pointed out that during their visit to the garage some suggestion was made as to why Barnard did not drive the car, and he replied that Akey would not let him.

Magistrate Campbell committed the men for trial at the next court of the General Sessions of the Peace, and admitted them to bail of $1,000 each, being two sureties of $500.00 in each case. The bondsmen are Messrs. Itheel Walters and Louis Bennett.

TWO ARTISTES IN RECITAL

Toronto and Peterborough Girls To Appear in Well Arranged Program.

Miss Kathleen Baker, elocutionist, and Miss Geraldine M. Collins, mezzo soprano, two talented young lady artists, will be heard in recital at Conservatory of Music Hall on Tuesday, April 17.

Miss Baker is a pupil of the Gladys Shibley - Mitchell Studio, Toronto, and is a young lady of great ability, her numbers always being enthusiastically received, and her recitals well attended. It is her first appearance in Peterborough, and will provide a treat to all who hear her.

Peterborough music lovers are acquainted with Miss Collins, who has attained her A.T.C.M. (Vocal) as a pupil of Dorothy Allan Park. Her appearances in recital work will be remembered favorably, and no doubt a large number of friends will listen to her in this, her first post-graduate recital. Miss Agnes Logan, Peterborough's premier pianist, will play Miss Collins' accompaniments.

This is the pattern diagram that comes each week with the Mary Marshall fashion service.

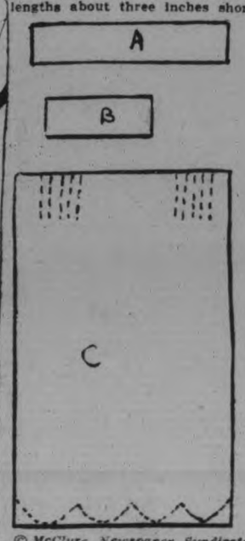
HERE'S YOUR TROUSSEAU NIGHTGOWN

THIS week it's a nightgown.

The original of our pattern was imported from France, and was one of the daintiest things imagineable. It was made of pale blue crepe de chine, with creamy lace, and little hand run tucks. The bottom was cut in big scallops, each bound with a bias fold of the crepe.

You can make something just as pretty. If you want to, you can use crepe de chine and expensive lace. But if you don't want to spend so much on it, you can use less expensive materials. You can make an extremely pretty as well as serviceable gown of figured cotton crepe, making double bands of the cotton crepe instead of the lace. Really such gowns, neatly made, would be dainty enough for any bride's trousseau—and would be quite inexpensive.

You see, you take two perfectly straight lengths of material, as long as you want your nightgown. If you are making a hem, allow for that on the lower edge. If you are scalloping the bottom, make no hem allowance. And make the lengths about three inches shorter than the finished gown should be at the front, to allow for the bands. These lengths of material are represented by C in the diagram. They will vary, according to your height and the length you like your gowns. The proportions in the diagram allow for a strip forty-four inches long and twenty-seven inches wide. That means a finished nightgown about a yard and a half around.



French seam the sides of the nightgown together to within about eight inches of the top. If you are using lace, run a fine little hem along each seam edge to the top.

Gather the top of the gown, back and front or else lay it in four narrow tucks, each side, front and back, as indicated in the sketch and by the broken lines in diagram C. If you are using lace, hem the top edge, front and back, in a narrow, flat hem. Now cut four strips of lace, two about twenty-four inches long, for the sleeves, and two about twelve inches long, for the front and back. It may be better to make the strip for the back shorter than that for the front.

Fasten the sleeve strips together in a French fell, neatly and very firmly, and then fasten these sleeve strips in the gown, with the seam toward the bottom. Whip the lace along the open seam edges firmly and neatly. Then fasten the two top pieces of lace, one at the back, the other at the front. If the back is shorter than the front, then you must gather the back in a little more, or make more tucks. Sew the ends of the top pieces, turned under in narrow hems, to the sleeve pieces—and the gown is finished.

Unless you want a scalloped bottom. In that case, mark out the scallops, using a cup or a plate. And then buttonhole them, or bind them with a bias binding, or else mark them with a thread and have a machine picot edge.

If you use bands of material instead of lace, make the bands twice as wide as you want them when finished. Seam them to the right side, and hem them down on the wrong side. You can make white gowns with bands of colored lawn for a very pretty effect.

PLANE LEFT COURSE IN BLIZZARD WHEN LIGHTING SYSTEM FAILED DURING NIGHT, SAYS HUENEFELD

FLIERS LEAVE ISLAND.

Cannot Repair Plane There—Montcalm Will Carry the Machine To Halifax.

QUEBEC, April 17 (Canadian Press).—Further details of the flight of the German monoplane over the Atlantic have been gathered and sent forward by wireless operators from Greenly Island to Clarke City and relayed by telegraph here.

Baron von Huenefeld says that the Bremen did very well on Thursday, the day of the start from Ireland. As night came a blizzard developed. To add to the terrors of their position in mid-Atlantic the lighting on the monoplane failed. For hours the aviators could only guess at their position. As a consequence the plane got off its correct line and flew in a northerly direction instead of south-west. The plane lost altitude in the blizzard and came down very low. Four hundred miles, it is estimated by the Baron, were flown in darkness. At daybreak it was possible to correct the plane's direction. The weather became worse and worse every hour, and it was only with the greatest difficulty that the monoplane could be kept up. Flying dangerously low the Bremen finally reached the Newfoundland coast and Greenly Island lighthouse was picked up, and the landing made.

Nurse Interviews Baron

ST. John, N.B., April 17 (Canadian Press).—New matters in connection with the notable flight of the Bremen across the Atlantic are disclosed in an interview with Baron Huenefeld, leader of the intrepid party, received by The Evening Times-Globe, and Telegraph-Journal to-day by wireless from Red Head Station and relayed thence by telephone. It came from Miss Greta Ferris of St. John, nurse on Labrador Medical Mission of Dr. Grenfell.

The Message

Miss Ferris' message as it came by wireless was as follows:

"Bremen 36 hours Dublin to Greenly Island. Fog most of the way. Arrived at noon Friday, April 13. Mistook the lighthouse for a steamer frozen in the ice. Lost bearings and compass inaccurate. The plane broke through the fog. Injured axle, bent propeller, still in the same position. Plane hoisted on gasoline tank and boards.

"Baron cold and exhausted, feared that they would never reach land. Ready to shoot companions if worst came to worst. Baron came at once to lighthouse, where given dry footwear. Refused to eat until his companions left plane first.

"First meal was biscuits and fresh milk. Baron feels cold and anxious to reach New York. He knows New York. Fitzmaurice says Labrador is not Ireland, is warmer there. Koehl does not complain. All very modest. Most thankful to have accomplished feat.

"First words of all on arrival, in different languages, were 'Thank God. Spent first night at lighthouse with keeper and family. Still there. Koehl celebrated his 30th birthday on April 15.

"Grenfell workers drove fifteen miles with nine Eskimo dogs to extend mission hospitalities to heroes. Work too pressing and distance too great by dog team for fliers to accept.

"Plane GCAIP from Murray Bay, Canada, arrived Sunday at four p.m., to give relief. GCAIP returning to Murray Bay to get new undercarriage and other equipment for damaged plane. Photographed plane and Fitzmaurice with Eskimo dogs.

"S.S. Montcalm within hundred miles of disabled plane, coming to assistance. Much ice in strait. Four men crossed ice from Flowers Cove Sunday to get information and to see plane. Specially privileged here and allowed to examine plane without interference. No guard.

"Autographs obtained from heroes. First Canadian autographs. Baron kissed our hands when bidding adieu. Koehl carries aeroplane mascots sent him from Berlin with black pig given before leaving Dublin attached.

"(Signed) Greta Ferris."

MONTREAL, April 17 (Canadian Press).—The German trans-Atlantic fliers to-day decided that repairs could not be made to the Bremen on Greenly Island, according to advices from wireless operators who have been in touch with Greenly, and it is understood that the two German fliers will fly to Murray Bay, and there board the Junkers plane sent from New York, which is now in Montreal and fly with Major Fitzmaurice to the United States city. The Bremen will be taken to Halifax by the steamer Montcalm.

Through the courtesy of the Marconi superintendent another small chapter has been added to the epic story gradually being pieced to-

Lady Brightens Council Session

The presence of a lady inside the bar brightened the City Council Chamber last night. Miss Florence Johnston, of the City Clerk's office, was seated at City Clerk Armstrong's desk in pursuance of a recommendation made by Ald. Stocker that one of the stenographers should attend to take the routine matter of writing the minutes off Mr. Armstrong's shoulders. It was agreed at the last meeting that this should be given a trial and Miss Johnston's presence last night was the trial. Whether the practice will continue h s not been decided.

NATIVE SONS HOPE TO HAVE BRANCH HERE

Organization Is Progressing, Says Dr. J. H. Cotton, of Toronto, Vice-President.

NOT SEPARATISTS.

Policy of Society is to Make Conditions in Canada Best Possible, He Says.

TORONTO, April 17 (Special to The Examiner). — Satisfactory progress is being made towards the establishment of a branch of the Native Sons of Canada in Peterborough, declares Dr. James H. Cotton, Toronto, first vice-president of the organization, "and the Toronto branches have received assurances that the new society will be welcomed in Peterborough.

"Had the organization a number of paid organizers, Peterborough would probably have had a branch by this time," said Dr. Cotton, "but the idea of having a number of salaried officials has never found favor with us, and we do not desire to make the organization one for the provision of jobs. We prefer that new branches should spring up spontaneously, so to speak, through the efforts of those who know the work we are doing elsewhere, and wish to bring it to their neighborhood. We hope to have the Peterborough branch established within a few weeks."

Discussing the restriction of membership to persons over 18 years of age who are either born in Canada or of Canadian-born parents or who have resided in the Dominion prior to the age of six years.

Dr. Cotton said that it was only on the basis of birthplace that the Canadian races and religious factions can be united for the good of Canada. Particularly was this the case with the French-Canadians of Quebec, who could not be induced to cooperate in such a movement without the qualification of birth being embodied in the constitution.

"The Canadian-born constitute the majority of the population, therefore they and they alone are responsible for any bad conditions that occur in Canada, and on them primarily falls the duty of securing reform. Further," he continued, "a Canadian-born organization is the only body that can prevent discrimination against the Canadian-born.

"It is well to note here that we do not desire discrimination against any person of the proper type at present residing in the Dominion. The organization wants to see new immigrants brought to our shores, but it desires a sane immigration policy and the formation of regulations which will produce a real Canadian citizenship. We have immigration laws at present," said Dr. Cotton, "but they are feebly administered and are systematically evaded. We stand for a proper law and for its proper carrying out by those to whom the duty is entrusted.

"We are determined that so far as we are concerned we are not going to allow this country to be made the dumping ground for Europe. We are for Canada first as an organization. That is we do not allow ourselves to be labelled as separatists, annexationists nor yet imperialists, but rather we insure that our every act is for the bettering of Canadian conditions.

"We are a democratic body and our policies are formed according to the rule of the majority, with the express desire to formulate the will of the Canadian-born people. We want to foster a love and a pride of country. We want to create the spirit

TWO PATIENTS IN QUARANTINE

Isolation Hospital Has Had Few Sicks Since March 1.

COMPLAINT RECEIVED.

The Board of Health met in the committee room of the City Hall this morning, there being a fairly large grist of business to be attended to. In the absence of Ald. Ackerman, J. J. Turner was appointed chairman pro tem.

The report of the Queen Mary Isolation Hospital was one of the first items brought to the attention of the meeting, carrying the information that there were only two patients in the hospital from March 1—one with smallpox, the other of scarlet fever, neither of them resulting in death.

Dr. N. H. Sutton, District Officer of Health, had been in communication with the Board asking that the city M.O.H. accompany him on certain inspections of milk in the surrounding district.

He had also written regarding a complaint about a slaughter house owned by a local man, and asking whether or not inspections of such slaughter houses had been made. The secretary of the Board was instructed to acknowledge the communications, informing the D.O.H. that inspections had been made and the slaughter house in question had been satisfactory. As the complaint as stated by him was that there was a nuisance there, it was decided that the matter should be one for the health authorities of North Monaghan.

There was also some discussion of certain places of residence which were not satisfactory, and the owners were ordered to install the proper conveniences after the necessary connections with the sewer system had been made.

J. Reynard and Wife Face Charges of Attempted Murder and Suicide.

CROWN ASKS REMAND.

Charged with attempted murder J. Reynard of Bobcaygeon, appeared before Magistrate O. A. Langley this morning, while in the same court his wife faced a charge of unlawfully attempting suicide.These cases which have attracted widespread interest, were not proceeded with, however, as G. W. Hatton, K.C., acting for the Crown asked that they be held over for mental examination. Accordingly, His Worship announced that he would hear them on Friday morning, April 20, at 10 a.m.

In the case of Mrs. Reynard, J. A. O'Brien, her counsel, had entered a plea of not guilty. He reserved election as to the mode of trial.

Kiwanis Jollies Assemble at K. of C. Rooms For Practice.

Last night at the Knights of Columbus home the cast of the Kiwanis Jollies of 1928, a combination minstrel and revue, was assembled for the first time to work together. Up to last night the many different groups were rehearsed separately, and last evening the members of the cast had their first opportunity to see the magnitude of the production. Another full rehearsal will be held this evening at Victoria Hall. To-night the Blue Bandits will rehearse at 6.30. The Jewels and soloists at 7.00 and the Minstrel Circle at 7.30. After the musical numbers are finished the rest of the evening will be devoted to the seven dramatic and comedy sketches which form such an important part of the Revue.

Gas Plant Figures Still Lacking, So That Discussion of Purchase Is Again Postponed.

Meeting primarily to pass the construction by-law for the paving on Aylmer street from Charlotte street to the C. P. R. tracks, on McDonnel street from Reid street to Park street, and on Park street from McDonnel to Brock street, and to discuss the purchase of the gas works, the City Council last night in special session disposed of the first matter but was unable to go ahead with the second because the information required has not yet been received. The council made good use of the evening, however, by clearing up a number of routine matters on the slate, leaving less work for the May meeting.

Among the matters put through were permission for the Salvation Army to hold its annual tag day on May 19, if the Police Commission concurs, a formal motion declaring the street railway liable for the cost of removing the abandoned tracks, acceptance of the report of the committee on parking and traffic, the authorizing of Ald. Phelan to engage a dog-catcher, and the refusal of a further grant to the Trent Waterways Development Association.

Parking Committee.

"We gave instructions to have a by-law prepared to provide that a special parking area be established bounded on the north by Brock Street, on the south by Sherbrooke Street, on the east by Water Street and on the west by Aylmer Street, all the streets mentioned included; that on the streets running north and south in this area parking shall be at an angle as shown by painting on the pavement and on the east side only and no parking permitted on the west side, and on streets in this area running east and west parking shall be at an angle as shown by painting on the pavement and on the south side only and no parking permitted on the north side; on George Street in this area no car shall be parked longer than twenty minutes and on the other streets in the area not longer than one hour on Saturdays and on other days not longer than one hour between 8 a.m. and 6 p.m., except that no car shall be parked on Aylmer Street between Simcoe Street and Charlotte Street, nor on Chambers Street or Louis Street, and that no vehicle that is longer than 18 feet including its load shall be parked in this area; and that Louis Street shall be a one-way street and cars to go south only on it, and Chambers Street to be a one-way street and cars to go south only on it.

"On streets outside of this special area cars shall be parked within six inches of the curb or edge of roadway, and no car shall be parked on any such street longer than a reasonable time.

"The following streets to be designated through streets: Rubidge Street from Rink Street to Charlotte Street, Hunter Street from the west side of Rubidge Street to Aylmer Street, and Hunter Street and Hunter Street East from Water Street to Armour Road, including Armour Road.

"Signs of metal shall be hung on poles at each end of each block in the special area, showing length of time parking is permitted on the block and the kind of parking permitted and giving information at each end of the one-way streets, and also signs at the intersections of the through streets."

Ald. Huffman proposed the McDonnel street be added to the list of through streets, while Ald. Greene noted with pleasure that Rubidge street was included. He had suggested it last summer and had been told it was impracticable.

Ald. Ackerman pointed out that those stopping at George street when traffic is heavy will find difficulty in getting out into the street. Ald. Hamilton remarked, "We'll have to get more stoplights."

Ald. Phelan questioned the advisability of the one-hour limit on side streets. The mayor pointed out that the merchants and others who wish to leave their cars may put them on Queen street and others just outside the area on the market square, or else come out once an hour and move their cars. He remarked that some of the men park their cars in front of neighboring stores so that there would be no interference to their own business.

Railways and Parks.

The Railways and Parks Committee reported as follows:

"We received the following tenders for the caretaking of the parks during the ensuing season: P. Card, $775.00; D. Hayward, $985.00.

"We recommend that the Chairman of this Committee be authorized to employ a caretaker for the parks and that the caretaker so employed be paid on the certificate of the Chairman.

(Ald. Greene reported verbally in this matter that he had interviewed the two tenderers, and that one of them had agreed to adjust his tender. He therefore recommended that the tender of D. Hayward for $675 be accepted, and incorporated in the report, which was done.)

"We recommend that we advertise for a caretaker for the James Stevenson Park, one capable of running and caring for power lawn mower preferred.

"We recommend that the Chairman of this Committee be authorized to procure a license and amusement tax tickets for the James Stevenson Park, and that they be paid for on his certificate.

Ralston Receives Reply To Message

OTTAWA, Ont., April 17. — In reply to a message conveying congratulations and welcome to Canada sent to the crew of the German plane Bremen at Greenly Island, on behalf of the Royal Canadian Air Force, and the Canadian aviation service by the Hon. Col. J. L. Ralston, Minister of national defence, the following radiogram was received at the department at 6 p.m. yesterday:

Greenly Island, via Point Amour.
Minister of National Defence,
Ottawa.

Greatly appreciate your telegram of congratulation and message of welcome to the great Dominion of Canada on behalf of the Royal Canadian Air Force and the aviation services of Canada.

(Signed) Koehl, Fitzmaurice, Hunefeld.

MORE BUILDINGS FOR EXHIBITION

Three Recommended By Committee of Exhibition Board.

ESTIMATED COST $8,000.

Three new buildings at an estimated cost of $8,000 will be recommended to the Peterborough Exhibition Board by the committee which visited the grounds on Saturday and thoroughly discussed the problem of additional accommodation for live-stock exhibitors.

The proposed buildings are separately for sheep, cattle and horses. This further expansion, if undertaken this year, and the committee considers that it is not only advisable and virtually necessary but also another valuable assets for next September's exhibition, is intended entirely for the benefit of those live-stock breeders who are coming to Peterborough in larger numbers every year.

A few months ago it seemed probable that the Exhibition Board would receive substantial assistance this year from the Provincial Government, but an expected grant from that source faded, for the present at any rate, out of the Exhibition Boards visions. It seems that the directors are setting themselves to carry on their extensions themselves. And to that end they will likely have to obtain the required finances from the bank. The directors made themselves personally liable for their last deficit of $6,000, and their success, especially the support of the public in the city and county of Peterborough and from a large area in nearby counties, has been generally interpreted as a mandate to proceed with the policy which has been already so fruitful. The directors are not afraid of carrying a loan from the bank, and while there is no intention of anticipating what their action will be, it might be remarked that the Board as a whole usually accords its committees the respect of unanimous approval. Whether the entire program of three buildings will be indorsed for this year's outlay depends upon the extent to which the Board is impressed with their urgent necessity.

Fliers Nearly Broke On Arrival At Island

TORONTO, April 17. — (Special.)—Everybody is liable to go "broke" but it is not given to every person to fly across the ocean and then find they have only silver and not very much of that in their pockets. This is exactly what happened to the crew of the Bremen when they landed at Greenley Island Latest indications show that from the shillings and pence in their pockets they might have lived for three or four days, but to eat steadily was another proposition. This very important affair was arranged by the Junkers Company, in New York, through the Canadian National Telegraphs Co. It was ascertained that a relief plane was being sent to the Island from Murray Bay, Quebec. This information was secured but a short time before the plane was to leave, but fortunately real money instead of a wire order was secured ,and when the airplane left it carried silver and bills to cover the extent of their "eats" Therefore, the three intrepid fliers were enabled to continue "living on the fat of the land" and, consequently, the Canadian National Telegraphs secured another "beat" in bringing relief to ice-bound people.

Women Gather For Convention

OTTAWA, Ont., April 17. — Canadian Press. — Every train is bringing to the capital women from all parts of Canada for the Liberal convention, opening here at ten o'clock to-day. More than 500 (the number originally expected by the committee) will attend. The Maritime provinces are sending unusually large deputations. Nova Scotia alone is sending 40 women, Prince Edward Island 15, New Brunswick about two dozen.

FLIER POPULAR IN HOMELAND

Fitzmaurice Promoted To Grade of Major For Recent Achievement.

GAVE INTERVIEW.

DUBLIN, April 17 (Canadian Press). — Dublin, native city of Commandant Fitzmaurice, pictures him sitting on an iceberg somewhere near the Arctic Circle, chuckling and grinning at his outwitting the icy Atlantic. Incidentally, the Commandant has been promoted to the grade of major in the Irish Free State Air Force for his recent achievement.

The Irish airman is famous for taking just such long chances as the Bremen flight involved, and coming out alive.

"Fitz has found the pearl again," said one of his close flying friends at Baldonnel yesterday, and explaining the remark ,added:

"We often told Fitz that he was like a man who went to a restaurant with sixpence in his pocket and ordered a dozen of the finest oysters, expecting to find a pearl inside to pay for them."

Carefree, Debonair.

Ireland knows Fitzmaurice as gay, carefree, debonair, seemingly without full realization of the seriousness of things, although he commands the Saorstat Air Force. This, however, is an impression only, for underneath there is seriousness, and the steel nerves which carried him out of many tight corners, such as when the Bremen floundered in the fog and came down on the ice near Greenly Island, on the American continent.

Nobody knew the hazards of a westward Atlantic crossing better than Fitzmaurice. Saorstat army officers are not permitted to give interviews, but before the Bremen flew, this ban was raised on authority of the Minister of Defence, so that the commandant could give his views to the Associated Press on the future of trans-Atlantic flying and civil aviation in Ireland, which, because of the island's geographical position on the direct line of flight from Europe to America, is believed to have a great future. There is a vision of regular trans-Atlantic aerial transportation becoming a reality.

Largely a Stunt.

"Flying the Atlantic in the Bremen or any other plane to-day is largely

COLLARD PLACED ON RETIRED LIST

Admiral Concerned in Royal Oak Trouble Relieved of Command.

LONDON, April 17 (Canadian Press).—Rear Admiral Bernard St. G. Collard, central figure in the famous Royal Oak affair which involved the court martialing of Captain Dewar and Commander Daniel, has been relieved of his command and placed upon the retired list.

Announcement of this was made when the House of Commons convened to-day after the Easter recess by W. C. Bridgeman, First Lord of the Admiralty, in the long-awaited address on the Royal Oak controversy.

Mr. Bridgeman said that the Board of the Admiralty was of the opinion that the initial blame for what had occurred aboard the Royal Oak lay with Admiral Collard in dealing with trivial causes of dissatisfaction in a manner unbecoming his position and showing himself unfitted for high command. Therefore, it had been decided, in spite of his good services in the past, to retire him.

NOT QUITTING PRACTICE.

Dr. A. Moir Denies Rumors That He is About to Give Up Surgery.

Declaring that there is no truth in statements going around, that he is quitting practice on account of ill health, Dr. A. Moir to-day informed The Examiner that he has never been in better health and has no intention of giving up his practice.

WITNESSES' STORIES DIFFER AS TO LIVES LOST TAKING MONS; WHEN LIBEL ACTION IS STARTED

New York Prepares For Fliers' Reception

NEW YORK, April 17.—(A.P.) Load after load of lumber was stacked in City Hall Plaza yesterday with which to build grandstands for the reception to the crew of the trans-Atlantic monoplane Bremen.

The reception committee said the arrangements of the grandstands will be the same as for the welcome to Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh after he flew to France.

The committee did not say whether the arrival of Captain James Fitzmaurice in New York ahead of his German companions would alter reception plans, but it was generally believed that the official ceremonies would be delayed until all three fliers could participate.

FEW DEAD SEEN ON MONS ROAD ARMISTICE DAY

Witnesses Tell of Seeing Three Dead Canadians On Outskirts of Town.

WERE ON STRETCHERS.

Overseas Men of Many Units Heard in Currie Libel Suit To-day.

COBOURG, April 17.—(Special.)—Veterans who served with many units of the Canadian Corps testified at the resumption of General Currie's libel suit against W. T. R. Preston and the Port Hope Guide to-day. Some of them had seen dead men in Mons Nov. 11. One man testified that they were on stretchers in a shed, while another saw three on the highway. Few of those who testified to-day had an actual part in the capture of the town.

Much of the evidence was ruled by the Judge to be of a hearsay nature and therefore of little or no value to the court. Four witnesses called failed to answer to their names, but others were present to testify. From the time of the opening till one o'clock, the court continued without a recess. A considerable portion of the time was taken up by argument between counsel and remarks from the bench.

William Woodlock

William Woodlock, Port Hope, was the first witness called this morning for the defense. He was a member of the 42nd Canadian Battalion and was at Mons in 1918. He heard that A Company suffered casualties. Mr. Tilley objected that the evidence is hearsay. Mr. Regan referred to the article which caused the suit, saying that it was based on similar authority. He submitted that the defendants are permitted to repeat statements made by men who were overseas. The Judge ruled otherwise.

Mr. Tilley said what the defendants appear to think they can do is publish gossip as fact, and this they can not do. The judge agreed. Mr. Tilley added: "One of the gravest things a newspaper can do is to make statements which it cannot prove."

Mr. Regan — "How did you learn about the losses of A Company?"

Witness — "Casually, as all losses were learned of. There was a connecting file between A and C Companies."

Mr. Regan after not being allowed several questions, claimed that "All ranks knew there was going to be an armistice for a week."

Colonel Archie Duguid was called as director of the historical section, Department of National Defense. He has charge of records of the Great War. An extract from the report of the 1st Army was headed, "Advance from Ecaut to Mons," Nov. 11, 1918.

The document was not produced by the Canadian Corps in France, and he has not a copy with him. It is a British document, and he does not think the department will take the responsibility of producing the document in court.

After much "round about" procedure, Mr. Regan was told by the judge and counsel for the defense to call for the document, and got it. The document was identified as the 1st Army Report. Colonel Duguid withdrew from the stand.

Woodlock was recalled. Common gossip in the ranks was that envoys were through the lines to attempt to sign an armistice, he said. He was in the firing party at a funeral in Mons within a few days of the armistice. He did not see Currie there.

Some of Overseas Men Saw Dead Men in City Nov. 11.

FIRING CONTINUED.

Germans Kept Up Irregular Fire Until 11 a.m.—Bombs Dropped By Planes.

COBOURG, April 17 (Special to The Examiner). — Several witnesses were heard yesterday afternoon when the $50,000 libel suit of Sir Arthur Currie against W. T. R. Preston and The Port Hope Guide opened here before Mr. Justice Rose and a special jury at the Spring Assizes of the Supreme Court of Ontario.

Even lawyers arguing a case with a large sum of money at stake are not adverse to a humorous touch at the end of a tedious court sesion. After hearing eight witnesses give evidence yesterday afternoon, Messrs. Tilley and Regan for the plaintiff and the defense respectively, found time to smile at the probability that a Canadian soldier had been "well kissed" on a certain occasion in Mons shortly after the capture of that city by the Canadian Corps on or about Nov. 11, 1918.

Of the eight witnesses who gave evidence, only two were called by the plaintiff's council. This completed his case, he said, and Mr. Regan, for the defense, began to plead his side of the question.

The first man to take the stand yesterday afternoon was a cleaner and presser from Port Hope. The last witness to be heard was a machine gunner who had taken part in the famous engagement. In between, came other overseas men and an elderly gentleman who said he believed his son to have been killed on the morning of Nov. 1 1,1918. A representative of the Department of National Defence took the stand and explained what documents were wholly or partially obtainable and how they might be obtained. In the party from the department, there are four men with two trunks full of documents. These are being kept under constant surveillance. It is understood that the information contained in these maps, papers, etc., will be available to the court, but the documents themselves are not to pass from the hands of the men of the department under any consideration.

Although it is impossible to predict the exact date when the case will be completed, the general opinion is that it will not last for the two or three weeks as previously expected. The hearing was resumed at 9.30 a.m. today.

W. N. Tilley, K.C., counsel for General Currie, opened the actual hearing with an address to the jury.

Mr. Tilley explained the case to the jury and the court. An article was published in The Port Hope Guide which the plaintiff claims was libelous. The Guide is published at Port Hope. Mr. Wilson is the editor, and Mr. Preston was writer of the article. He read the article.

The defendant declared that the article published in The Guide and the words published are true in substance and in fact."

Mr. Tilley outlined the general procedure of the case, reminding the jury that newspapers are afforded certain protection regarding publication of certain articles on the front page or as editorials. The Canadian Corps was part of one of four British armies. It must do its duty, could not exceed, and must not fall short of it.

A copy of The Guide of June 13, 1927, containing the article, was submitted as exhibit 1. Notice was served on the defendants July 20, 1927, and July 21, 1927.

Harry Merrifield, tailor, of Port Hope called by Mr. Tilley, was the first witness in the famous case. He testified that he served both notices, on July 28th to Mr. Greenaway, in the absence of Mr. Wilson, and on July 29th Mr. Preston was served.

Questioned by Mr. Regan, he admitted reading the papers and showed entries in a day book to prove statement.

Ralph Hodgson, Registrar of Deeds for the East Riding of the County of Durham, was the second witness. He said he read the article at the time it was published. He knew General Currie was Commander of the Canadian Corps, and took the article to mean General Currie and no other.

Mr. Regan then took the witness, and asked about his military experience. He ranked as sergeant-major. He read the article carefully and repeatedly and his idea did not change. He was overseas with the Canadians, but not at Mons, as he was wounded April 9, 1917. He was in the Records Office at Ottawa November 11, 1918, General Currie's title was Commander of Canadian Corps. "I would presume——"

"Don't presume," Mr. Regan roared. "You were in France, and a non-commissioned officer."

"General Currie was Corps Commander."

Mr. Regan—"General Currie was not referred to in the first article."

Witness—"Yes, sir!" He read the article when Mr. Regan was rebuked

DAUGHTER OF DURHAM PIONEERS OBSERVES 93RD BIRTHDAY TO-DAY

Mrs. Thomas Gillott Was Born in Hope Township April 17, 1835.

NOW IN MILLBROOK

Progress in Many Lines Witnessed by Oldest Resident of Village.

MILLBROOK, April 17 — Mrs. Thomas Gillott, who to-day, April 17, celebrates her ninety-third birthday, is the oldest resident of the village and one of the few remaining citizens who, from personal experience, can recall pioneer days in the community.

Born at Zion in Hope Township on April 17, 1835, Mrs. Gillott is the daughter of pioneer settlers, her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Edwards, establishing their homestead as they cleared the land of the primitive forest.

When eighteen years of age Elizabeth Edwards was married to Thomas Gillott, the ceremony being performed by the Rev. Mr. Baird at the Baptist Parsonage, Port Hope. After living for a brief time at Welcome and then at Port Hope, Mr. and Mrs. Gillott moved to Millbrook where the former, who was a Justice of the Peace and a highly-respected citizen, carried on a successful furniture and undertaking business for half a century. Retiring some three years before his death, which took place on August 1, 1904, he handed the business over to his son, W. J. E. Gillott, who still maintains the firm name and continues the use of the business premises which his father built in the early days of the village history, making such improvements, from time to time, as modern conditions demand.

Recalls Travels.

Over forty years ago Mrs. Gillott accompanied her husband on one of his trips home to visit relatives in England, and can still relate many interesting incidents in connection with the voyage and their stay in the Old Land. The dining-saloon of the palatial steamer of to-day is a far cry from that of the days of her crossing, and sharing a feeling of antipathy to cooking done on board ship, prevalent among many of the old settlers, Mrs. Gillott followed a custom of the time in taking her own supply of provisions for the voyage. A large hamper was packed with cooked fowl, eggs, preserved fruit, bread, butter, etc. the owner finding opportunity to make tea and toast on the boat, her husband having tipped the cook generously for the privilege.

Mrs. Gillott tells of sharing her inviting home-cooked provisions with more than one person on board who

CHURCH SOCIETIES JOIN IN MEETING

Cavan Ladies' Aid and W.M.S. Are Entertained by Miss Annie Tinney.

CAVAN, April 17— Miss Annie Tinney entertained the Ladies' Aid and the W. M. S. of Cavan United Church on Thursday afternoon, there being about twenty present.

The president of the Aid, Mrs. A. B. Kennedy conducted the devotional period of the joint meeting. The report of the St. Patrick Social showed that the receipts were twenty dollars. A letter of thanks was read from an invalid, to whom had been sent the plant which had been bought for use in the church on Easter Sunday.

A committee consisting of Mesdames D. J. Hunter, William Douglas, James Douglas, Elliott, was appointed to purchase carpet for the church and new shades for the basement windows. Miss Tinney and Mrs. W. Tinney were added to the committee to make the measurements and plan of the space to be covered.

Mrs. R. S. Staples conducted the W.M.S. meeting for which the beautiful Easter program was used. Missionary readings were given by Mrs. Swain, Mrs. Hunter, Mrs. F. Staples and Mrs. Matchett.

Slips which were distributed on which the members were asked to write things for which we have reason to be thankful at this Easter season, were collected and read aloud.

At the next meeting, the Study Book will again be taken up, Mrs. Ray Syer being in charge of the next chapter.

The lunch committee, Mesdames Totten, Douglas, Newton, and Douglas assisted the hostess in serving lunch giving the opportunity for a social time together.

The May meeting will be in charge of group C, the members being, Messrs. John Hatherly, A. Elliott, C. Carr, J. C. Swain and Snyder.

St. John's W. A.

Mrs. P. C. Howard, of Millbrook, conducted the meeting of St. John's W. A held on Wednesday afternoon. The secretary read a report received from the secretary in Toronto. Part of the time was occupied in reading a play, which was discussed, and which they decided to prepare and present in the near future.

Personals.

A dance was held on Wednesday evening in the Parish Hall, Ida, with a fairly large crowd in attendance.

Miss Hazel Hunter returned to Toronto on Wednesday after spending a few days with friends in Cavan.

Miss Kelly was a visitor to Peterborough for a few days this week.

The whole purpose of advertising is to show you ways in which you can live better, more comfortably and more happily. Read the advertisements to find out how you may own many things you have always felt were beyond your means.

Montcalm Balked By the Packed Ice

ST. JOHN'S, Newfoundland, Canadian Press.—Owing to the strong easterly winds and the heavily packed ice on the Labrador coast, efforts to reach the German plane Bremen, which landed on Greenly Island at the end of its successful trans-atlantic flight by way of Newfoundland, are meeting with little success.

A party of newspapermen, which set out on Sunday hoping to get to Greenly by boat from Newfoundland, is reported to have been halted.

M.O.H. TELLS BOYS FACTS ON HYGIENE

Dr. N. H. Sutton Gives Interesting Address to Teen-Age Youths at Millbrook.

MILLBROOK, April 17.—N H. Sutton of Peterboro, Provincial Health Officer for this district, addressed the boys of the community fourteen years and upwards, in the Sunday School room of the United Church on Thursday evening. The boys included members of the Tuxis Square, the boys and young men from Grace Presbyterian Church and the local troop of Boys Scouts, under the leadership of the Scoutmaster, E. H. Barnes.

Dr. Sutton preceded his formal address with an interesting set of slides on the Burn's Memorial in Scotland, and then spoke directly to his listeners on what teen age boys and young men ought to know in relation to personal habits and hygiene.

At the conclusion of the meeting the speaker of the evening, the leaders of the various boys' groups, and one or two interested friends met around the supper table at the parsonage as the guests of the Rev. F. H. and Mrs. Howard. It is possible that a meeting along similar lines in the interests of the teen age girls of the community will be held within the next few weeks, with a speaker from Toronto to address the gathering

The Tuxis Square of the United Church, which has been recently reorganized with H. J. Anderson as mentor, and the Rev. Mr. Howard and F. P. Stinson as assistant leaders, has the following officers: Praeter, Skitch; scriptor, Lawrence Rowland; comptor, Aubery Todd; sponsor, J. Fallis.

Auxiliary Meets

Mrs. R. J. Doak was in the chair for the Easter meeting of the Woman's Missionary Auxiliary of Grace Presbyterian church, held on Wednesday afternoon, a good attendance of members and visitors being a feature of the gathering

Miss Kennedy and Mrs. Turner took up the third chapter of the study book, "The Royal Road", the material provided each month being decidedly interesting.

Mrs. T. H. Ingram and Mrs. J. R. Eakins were leaders in the devotional period, and Miss Anna Hawthorne sang a solo, "The Priceless Gift," which was much appreciated.

At the May meeting, in addition to the regular program, sewing will be done on the outfit for a boy at one of the Mission School Homes, for which the Auxiliary is responsible and work on hospital supplies which also go in the annual bale, will be proceeded with.

Mrs. J. R Eakins is the Presbyterial Supply Secretary, and all bales provided by the Auxiliaries are sent here to be repacked, and sent on to their various destinations on the mission fields. As there is an increased attendance reported at the School Homes, additional requirements make heavier demands on the Auxiliary workers in the larger centres.

SALE AT BETHANY

Prices Fair at Auction of Household Effects—James Roddy in Charge.

BETHANY, April 17.—The auction sale of the household effects of the late Mrs. Joseph Weatherilt held on Thursday was well attended by both men and women. Articles sold brought fair prices, with James Roddy, of Fraserville, as auctioneer.

Miss Lily Weatherlit will make her home with her brother, Milton, after visiting friends at Bowmanville and other points.

Personals

Mr. and Mrs. James Marshall and little daughter, of Janetville, spent Thursday afternoon with Miss Lily Weatherlit.

Miss Olive Nelson, of Mono road, was renewing acquaintances in the village last week, and was the guest of Mrs. Arnott.

Mrs. Poulter and daughter, Miss Patsy, spent several days in Peterborough last week.

Mr. Hector Jakeman, of Streetsville visited his parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. A Jakeman, during the Easter week.

Mrs. William Lee visited friends in Peterborough on Thursday and Friday.

The automobiles are seen on the country roads again, which goes to show that the roads are becoming dry and fit for traffic.

Mr. John Staples and son Herbert, of Lindsay, spent Saturday with Mr. Staples's mother.

The Easter dance in the Town Hall on Friday evening, under the auspices of the Athletic Club, was largely attended. Hooper's Orchestra of Lindsay, provided the music.

DEBATE DECIDES IMMIGRANTS HELP

Young People of King's Wharf Discuss Interesting Issue at Meeting.

KING'S WHARF, April 17.—Miss Isabel Nelson, vice-president of the "Citizenship", group had charge of the Young People's League of St. John's Church. An interesting debate, "Resolved that immigrants do more good than bad to the country," was given with Miss Margaret Ranson and William Fulton on the affirmative side and Miss Jean Kerr and Carmen Killaby on the negative side. The judges decided in favor of the affirmative side, which was won by five points.

A reading, "Our League," was given by Mrs. Kimble. Miss Clara McFeeters recited a very interesting piece, after which M. Killaby gave two violin selections. A dialogue, "Our Immigrants," was given by Miss Jean Kerr, and Messrs. Carmen Killaby and Fred Souther. A solo was given by Mrs. William Pogue, followed by a reading by Mrs. George White. Mrs John McFeeters gave a reading on "The Old Ford." A very amusing contest, conducted by Miss Nelson in which the members were divided into four groups to see which could get the most words out of the letters in Citizenship, concluded the program after a discussion regarding the date of the banquet.

Wheat Looks Fine

The fall wheat and all seeding looks splendid and is getting green. It came through the winter in excellent condition and unless killed by the late frosts, it will be a good crop.

Water High

The water in Pigeon Lake is very high and is interfering with the trappers. The season is poor and few rats are being caught because of the high water.

Sap Still Running

The maple syrup season is longer than expected and the run is very good. A number are taking advantage of it to make some syrup.

The annual banquet of the Young People's League of St. John's Church will be held in the Church on Friday, April 20.

Personals

Mr. Martin Devine of Lindsay, is the guest of friends here.

Miss Mabel McFeeters spent Saturday as the guest of Miss Mabel Hunter.

Miss Aileen Oliver, of Bobcaygeon spent the week-end as the guest of Miss Jean Kerr.

Mr. and Mrs. George White spent Sunday as the guests of Mr and Mrs. John McFeeters.

The Misses Clara and Mabel McFeeter spent Sunday as the guests of Miss Jean Kerr.

Miss Cara O'Neill, of Lindsay, is spending a few weeks with her parents Mr. and Mrs. Thomas J. O'Neill.

Miss Minnie Guiry, of Lindsay, has returned home after visiting Mr. and Mrs John Guiry.

Raymond Perdue is the guest of his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Simon Perdue, in Peterborough.

One touch of merriment makes the whole world grin.

MILLBROOK COUPLE GOING TO NAPANEE

Community Gathering of Three Hundred Bids Farewell to Mr. and Mrs. Todd.

MILLBROOK, April 17.—A community gathering, attended by over three hundred people, was held in the Town Hall on Friday evening, in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Matthew Todd, who leaves for their new home in Napanee the latter part of this month.

Mr. Todd has been lineman for the Hydro-Electric Power Commission in this district for a number of years, and that he and his wife have made many warm friends was quite evident by the fact that, in spite of very bad roads, scores of people from surrounding countryside came in for Friday's social gathering and also by the atmosphere of goodfellowship which prevailed throughout.

Dancing took up the first part of the evening, and about midnight, just before the supper was served, Mr. and Mrs. Todd were given seats on the stage when Mr. James Roddy read an appreciative address, Messrs. J. Todd and J Rusk, on behalf of the company, presenting them with a set of dishes in Limoges china, and a mantel clock. Mrs. Todd also received a beautiful sheaf of carnations, her niece, little Phyllis Lunn, offering the gift.

Suitable reply was made by Mr. Todd on behalf of his wife and himself, after which a number of brief addresses were given.

A short program included vocal solos by Mrs. Nyal Todd, of Peterboro Mr. C. Powers playing the accompaniments; and by Miss Anna Hawthorne; step dances were contributed by Mr. Drum, of Peterborough, Mr. Wentworth Gray, and by Mr. M. Todd.

Music for the dancing was supplied by Mr. and Mrs. Amos Strong, Messrs. Todd and Rusk, and others.

Mr. Todd will have his headquarters in Napanee with a district to cover approximately equal to what he has had in this section; there will be no local lineman here in future, the man from Peterborough, and from Port Hope, covering the territory and having their meeting-place at Millbrook. The plan is to eliminate one lineman in this district, according to present arrangements of the Power Commission.

Cavan

CAVAN, April 17.—Mrs. Margaret Staples who has been spending the winter in Florida has returned to her home here.

Mrs. Harry Tinney and children John and Mary who have been spending the Easter holidays with Mrs. Tinney's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. Forder, of Nestleton, returned home on Friday.

Mr. Lorne Sisson who has spent the winter with his mother and sisters here has returned to his home in Saskatchewan.

Canadian Beaver Brings High Price

NEW YORK, April 17.—(Canadian Press.)—Western Canadian beaver sold to $41.75 at the opening of the thirteenth annual spring fur auction here yesterday. This was the top for a collection of this article that brought prices averaging ten per cent. above those of the winter sale of the New York Auction Company. Cross fox touched $170 but was unchanged. White fox dropped five per cent. with a top of $55.

Canadian, Eastern and Russian red fox dropped ten per cent. with sections unchanged. The best fetched $42.50. Turkish fox, with a top of $8.50, rose five per cent.

Fitch was unchanged at $5.40, Australian fox at $3.20, Baum marten at $35, and stone marten at $18. Canadan marten, which also was unchanged, touched $46 for best Eastern skins.

DEBATE DECIDES FOR THE COUNTRY

City Depends More on Country Than Country on City, Juniors Prove.

LAKEFIELD, April 17.—"Resolved that the city depends more on the country than country depends on the city," was the subject of the debate between the Junior and Women's Institute at the regular meeting of the Institute held recently. The Misses Mabel Mullen and Edna Frankish were on the affimative side, while Miss M. Saunders and Mrs. A. Davis supported the negative side.

Miss Mullen opened the debate in a strictly parliamentary manner, mustering a fine array of facts which could not be gain said. She dwelt on the fact that practically all the raw materials are found in the country which means that the cities are dependent on the country for the material which keep their factories running and the labouring class employed. She stressed the dependence of the city for its food stuffs on the country. Then the tourists are flocking to the country to enjoy the lakes and rivers, fishing and fresh air which the rural districts have in abundance. Health seekers flocked to the country for quiet, fresh air and unadulterated food.

Miss Sanderson spoke on the negative side following Miss Mullen, and the greater financial importance as of the city as a government centre, its greater educational advantages, the greter financial importance as the banks headquarters, telephone and telegraph headquarters, are to be found in the city. The country depends on the city for its radio pro-

Warsaw

WARSAW, April 17.—The land is slowly drying, consequently the roads are getting better. Some half loads of hay have been drawn to Peterboro.

The Indian River at Warsaw is not as high as it often is at this season.

There have been some good runs of sap this week, but the buds are showing and it will soon be tainted.

PRESENTATIONS TO DEPARTING PRIEST

Rev. Father James McGuire is Honored by Parishioners at Douro.

DOURO, April 17.—The Rev. James McGuire, who has been assistant priest at St. Joseph's Parish, Douro, for the past seventeen months, was presented with an address and purse by the St. Joseph's Dramatic Club, at Harmony Hall Wednesday evening. The address was read by Miss Cecelia McManus, and the presentation made by Harry Fitzgerald. Father McGuire, who assisted the young people to stage a successful play recently, has been called to Hastings Parish, owing to the illness of Father Bretherton. He, in a heartfelt reply, thanked the young people for their kindness, expressed his warm appreciation of their good will and assured them of the personal regret it was causing him to leave them.

Honored by Parish

The Rev. Father James McGuire was also honored by the members of St. Joseph's Parish on Thursday evening, when he was presented with a purse and address The address was read by Joseph Walsh and the presentation made by William Hayes. The Rev. Father McGuire, in his reply, referred to the happiness he had experienced during the past seventeen months and assured them of his regret at severing connections with Douro.

Addresses were given by Doctor Munro, of Warsaw and the Rev. M. J. McGuire, pastor of Douro. Doctor Munro, after expressing his pleasure at being present, commended the good will and appreciation which the large gathering gave evidence of, and paid hearty tribute to the agreeable personality and characteristic qualities of the young clergyman, which fitted him for the highest calling given to man.

The Rev. M. J. McGuire spoke of the loyality and co-operation which existed between him and his assistant during the past seventeen months and his regret at their separation.

At the request of the chairman, James Walsh, a few musical selections were given.

RAWDON COUNCIL HOLDS MEETING

Henry Matthews Appointed Sheep Valuator—Ditch Tile Discussed.

BONARLAW, April 17.—Henry Mathews was appointed sheep valuator to fill the vacancy caused by the death of David McComb, at the regular meeting of the Rawdon Council, held recently

Messrs. R. Scarlett and R. Fleming applied for the tile for ditch to make driveways. The Council decided to furnish one-half of the tile if the owners would place them. Messrs. J. S. Williams, A. Hume, A. Hay and R. Walker applied for a grant on Cape Diamond Hill. The Council decided to consider after Seymour was consulted.

Kenneth Thompson's statute labor was placed on the ninth concession east of the gravel road Earl McAdam had part of his statute labor transferred to side road. A. P. Williams applied for grant on road, $35.00; this was granted.

A by-law was passed in regular order appointing road master, pound keepers and fence viewers and by-law authorizing purchase of road making machinery was given its third reading.

The following accounts were ordered paid: Samuel Hinds, $79.95; Wm. Patterson, $6.00; George Dunk, $14.90; Peter Ryan, $6.00; George Dunk, $2.00; S S. McComb, $2.50; Bell and Barlow, $13.96; H. C. PLOWING AT MARMORA

Leo Doyle and Frank McKinnon Are First On Land.

MARMORA, April 17.—On neighboring farms Leo Doyle and Frank McKinnon opened the plowing season on Thursday. Plans had been made during the sunny Holy Week for a start on Easter Monday but the return of wintry weather interfered. Agriculturists report that the new seeding has stood the winter well. Fall rye and wheat are also in splendid shape. The dairy business looks very promising. Maple trees have been in bud for over a week which is surprising after so protracted a winter.

CORRESPONDENCE ON WATERWAY IS TABLED IN HOUSE OF COMMONS

Canada To Build Canadian Sections and U. S. International Sections.

BASIS OF NEGOTIATIONS.

American Urgency and Canadian Hesitation Noted Throughout All Documents.

OTTAWA, April 17. — (Canadian Press.)—Canada to consider providing for construction of the waterway in the sections wholly Canadian — that is the Welland Ship Canal and the works in the St. Lawrence below the international boundary.

The United States to consider undertaking the completion of a 27-foot waterway to the head of the lakes, in addition to meeting the entire cost of the development, under joint technical supervision, on lines to be agreed upon, of the international section of the St. Lawrence, both for navigation and power.

This, in brief, is the suggested basis of negotiations submitted by the Canadian to the United States Government on the St. Lawrnce waterways scheme, as revealed in correspondence made public by Premier King last night.

The documents tabled give not only correspondents exchanged between the two Governments. They include the report of the Canadian National Advisory Committee, observations by two members of the Advisory Committee, who do not concur in certain essential features of the majority report; and the documents also include a copy of an order-in-Council, passed on Saturday, giving revised terms of reference to the Supreme Court on the respective power rights of the Dominion and the provinces.

The suggested basis of negotiation appears in the report of the Canadian National Advisory Committee, and is submitted in a letter written by Hon. Vincent Massey, Canadian Minister at Washington, to Secretary Kellogg, of the United States. In his letter, Mr. Massey continues:

Canadian Sections First.

"The construction of the wholly Canadian (Welland and St. Lawrence) sections, and, if the United States should see fit, of the upper lakes works, would, on this plan, be given precedence of the international section, because of the necessity alike of providing for further consideration of the engineering problems involved in the international section, and of permitting reasonable absorption of the power developed on the Canadian side."

Included in Mr. Massey's note is a balance sheet, submitted by the Advisory Committee, showing the cost to Canada of present and proposed works as $400,830,000. The cost of present and proposed works to the United States is given as $383,183,000. Secretary Kellogg replied to Mr. Massey that the United States "is inclined to regard as an acceptable basis of negotiation a proposal along the general lines suggested in your note."

Mr. Kellogg continues: "Whether the United States expends its share of the cost on the international section and Canada its share on the national sections would seem to be immaterial if, in the negotiations, there is a fair division of expense for a through deep waterway to the ocean."

But Mr. Kellogg demurs at inclusion on the Canadian side of the balance sheet of the costs of the St. Lawrence and old Welland Canals, "except so far as they may be of use to the deeper system. These works," he adds, "are understood to be for lighter craft and of little value for the purpose of the works now proposed. These waterways are understood to have served their purpose in economic returns. It would also seem to be necessary to differentiate between the costs that may properly be chargeable to navigation and those to power in general. Those who now or in the future profit by the power should bear their share of the expense."

Throughout the correspondence between the two Governments, there is evidence of American urgency for a St. Lawrence waterway treaty and of Canadian hesitation.

DOCTORS SHOW HOW TO END BRONCHIAL COUGH

Worry Relieved When She Tries Hospital Tested Method in Her Own Home

No longer is it necessary to use needless guesswork in choosing the quickest and surest way to get rid of a deep seated cold, or even a cough caused by bronchitis. For a unique method now recommended by hospital physicians has brought quick and lasting relief to numbers of Peterborough people who have used it in their homes.

Mrs. R. H. Gibbons, for instance, was treated for a severe cold complicated with bronchitis. Cough syrups had given her only temporary relief and she became so ill she was forced to quit work. Then, on the advice of her doctor she started taking double doses of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral — a concentrated mixture of wild cherry, white pine, glycerine, terpin hydrate, and other ingredients which have relieved even the most extreme hospital cases.

Relief began with the first pleasant swallow. She felts its comforting, healing warmth as it penetrated through and through the irritated linings of her throat, chest and bronchial tubes. That night she slept for the first time in nearly a week without being awakened by coughing spells. In a day or so all traces of the cold had cleared up and in less than ten days, doctors report, she was rid of her bronchial trouble.

Note: See other cases reported daily—all certified to this paper by a member of the hospital.

Doctors find that this hospital medicine does far more than stop coughing instantly. It penetrates and heals inflamed linings of the breathing passages. Absorbed by the system it quickly reduces phlegm, helps allay that "feverish", grippy feeling and drives out the cold from the nose passages, throat and chest.

Just a few pleasant spoonfuls of Cherry Pectoral now and you'll feel like a different person to-morrow.

The League of Nations

(Contributed)
(By F. M. D.)

Before entering upon the main features of the League's activities it is as well to consider for a few moments the causes that brought it into being. The main reason was, of course, the World War, that stupendous upheaval which in its accompanying cataclysm overthrew monarchies, submerged empires and destroyed many millions of the world's best and bravest manhood and womanhood. But, long before the great catastrophe, thinking people had been arguing and pondering over the absolute uselessness and destructiveness of war. There had been a time when ardent and vociferous demagogues and even statesmen who swayed the destinies of nations had extolled war as a purifier and had pointed to it as a cleanser of cupidity and public corruption. Poets sang of its glories and eminent prose-writers filled reams upon reams with elevated and inspiring sentiments in its praise. Now we are beginning to realize that instead of being the first act in a nation's regeneration it is the last and most degenerating one in the human drama. It is only after war that people see its utter futility and horror. The soldier who goes forward unflinchingly to the firing line is a true hero, worthy of every honor that can be bestowed upon him but the forces that send him there, whether they emanate from the seething brains of vainglorious emperors or from the vengeful machinations of half-savage Tartars find their sources in the foulest springs of our nature.

We have many problems to face and surely in these days, with untold centuries of historical records confronting us, we do not need to be told that mankind is neither wiser, nor purer nor more highly civilized because of war. When we have realized that fact we have broken down the walls of one of the mightiest problems that confronts us.

Let us see what the League has so far accomplished.

It has prevented six wars. It has established a World Court of International justice.

It has prevented the spread of epidemic diseases in many parts of the world and is working to eliminate them.

It has repatriated over four hundred thousand war prisoners who were homeless and destitute.

It has effectively restricted the traffic in women and children.

It has established a world-wide organization to stamp out the use of opium and harmless drugs. It has reconstructed Austria and Hungary and given sense of security and peace throughout Europe.

It has removed many long standing misconceptions that existed between capital and labor.

With these examples of its efficiency before us there is every incentive for continued support. Canadians have never been backward in furthering a good cause. Here is a magnificent opportunity for us to become identified with an effort, which for grandeur of conception and utilitarian value stands peerless before the world.

For the first time in history a woman barrister appeared before the judicial committee of the English Privy Council the other day. She was Miss Joan Clarkson and she argued an appeal from New Zealand in a case concerning assessment on income tax.

DOES THIS SEEM RIGHT?

In the local police court yesterday morning the driver of a public bus was sentenced to seven days in jail for driving his bus while intoxicated.

At the same session a man pleading guilty to being drunk in a public place was fined $15.00 with the alternative of ten days' imprisonment and elected to go to jail because he could not pay the fine.

And thus we have the somewhat amazing situation that one man whose offence consisted merely of imbibing too enthusiastically goes to the hill for ten days, while another offender convicted of driving a public vehicle when he was not in condition to operate it safely will be at liberty three days ahead of the other fellow.

Surely it was never intended that the administration of the law should bring about such ridiculous results.

When mere drunkenness, not in anyway prejudicing the safety of others, is punished more severely than conduct that might have meant death or serious injury to passengers on a public vehicle, there is something wrong with our laws or with their administration.

WHAT IS THE ALTERNATIVE?

We are told that only eleven rural school trustees out of 600 delegates at the Ontario Educational Convention favored the township school board plan introduced by Premier Ferguson.

Of the 589 delegates opposed to the plan it would be interesting to know how many have any alternative remedy to offer for a condition that is far from satisfactory.

Our present system of rural education is costly, often of doubtful efficiency, and comparing unfavorably with advantages that are offered urban pupils.

In the Province there are schools with but one pupil, more with but two, and a surprisingly large number with an attendance of five or fewer.

Is it good business to allow these conditions to continue?

Apparently representatives of rural education think so, for they are fighting the township board plan tooth and nail, and at the same time offering no other policy that will take hold of the situation and effect the reform that even the rural trustees themselves must see is sadly needed

Rural Ontario may vote progressive, but it is in its attitude toward educational matters conservative to the point of stubbornness.

ANOTHER "STRONG MAN."

If the liquor control system fails to prove a success in Ontario the blame cannot very well be laid upon the shoulders of the men chosen to administer the Act.

The resignation of Mr. Ferguson's first "strong man," D. B. Hanna, from the chairmanship of the Control Board, which has been frequently predicted, has at last materialized, and the Premier substitutes a successor well qualified by his training and experience to give good service to the public.

Sir Henry Drayton, who is to take over the duties of the position, has filled many important posts, and filled them well.

As corporation counsel in Toronto, as representative of the Ontario Government on the Toronto Power Commission and as chief commissioner of the Dominion Railway Board, Sir Henry showed qualities that should be of material assistance to him in the responsibilities he is now assuming

The general verdict is that Mr. Hanna, who had charge of the introduction of the system of Government control and who piloted it during its first year, has done good work, and Mr. Ferguson is fortunate in being able to name as his successor another citizen who commands general respect.

Sir Henry will, it is announced resign as soon as possible from Parliament.

While Hon. Dr. Manion, who is retiring from the Liquor Control Board with Mr. Hanna, did not give up his seat in the House of Commons, it was understood that his service with the commission would not extend beyond a year.

The new chairman is in a different position, and is right in losing no time in severing his connections with Ottawa; the chairmanship of the Liquor Control Board is important enough to take up the entire attention of the man who undertakes to discharge its duties.

A WONDERFUL ACHIEVEMENT.

In the excitement over the thrilling westward flight of the Atlantic by the crew of the "Bremen" the world is very likely to fail to give proper recognition to the remarkable achievements of the two gallant French flyers, Costes and Lebrix, who on Saturday landed at Paris after an air journey of 35,000 miles over land and sea, a flight over Africa, North and South America, Asia, Europe and a considerable expanse of the South Atlantic.

Here was a feat worthy to be ranked as among the greatest in the history of aviation: not a "stunt" or a blind stab in the dark, but a carefully planned, most accurately and skilfully executed aerial circuit of the world, during which a time schedule was followed with the precision of a railway system, and in the course of which there were no mishaps to record.

The last stages of this Odyssey of the air were in themselves one of the most wonderful performances yet accredited to flying men.

A week ago Sunday the pair took to the air at Tokio, and in two days had travelled from Japan across China to Indo-China; Tuesday saw them wing their way to Calcutta; on Wednesday they travelled the width of India without a stop, and then while the German-Irish flyers were bucking the head winds of the Atlantic, the French birdmen were completing a non-stop flight of nearly 2,000 miles to Aleppo, Syria, which they reached on Friday.

A four hours' rest here and they were off again for Rome and then Paris.

Tokio to Paris in a week meant covering astounding distances at high speed and navigating and flying skill of the highest rate, and no wonder the New York Times is constrained to point out that "their flight must be rated above all others, greater even than those single leaps across the Atlantic which strike more the imagination of non-flying men. Costes' piloting of his machine and Lebrix's navigation have not been equalled over such a stretch of time and space."

CANADA'S LEADERSHIP.

From Geneva comes the message of Canadian Senator Raoul Dandurand, Canada's distinguished representative on the Council of the League of Nations, that inner circle where the real business of the league is threshed out and matters of policy decided upon. The veteran senator has proclaimed that all might hear: "War never achieved any final settlement. And one blood chapter in the record of history has always called for another. The time is high for civilized countries to put a full stop to this barbarian fatalism." And the senator continues to show how Canada has kept clear of entangling wars that would have only resulted in distress.

While European nations bargain and bicker for advantage in alliances and agreements, Canada is being held up to the nations of the world as an example of what may be done when sensible arbitration and discussion are used to settle matters of international disagreement. The influence of Canada as the leading Dominion in the British Commonwealth of Nations is playing an important part in the moulding of Empire thought in the preservation of peace. The Canadian viewpoint is being considered seriously in the present discussions by which it is hoped that the developments of the original Franco-United States anti-war compact will be extended until all the greater nations are included within its scope.

Europe is frankly tired of war. True it is that the French are armed to a greater extent than before 1914. Even as true is the fact that Great Britain has gone ahead spending enormous sums on armaments until she is ready to take the field at a moment's notice. In Italy and Spain the streets are crowded with men in uniforms. In Germany, Austria, Hungary and Bulgaria the reason there is a paucity of soldiers is simply because the peace treaties have denied these nations the right to possess more than a corporal's guard of armed soldiery.

In spite of all the warlike signs, the man in the street loathes war. The Europeans had been accustomed to think in terms of rifles, bayonets, cannon and capital ships. When they visited the inland frontiers of their countries, they were thrilled with the forts which guarded strategic passes. But there is a new age dawning. Enlightened men are hearing of Canada and the lack of soldiers, sailors and forts in the new country. Instead of thinking of this as an inadequacy which would put Canadians to a disadvantage in case of trouble, they think now that by judicious action, other nations could follow the example of the new country and dispense with warlike preparations.

Another point that has been given thought is that when war was forced on Canada, she was able to produce an army that proved second to none in fighting qualities and leadership. If this could be done by a peaceful nation, the man in the street in Europe is beginning to argue, why then could not European nations adopt the same tactics? By abolishing the desire to possess a great army, the expenses of the national budget would be pared by a huge percentage in each country. And with the means of attack eliminated, the urge to take up rifle and bayonet would not be so potent.

Even Turkey is joining in the movement to co-operate with the others in the effort to keep conditions so stabilized that war will be foreign. With Great Britain, France, Germany, Japan, Italy and the United States making a determined effort, the prospects for peace become brighter.

Times have changed in the last few years. Canada used to be a comparatively unknown and unimportant colony situated somewhere in North America. To-day Canada has become the second senior member in the partnership of the British Commonwealth of Nations. People in Europe are now looking to Canada for leadership. It is a challenge to every Canadian to accept, and to demonstrate that the opinion the rest of the world holds of his country is justified.—Border Cities Star.

Don't grumble about the bad roads; keeping off them is more to the purpose.

The "strong man" is leaving the bridge. Judging from his successor's record, however, it would be just as well to continue to respect the Liquor Control Act.

CATTLE, GRAIN AND PRODUCE

TORONTO LIVESTOCK

TORONTO, April 17.—Trade opened very slow at the Union stock yards yesterday morning. A moderately good run of cattle offering, but not heavy. Demand, however, was quiet, probably influenced by the lower markets at Buffalo and Chicago the past week or two. There were few transactions up to midday, prices at that hour holding steady against lower bidding.

Choice steers and heifers moving slow at $10.00 to $10.50, with the odd weighty steer, choice at $10.75. Fat cows steady, $8.00 and $8.50.

Good demand for springers and milkers, choice springers selling from $90 to $125. Milkers, very choice, from $60 to $90. Common milkers not wanted.

Calves steady to firm all week, tops from $14 to $15.

Lambs, choice, firm from 14c to 15c. Spring lambs, $14 to $16 in bulk. Good yearling sheep, $9 to $10. Barnyard stuff not wanted.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE.

MONTREAL, April 17 (Canadian Press). — A feature of the domestic cash grain market here yesterday was the increased demand that developed from both export and local buyers for Canadian Western oats. A fair amount of business was done, including one sale of 125,000 bushels of No. 1 feed at 6½c per bushel over the Winnipeg May option, c.i.f. Montreal, and some round lots of No. 2 Canadian Western at 11½c per bushel over the May option, c.i.f. Montreal, and sales of No. 3 C.W. were also made at c.i.f. prices.

Owing to the further strength in oats futures at Winnipeg a strong feeling prevailed for spot supplies, and prices were marked up two cents per bushel.

Further strength developed in the market for spring wheat grades of flour and values were advanced another twenty cents per barrel. The local and foreign demand continued dull. The winter wheat flour trade was active and firm.

A moderate amount of business was done in all lines of millfeed and values were unchanged. The tone of the market for standard grades of rolled oats was stronger and an advance in prices is expected shortly.

The demand for eggs was confined to small lots, but the undertone was steady. The receipts were 3,269 cases.

A fair trade was done in potatoes and values were firm.

The market for imported beans was steady, but the demand was of a limited character.

Despite the fact that the demand continued dull, the undertone to the butter market continued firm. The receipts were 460 packages.

Extreme dullness marked the cheese trade, but prices were unchanged. The receipts were 133 boxes.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

CHICAGO, April 17 (Canadian Press). — Buying ardor, ascribed in a great degree to the general public, swept all grain yesterday up to fresh high price records for the season. New advances were in the face of enormous selling to realize profits, and were based a good deal on reports of continued unseasonable cold, dry weather south-west and west, as well as on north-west advices telling of delay to seeding.

Closing quotations for wheat were unsettled, 2 cents to 2½ cents net higher, with rye showing 1½ to 3½ cents gain. Corn finished ¼ cent to ⅝ cent up, oats at a rise of ⅝ cent to 2⅜ cents, and provisions at 2 cents to 10 cents advance.

Unfavorable crop and weather news that came especially from Nebraska and Kansas did much to stimulate general speculative demand in connection with persistent talk that domestic wheat yields this season promise to be short. Meanwhile, increased export business in durum wheat and in rye was apparent, and there was also active buying of wheat available for immediate delivery to United States mills. The Kansas-Nebraska bullish reports which attracted particular notice, were from a Chicago authority who said that out of Goodland, Kansas, to Holdredge and Hastings, Nebraska, after high winds and freezing temperatures, not a single field of wheat is left for harvest.

In some quarters, significance was attached to the circumstance that although world shipments of wheat for the week were heavier at 17,352,000 bushels, compared with 14,221,000 bushels a year ago, the amount of wheat on ocean passage showed a decrease yesterday of 144,000 bushels for the week, and is 63,283,000 bushels against 76,168,000 bushels last year. The United States visible supply yesterday showed 1,206,060 bushels falling off in the last week, and the Canadian visible supply a decrease of 1,230,000 bushels.

Advances in the corn market ran into aggressive opposition, many traders indulging in spread transactions that consisted of selling corn while simultaneously purchasing other grain. However, improved demand for cash corn was reported. Freezing temperatures brought in complaints of damage being done to the new oats crop. Provisions reflected firmness of hog values and of grain.

SCOTT'S EMULSION

ONTARIO WILL MAKE SEED DRILL SURVEY

Will Analyze Samples of Grain and Clover Being Sown.

Ontario farmers are going to find out just what kind of seed they are sowing. There is a general impression, that in some districts, the grain and clover being put in the ground each spring is not what it should be, that weeds re being drilled in with the seed and that neither quality nor varieties are the best. Surveys conducted in other parts of the country have revealed a rather alarming situation, but apart from a few scattered districts in Ontario, nothing definite has been learned. However, arrangements have been completed between the Ontario Department of Agriculture and the Dominion Seed Branch to conduct a seed drill survey that will cover every country and will determine thoroughly just what kind of seed grain and clover, as well as any special crop of importance, is being sown.

Agricultural Representatives will collect at least 50 samples in each country, taking these right out of the drills at seeding time and these will be forwarded to the Seed Branch where they will be analysed. Care will be taken that the results of these analyses are made known to the farmers concerned as several farmers have told J. A. Carroll of the Ontario Department of Agriculture, "If we are not sowing the right kind of stuff we want to know it." spring farmers will know what they are sowing and what dangers from weeds and poor seed they are running, if any, because the survey is going to include the whole Province, right up into the new north, and the samples taken are to be as representative of the various countries as possible.

GOD'S MINUTE

Great is the Lord, and greatly to be praised.—Ps. 145:3.

We rejoice, O gracious Lord, that Thou art willing to hear Thy children call upon Thee. No earthly ruler is as open to his subjects as Thou art to us.

From any place, not merely from a temple or a church; at any time, not only upon sacred days set apart for Thy worship; with any need or desire, Thou dost bid us open our hearts to Thee, and never dost Thou send us away without an answer.

Therefore, made bold by Thy promise and by our own experience of Thy blessings, we come to Thee once again. We praise Thee for Thy mercies, so great and numberless.

We beseech Thee, O Lord, to forgive our sins, for Thou delightest to pardon; whether sins of wrong-doing of evil passion, or of duties left undone. Forgive them all, we pray, and stamp the assurance of pardon, of peace, and of acceptance upon our hearts.

Bless us in making us more like Thyself, conformed to the image of Thy Son. Stand beside us in the hour of temptation to give us victory, and at last bring us to Thyself, to dwell with Thee forever. Amen.

Mortgage Foreclosed!

TAKE a piece of paper and write down the old adage, "What is Home Without a Mother?" Then cross it out and write underneath, "What is Mother Without a Home?" See if it doesn't help you to visualize the plight your family would be in if you died before your mortgage was paid off.

A mortgage is a load for any man to carry. For a widow it is a crushing burden.

An Imperial Mortgage Protection Policy is an honorable man's answer to this problem. At a stroke of the pen you provide a fund that will wipe out the mortgage—should you pass away before it is discharged. If you live, it will present you with a substantial sum in ready cash, and should you become disabled it will give you a regular monthly income as long as you live.

The protective features of an Imperial Mortgage Protection Policy are surprisingly liberal. Let us send you particulars.

FEW DEAD SEEN ON MONS ROAD

He recognized the Balmoral and kilts of his own regiment (the 42nd).

Mr. Tilley—"When did you first have conversation with Mr. Preston?"

Witness—"Only once in my life; about a week ago. I never discussed the matter with Mr. Wilson."

Sergt. Cook

Sergt. Cook was in Mons and vicinity November 11, 1918, as orderly room sergeant of the 4th Brigade. He produced a personal dairy. Mr. Tilley insisted the entries from the diary must be the witness' own knowledge, not hearsay.

Witness—"Yes, Fred Fisher was killed I did not see him killed. I saw his grave after the armistice. The grave is in Mons. I last saw Fisher alive November 7, 1918." He has records of the war which he kept as souvenirs. Col. Orde would have the same in the original. The war diary of the 4th Brigade was called for.

The judge censures Mr. Regan for a remark re government documents. He says there are limits to which counsel may go with remarks made in court.

Col. Duguid, recalled, said he had the document. He could not show it, but only give information from it. Col. Orde so understood his orders. Mr. Regan asked for the war diary Nov. 9, 10, 11, 1918, for the 4th Canadian Infantry Brigade. He read the diary to himself to see if anything of a secret nature was contained.

Col. Duguid gave evidence from the War Diary. Nov. 1-4, 1918 no casualties. Nov. 5, no mention of casualties. Nov. 6-7-8 no casualties. Nov. 9th, 4 officers, 18 other ranks, names and ranks of officers not included. Mr. Regan declared this not in accordance with field regulations. The diary showed the casualties for Nov. 9-10-11 grouped under entry dated Nov. 9. On the days when the entries were made separately, the unit was not in line. Mr. Regan asked for a copy of the diary showing casualties.

W. T. R. Prevon asked the witness had he original copies from which the diary was cimpiled. Col. Duguid thought he had them here and was ordered to look them up. Questioned by Mr. Tilley, Col. Duguid said the diary was not an official record of individual casualties. He detailed the manner of compling the diaries, repeating that the unit was not in line from Nov. 1-8, 1918.

George L. Wass.

George L. Wass was with the 4th C.C.S. He was in Valenciennes in November, 1918. He attended wounded Nov .11, 1918. One of these died. Two said they were wounded at Mons. He helped sew the dead in a blanket for burial. Mr| Regan produced a proclamation alleged to be from the burgomaster of Mons. Mr. Tilley objected to the document as not evidence. Objection sustained.

Wass, the witness, told how casualites were identified by the field card when brought to the C.C.S. He did not know where or when the men were injured, merely treating their wounds.

To Mr. Tilley the witness replied that he saw the wounded at about seven in the evening. The cards were atached to the wounded at the field ambulance before coming to C. C.S.

Mr. Regan—"When was a casualty with leg amputated, wounded?"

Witness—"I only know from what he told me that he took credit for being the last Canadian hit in the war.

William J. Smith.

William J. Smith was overseas with the 8th Engineers, 3rd Division. On Nov. 10th and toward the morning of the 11th they erected a bridge across the canal entering Mons. One dead Canadian was taken from the canal on the morning of the 11th, about 8 or 9 o'clock. He had a medal from the Belgian government to the 3rd Division Canadians for the relief of Mons. The Judge refused to allow it filed as an exhibit.

The witness saw no shells fired in Mons, only two outside of Mons on a working party. The wounded were Highlanders of the Third Division, taken out toward noon.

Questioned by Mr. Tilley the witness said he saw wounded after they were in the dressing station. The Engineers were following the troops, who were already in Mons. He heard no shells save two near a working party which wounded men.

William Teddiman.

William Teddiman, Toronto, was overseas in B Company, 52nd Battalion, 9th Brigade, 3rd Divisoon, under Lieut.-Col. W. W. Foster, D.S.O. He entered Mons Nov. 11, 1918, late in the afternoon between 4 and 7.30. It was after a review of the troops by Gen. Currie. He saw three or four dead Canadian soldiers. They were lying on the paved road, and were 42nd Canadian Highlanders, 7th Brigade. He identified them by the "battle patches" used for instant recognition of various units. There was artillery fire during the night of Nov. 10th and 11th. He received orders the following morning to draw "battle stores." They were to go forward into Mons to relieve the 7th Brigade there. At 10.15 a.m. the company commander said hostilities were to cease at 11 a.m. The men were dismissed temporarily. Later they went forward as originally intended. In some cases the wounded and dead could not be promptly removed from the field. In some cases he had seen bodies unburied for four days. He was of the impression that the men were killed Nov. 11.

Replying to questions by Mr. Tilley witness said he was "on the march" Nov. 10 till about three in the afternoon. He was some miles from Mons and did not enter Mons till the afternoon of the eleventh.

The bodies of the dead Canadians were actually in Mons?

He saw no German bodies. They were in Mons some two or three weeks

Mr. Regan asked the witness to tell what went on in Mons November 11th in the afternoon.

Tilley—"Are you asking him to guess at it?"

Regan—"I am asking him to tell what the world knows."

Judge—"Then the jury will know."

W. Wilson

W. Wilson, an accountant, was over seas with the P.P.C., S.L.I. transport. He told of the movements of the Battalion November 10. There was shell fire that night. He was wounded with two others on the night of November 10. None of the three died. The shell fire was heavier in the evening and he was wounded about ten o'clock.

A. T. Wesiggley.

A. T. Wesiggley Librarian Parliament Buildings, Toronto, was asked by Mr. Regan to produce a copy of the London Times.

Mr. Tilley objected and the Judge ruled that the paper should not be produced.

Mr. Regan thought a corps commander of troops in the foreign field should consider the political situation. He claimed that he was trying to prove that when General Currie issued the order on November 9th which resulted in the capture of Mons, he knew hostilities would cease in a few days.

This opinion by Mr. Regan precipitated an argument between counsel which resulted in the original documents being brought to the fore once again.

Meantime the witness stood patiently waiting in the box at ten minutes to one. The judge permitted the jury to leave the court during the argument. The witness was told he would be required at two o'clock and was allowed to leave.

The first witness this afternoon was F. C. Lingard, a wireless operator with the Canadian Corps, who received a message from the 4th Dist-H. Q. to the 4th Brigade H. Q. about eleven o'clock that night. The message in code was deciphered by the corporal in charge. The message said the armistice would be signed at 11 o'clock November 11th. He delivered the message to the corporal, the proper person for him to turn over the message to.

To Mr. Tilley, the witness replied that he was at Valenciennes when the message was received. He kept no copy. Art. Pete. Mackay, Toronto enlisted Aug. 16, 1915 and was discharged May 25, 1918. He was at Mons with the signallers of the 2nd Machine Gun Battalion. At 7 o'clock, Nov. 11th, he was ordered to go forward and open communications from Mons by eleven o'clock. Headquarters of the company were about 12 or 14 miles from Mons. He proceeded to carry out orders. He met and conversed with a chaplain .eH walked through Mons by Nov. 12th. A Belgian called him and two companions aside and showed them three Canadians and two Germans prepared for burial in wooden boxes. November 13th he was running wire from their location. A dead German was still in the shed but the Canadians had been removed.

To Mr. Tilley the witness said it was actually in Mons that he saw the dead about half a mile from the square. He was billeted about five hundred yards from the shed. He revisited the place Nov. 13th. The Canadians had gone but the Germans were still there.

Robert E. Mason.

Robert E. Mason was overseas with the 20th Battalion from October, 1915, to the end of the war. He was at Mons and recalled November 11, 1918. The battalion was about to move off for Mons on November 10. The witness left with details. He arrived at the billets in a mining village about 3 or 4 in the afternoon, and stayed there till the morning of Armistice. He heard of the Armistice about half-past ten, and saw three dead Canadians on the way into Mons. He recognized one he believed was a Princess Pat. The dead were on stretchers, and some had flowers. He was "absolutely sure they were in Mons." The bodies must have been carried there. He first heard of the likelihood of the Armistice from a staff officer of the Fourth Brigade.

Col. J. A. Currie.

Col. John Albert Currie had been a military man since 1892, when he joined the Canadian Army as a captain of the 48th Highlanders. On August 19, 1914, Col. Currie volunteered for service, was accepted by General Sir Sam. Hughes, and went to France in command of his own battalion instead of going on the staff as he wanted to get to the trenches. "I feared I might be left in London if I went on the headquarters staff," said the Colonel. "Sir Arthur Currie was head of the 2nd Brigade, and I was in the 3rd Brigade of Highlanders."

Mr. Regan asked about the Second Battle of Ypres, and Mr. Tilley objected as he claimed the court was concerned with Mons.

Mr. Regan said he wanted to show that there was a tremendous loss of life at this battle of Ypres. From this question it was quite evident Mr. Regan wished to place the responsibility of this loss of life and the statements later made in the House of Commons by Sir Sam. Hughes where they properly belonged.

Mr. Tilley consulted General Currie and the other lawyers for the plaintiff and left it with the Presiding Judge for a ruling. Mr. Regan argued his point, claiming that the evidence would determine some of the clauses that General Currie claimed in his suit were damaging to his reputation.

His Lordship wished to know to what issue the answer of this question would be relevant.

Mr. Regan replied he wanted to show the want on waste of life in battle, and also evidence as to the reputation of General Currie.

His Lordship—"Evidence of reputation must be generally not the opinion of some one person. I am unable to grasp your idea of putting in this evidence. I will allow you to ask this question, but. Col. Currie, do not answer until I rule on it." said His Lordship.

"It is very painful to be here and not able to speak on my own behalf," said Col. Currie. Col. Currie then went on to describe the position of the Canadians at Ypres. His Lordship: "Ask the relevant question, 'Did you see any loss of life that should not have taken place at that place, and was such loss of life due to Sir Arthur Currie?'"

Witness said "Yes" and then "I think there was," but was stopped by his lawyer, as His Lordship had not given his ruling.

Mr. Tilley wanted to know if this loss of life was going to be discussed all through the war. Mr. Tilley claimed it should refer to Mons, and his client in the article was not included in other loss of life during other engagements during the war.

"It seems to me, Mr. Regan is trying to put something in the evidence that is not made in this article," he said. "Mr. Preston has a ready pen and he may contemplate writing more but what is set up in the case refers to Mr. Preston's libel of Sir Arthur Currie's action at the Battle of Mons."

"I don't think we can develop this into a trial of all questions relative to the ability shown at all times by the plaintiff and I will rule that the evidence as to the action of General Currie at the Battle of Ypres is not relevant to this case," said His Lordship.

that will impel a man to remain in his own Canada rather than be ready to beat it to the States if he thinks he can improve his position in the slightest. We want Canadians here to show some of the qualities that they exhibit when they move south of the border. A Canadian who goes to the States finds himself in something of the position of the newcomer here. He knows he is a migrant and he knows that he is called on to do his best to keep going. We want them to remain here and do that.

"The organization has steadily refused to allow itself to become a medium for the propogation of the ideas of any faddists. We had some trouble with members at first who sought to convert it into a body having for its object independence and separation fom the Mother Country. These were over-ruled and most of them are now outside of the organization. As a matter of fact the constitution was drawn up by an Englishman resident in British Columbia, and we have had great help from many Old Countries Canadians who have made valuable suggestions from outside the order."

Apart from the question of immigration, continued Dr. Cotton there were many fields which might profitably engage the attention of the Native Sons of Canada. One of these was the menace of Communism which, he declared, was spreading with much greater rapidity than many people in the Dominion realized.

HARMSWORTH'S UNIVERSAL ENCYCLOPEDIA

BLACK AND WHITE PROOF!

The Montreal Daily Star, Montreal:
It is the ideal encyclopedia for the busy man or woman . . . . best and latest information on every subject under the sun. Its Canadian articles are splendid.

B. W. Rice, R. B. Rice & Sons, Toronto:
It has already proved to be worth many times its cost. . . . . The children are delighted with the volumes . . . . a real achievement and a decided asset to any library.

Rev. R. Moorhead Legate, B.D., Burlington:
Containing the "meat" of every subject of interest under the sun, it forms a most valuable addition to my library . . . . a real help to a minister or public speaker.

Library of Parliament, Ottawa:
It embraces in its scope a somewhat larger series of subjects of a more or less important character than those customarily dealt with in an encyclopedia.

Dr. D. Whyte, Principal, Normal School, Hamilton:
A concise yet comprehensive Encyclopedia, well suited to the needs of Public and High School classes . . . being free from unnecessary technical terms.

The Globe, Toronto:
It is a work of rare value and completeness and a production of which the publishers may well be proud.

Dr. A. C. Casselman, Principal, Normal School, North Bay:
Harmsworth's is indeed "Universal" because there has not come up any topic that cannot be found in it.

The Spectator, Hamilton:
The treatment accorded technical and scientific subjects is practical and strictly modern, the articles being the work of authorities.

Dr. William Prendergast, Principal, Normal School, London:
I know of no work in which that short form of information or history can be got as in "Harmsworth's Universal Encyclopedia."

Librarian, Westmount Library, Westmount, Que.:
"Universal" seems to be the correct adjective. So far, your encyclopedia meets our needs in a wonderful manner.

The Border Cities Star, Windsor:
It is giving excellent satisfaction in our office . . . no one could ask for anything more substantial in either binding or contents.

The Canadian National Railways, Montreal:
Maintaining as we do an extensive reference library, we have found it invaluable in our work.

Harmsworth's Universal Encyclopedia will lighten the load you try to make your memory bear.

JACK MINER AND THE BIRDS

AND SOME THINGS ABOUT NATURE

A Republication of the Book by Permission of the Author, Jack Miner of Kingsville, Ont.

CHAPTER XVII.

Birds as Missionary Messengers.

Since 1915 I have more than doubled the interest of my bird-tracing system by stamping a selected verse of Scripture on what previously was the blank side of the tag. Now whoever is lucky enough to get a bird with my tag on it gets a personal verse of Scripture, whether he needs it or not. Safety first! No harm done. I said "personal," but of course there are exceptions. In case you are bald-headed and when out shooting you bring down a good fat goose wearing a tag, and on investigation you find that the message reads: "The very hairs of your head are all numbered. Matthew 10:30," if you don't think this goose was intended for you just place the tag back on its leg and hand it to the other fellow.

However, I do not feel that I should pass on without first giving you an explanation of how this great advantage was handed to me.

On Saturday afternoon in the fall of 1914 I was standing in a shoe store in the town of Kingsville, conversing with two gentlemen, when a plainly dressed Salvation Army lassie approached us and holding out a small roll remarked, "Buy a calendar, gentlemen; buy a calendar?" I happened to be the last one to refuse, but as I shook my head I glanced at the situation. We three men all wearing good warm overcoats, and this girl, dressed in what I would call a summer suit. I spoke just as she was turning away. She at once whirled, her face beaming with smiles as she held out the paper roll towards me, while I dropped a quarter in her other extended hand and carelessly pushed what she had sold me down into my outside overcoat pocket. I have never seen her since to my knowledge.

A few days later I noticed a beautiful picture hanging on our dining-room wall; its outer cover appealed to me very much, so I got up and walked to it and began asking a volume of questions. Where did you get that? Who brought it here? Where did it come from? and so forth. Mrs. Miner turned and said, "Why you brought it home. We found it in your overcoat pocket."

By this time I had lifted the outer cover and found it contained a selected verse for me to consider each day in the year. This was the first one I read: "From this day I will bless you."

I then studied one after another of them until I had read and reread dozens and dozens of these encouraging promises that seemed to fill the whole room with heavenly bread right from God's own oven of love.

The overflow of my heart was: How can I pass it on? I decided to select a few of these verses that had hit me square in my living room, and have them put in booklet form, then pass them on to friends as my Christmas greetings.

That week we were burning our last kiln of drain-tile for the season. It had been our custom that I start work at one o'clock, a.m., my eldest son taking the first part of the night. I am on duty, firing, every half hour, which takes me from ten to fifteen minutes; then I withdrew from the heat and roar of the fires, and lean back in our old chair with my feet upon a wheel-barrow. The clock is hung where the glare of the light will shine on its face and I take things quite comfortable for fifteen minutes at a time. I pull the blanket up over my shoulders and lie right back.

It is a beautiful warm morning for the time of the year; in fact the park pond is not frozen over, and the ducks and geese are still here. The silence is broken now and then by the crowing of the roosters, which is Nature's introduction to the new day. The sky above my face looks bluish-black, illuminated with thousands of twinkling stars, and each is staring me right in the eyes. There I am—alone. I pick out a space between four bright stars and try to count the dimmer ones in that small area, until the whole heavens seem to burst open with wireless messages, and my heart is the central station.

I have said I am alone. Yes, I am alone in company with Him who has been the foundation of all my success; alone with Him who, time and again while in the northern wilderness, has heard my earnest, awkwardly-worded request and has guided me to my lost companions when my strength and ability had failed; yes, when the night has been as black as ink, and the stormy gale was causing the trees to fall all around us, He has guided me safely back to our tent that is pitched in the second-growth timber beside some little stream or lake. Yes, I am alone with the same great, loving Power who has made millions of bare-foot boys into real men, even after fathers' and mothers' kind teachings had failed.

Just then I heard the swish of a flock of ducks' wings and their low quacking as they dropped into the pond about two hundred feet away. At that moment one corner of my mind's eye had apparently drifted over to the three hundred and sixty-five blessings I had bought of the Salvation Army lassie for twenty-five cents, and like a star shooting across the heavens God's radio said: "Stamp these verses on what is now the blank side of your duck and goose tags."

I threw the blanket off my shoulders and jumped to my feet, for I now had my tagging system completed!

In less than a week I had the fowls of the air carrying the word of God, and in six months they were delivering it from the sunny side of the Atlantic to the far-off Indians and Esquimaux of Hudson Bay. And to-day I do not hesitate in saying that I have the most accurate and most fascinating bird-tagging system of any man, or combination of men, standing on the American continent, as the verse of Scripture has more than doubled the interest.

This brought Rev. J. W. Walton to my home, here. Mr. Walton has been an Anglican missionary on the east coast of Hudson Bay for over thirty years. And when he and I grasped hands in my dooryard we were compelled to believe that we were introduced by the fowls of the air, for his letter of introduction was several goose-tags which I had sent out in previous years. The geese were killed by the Esquimaux, who took the tags to the reverend gentleman for an interpretation.

This system also brought to me another letter from the far North, which is of unusual interest. It reads as follows:

"I have to admit that I have delayed the sending of this tag to you, longer than I should. Hope I have caused you no inconvenience.

"The passage of Scripture on this tag is one which had I fully realized God's power, and the full extent of its meaning in the past, how often would I have said 'Get thee behind me, Satan,' and would have come out of it 'more than conqueror;' but, sorry to say, in most cases the opposite has been the result. Rest assured your message has done some good."

One duck, killed in Louisiana, brought to my home thirty-nine interesting letters of inquiry. Among them was a letter from the Arkansas State Prison, reading as follows:

"My name is ——. My room-mate's name is ——. I am in here for overdraft on a bank; my room-mate, who is sitting at my elbow, is in here for murder. We have a paper here giving an account of a duck killed in Louisiana with a tag on its leg marked 'Have faith in God.' We have looked this up in our Bible; we find that the reference given is correct. We would be pleased to hear from you, to know more about your interesting life with the birds. However, if you do not see fit to write us, we trust you will not be offended at getting a letter from here. We remain,

Yours,

Arkansas State Prison."

Little did I think when I stamped this verse on the tag that the duck carried away, that the message would ever find its way into a prison cell, and lodge in the heart of a murderer.

CHAPTER XVIII.

How Wild Ducks Conceal Their Nests.

Possibly there is none of our birds that can conceal its nest better than the wild duck. This may be due to the fact that she has to be father and mother both.

In the first place she selects a spot where the foliage, dry sticks or weeds, are exactly the same color as herself. I once found a black duck's nest right beside an oak stump that was charred black by being partly burned away, and really if you weren't careful you might look at her all day and not see her, as she was exactly the same color.

Yes, I know there are a lot of people who will say "Oh, that just happened that way." I tell you right here it did not happen that way. This is a gift to help these creatures out, and there is no man on earth can conceal anything better than a wild duck can her nest. An intelligent man once asked me how I hid when I hunted wild geese. I told him I covered myself with a blanket, and in a few weeks I saw him returning from a hunt carrying a red horse blanket.

After the duck has the spot selected she gathers a few twigs and so forth, but she lays the eggs right on the bare ground, going to her nest late at night and leaving long before the stars disappear in the morning. As soon as the crows start scouring the country, she flies back to the vicinity of her nest. I have seen a duck give a crow an aerial battle three or four times a day. But of course two crows are one too many for her.

From the time she starts laying, she covers the eggs very carefully with grass and sticks before she leaves the nest, therefore they are absolutely out of sight and protected from a slight frost, such as we sometimes have after the wild ducks have started laying. When the eight to twelve eggs are laid she pulls down off her breast and covers them. Now comes the question, how can she pack these eggs in that down, and cover them with sticks and grass, and not leave a sign of down to indicate that there is a duck's nest within a mile? This is certainly a piece of shrewd work.

Wild ducks seldom ever leave their nests in the daytime after they start to set. I often go back to the north pond and watch them come home to feed, just at dusk, and they are usually there at twilight in the morning. This compels me to believe they sometimes stay off all night. However I found this duck's nest, and one extremely hot day I saw her in the pond, so I slipped away with the kodak and got the two photographs. After I took one, I removed the down. The down keeps the eggs warm until the old lady returns; you see the heat of her body gets the ground good and warm; then she packs the down carefully and firmly around the eggs, which holds the warmth there. She then puts the thatch of grass and sticks over the down and all is O.K., for she can stay away twenty-four hours if she sees fit.

Yes, we human beings invented a great thing when we produced the thermos bottle, but to the fowls of the air the invention is as old and as new as this beautiful earth.

Then when the young are hatched and old enough to catch insects, the mother starts off with her little sweethearts toddling after her in single file towards home, where she knows she will be helped in raising her family.

Her feathers are slightly ruffled, but this is a wild duck's way when caring for its young. To me it is a beautiful sight, knowing she is on her way to the park where she will receive food and protection in time of need.

(To be continued)

More daughters of physicians are found in successful authorship in the United States than in any other line of work. Recent investigation of the careers followed by doctors' daughters show that they are prominent also in fine arts, in philanthropy and in humanitarian work, in educational and library work, and in literature, in which last they exceed men in number.

STRANGE AS IT SEEMS— By John Hix

Rain In Southwest Causes Drop in Wheat

CHICAGO, April 17 (Canadian Press).—Forecasts of rain in the southwest gave a sharp setback today to wheat values here. Besides the Liverpool wheat market displayed unexpected weakness and the quantity of wheat in Canada was shown to be 10,000,000 bushels more than had been reported. Opening ⅝ to 2⅜ cents off Chicago wheat subsequently developed considerable power to rally. Corn and oats were relatively firm; corn starting unchanged to ⅛ cent down, and later scoring some gains.

Mine Trade Irregular With Changes Small

TORONTO, April 17. Canadian Press. — Trading on the Standard mining exchange this morning was irregular, with the prices generally unchanged. Teck Hughes was strong with a 15 point gain, selling up to 9.00, Sudbury Basin made a 25 point gain at 9.40 after opening at 9.20, the same as yesterday. Wright Hargreaves at 435 was up nine; Howey gold made a 3½ point gain at 90½. Most gains however were fractional, with exceptionally light trading being done. Hollinger consolidated at 1630 suffered a loss of 40. Pend Oreille and Sherritt Gordon were also weaker, selling down 10 and 15 points at 16.40 and 18.10 respectively.

Bank Shares Advance Features Two Markets

TORONTO, April 16.—Canadian bank stocks had the most spectacular advances in their history in trading on the Montreal and Toronto Stock Exchanges Saturday. Most striking of all was the demonstration made by Royal Bank stock, which opened at 408, 20 points above the close on Friday, and then ran rapidly up to 440, which was 52 points more than the previous day. It fell to 430, but the net result was that these shares were valued by the market at the close of trading on Saturday $42 more a share than the same markets had valued them 21 hours earlier. This close represents a valuation of $60 per share more than on the day before Easter. In a fortnight the gain has been $70. The low point in 1927 was 344, or $96 a share less than the last quotation.

Record of Rising Prices.

The increased valuations shown on Saturday for these Canadian bank stocks were as follows, as compared with the previous day, with a fortnight ago, and with the low point in 1927:

	Close Satu'y.	Close Fri'd.	Close Mar. 31.	Low 1927
Royal	430	388	360	344
Commerce.	315	296	286	228
Toronto	335	305	300	227
Montreal	380	365	355	272
NovaScotia	397½	387	388	300
Dominion	275	270	267	217½
Imperial	255	253	252	214
Standard.	251	248	246	196

The increases in these stocks to the close of trading on Saturday, 1st from the previous day, and 2nd from the low points in 1927, were respectively as follows: Royal, 42 and 96; Canadian Bank of Commerce, 19 and 87; Bank of Toronto, 30 and 108; Bank of Montreal, 15 and 108; Bank of Nova Scotia, 10½ and 97½; Dominion Bank, 5 and 57 7-8; Imperial Bank, 2 and 41, and Standard Bank, 3 and 55.

American Syndicates Buying.

It will be seen from the foregoing figures that the dramatic advances made on Saturday were the continuation of a process which has been going on over a year or more. To a certain extent it has been part of the general upward movement shown by all stocks of merit and promise, but specific influences have been working toward higher prices in the case of the Canadian banks, in that certain United States syndicates have been accumulating Canadian bank stocks, believing that the growing prosperity of Canada is bound every year to redound to the advantage of every soundly run institution in the Dominion.

Several times fears have been expressed that this continual buying by United States interests might endanger Canadian control of Canadian banks, but it has been pointed out repeatedly that the volume of trading is never very considerable in bank shares, as these are held, for the most part, for investment, the holders being well satisfied with their position, and not looking for speculative profits. As a result, the floating supply is always very low, and when a considerable order is received to buy at the market, there must be a quick upward rise of the particular stock ordered.

Turnover of Shares.

The demand on Saturday was comparatively very high—higher than has been experienced for a long time. The turnover in shares would not be considered large in most of the popular stocks on the market, but because bank stocks, as a rule, are so closely held by investors the trading on Saturday looked large by contrast.

Usually only a few shares change hands, but Saturday the sales on the Toronto and Montreal Stock Exchanges, respectively, were as follows: Commerce, 206 and 91, or 297 shares in all; Dominion, 60, in Toronto only; Imperial, 30, in Toronto only; Montreal, 44 and 124, or 168 in all; Royal, 430 and 499, or 929 shares in all; Nova Scotia, 87 and 35, or 122 in all; Standard, 85, in Toronto only. The method of the accumulators of bank stocks in the past has been to come into the market occasionally so as not to have it go too high on them, and to switch operations from one stock to another and from one exchange to another. Their orders on both exchanges Saturday were to buy at the market, and bids had to run up very high in order to bring out the shares ordered. The turnover was very small in relation to the great body of the shares, and, except for the spectacular features of the trading, there was no great significance to the movement, except, it may be, to show that Americans have a very high opinion of Canadian banks and their prospects.

COSTES PLANS NEW FLIGHT.

PARIS, April 17. — (Canadian Press.)—Le Matin to-day quoted Dieudonne Costes, French flier, as saying he is more interested in obtaining a good plane for a flight from Paris to New York than in receiving the honors heaped upon him and his companion, Joseph Lebrix.

No Trial Flights.

STOLP, Germany, April 17. Canadian Press. — Confident that the Italia is able to withstand the rigors of the Arctic flight General Nobile the commander of the Italian polar expedition, said that no trial flights were planned for the dirigible before the start of the flight.

Summoned to a Baltimore traffic court, a young woman of that city testified that she passed the red traffic signal because the sun was in her eyes and she could not see the light. But the judge pointed out that the sun rises in the east and the defendant was driving west, so he lightened the young woman's purse to the extent of five dollars and costs.

Downward Trend Shown In Toronto Market To-day

TORONTO, April 17 (Canadian Press)—A downward trend was shown on the Toronto Stock Exchange this morning. International Nickel, after opening unchanged from yesterday's close at 90½, eased down to 88¾ at noon for a net loss of 1¾ points. Page Hersey suffered a 3¾ point loss, selling down to 99¼, while Laura Secord and Canadian Industrial Alcohol also suffered one point losses. International Petroleum and Northern Bakeries were active, selling down ¾ and ½ point respectively. British American Oil was prominent in the unlisted section, closing strong at 37⅝ for a loss of ⅛ over yesterday. Hiram Walker and Seagrams both displayed strength and closed at 63 and 22½ respectively for gains of 1 and ½ points.

The banks suffered considerabl on this morning's market. Bank of Toronto, after opening at 320, slumped to 316 at the close for a loss of nine. Commerce, Royal, Dominion, and Imperial also suffered losses of from four to seven points. Montreal and Nova Scotia registered

IN POLICE COURT

Remanded until this morning, after facing a charge of having liquor without a permit, James Akey, of this city, appeared before Magistrate O. A. Langley in Police Court at 10 o'clock, and within a few minutes had heard imposed upon him a $250.00 fine, plus $47.15 costs, with one month at hard labor in the common jail as an alternative. His Worship's judgment, as given the court, came after a verbal review of the case during which he took cognizance of the wordings in the statutes which determined just what may be considered a private residence, as well as the possibility of ownership.

J. A. O'Brien, appearing for Mr. Akey, immediately gave notice of appeal.

"This case turns largely upon the question of whether the room with the cupboard (which contained the beer, opening into it, and located in a building used by the accused as a livery, might be termed a residence within the meaning of the section," said His Worship. He went on to state that the place had not been used as such exclusively; that accused was, at the time of the offence, occupant of the room, though an employee had slept there and had had meals there sometimes; the only way to reach the hay loft to throw hay to the horses was through this room. These facts and there being no lock indicative of private occupancy were taken into consideration.

His Worship mentioned that the beer found had come from a government vendor and was, therefore, intoxicating; that though an employee may have owned it, accused had admitted knowing of its presence and was a prima facie partner to the offence, as he was the employer and as it was on his premises. He stated that the onus was on Akey of proving the right to have the liquor, and it had not been proved, and the prima facie case had not been displaced and finally that the employee, Barnard by name, seemed to be used as a sort of bumper between the government vendor and Akey.

In conclusion, Magistrate Langley imposed the fine as above stated.

Thomas Stasicker, charged with assault occasioning actual bodily harm upon his wife, pleaded guilty. He was represented by J. A. O'Brien and was remanded until Thursday, April 19, at 10.00 a.m.

Let him have a bicycle

Mr. J. F. H. Wyse
General Manager
Ontario Safety League
Says:

"The bicycle is one of the safest vehicles of locomotion. All means of locomotion are comparatively safe if operated with care always, and courtesy towards others. I have watched with pleasure many boys who observe the traffic rules carefully. They ride on the right side of the road or street. They put out a hand when it is their intention to stop or turn, and, in general, they follow traffic directions. A careful bicycle rider is very much safer on our streets, congested with traffic, than a child playing on the sidewalk who, thoughtlessly, or to retrieve a ball, runs out into the road without looking."

With, probably, the heaviest traffic conditions in Canada and 75,000 bicycles in the Province of Ontario, the records of the Ontario Safety League prove that your boy is safer on his wheel than playing in the street.

YOUR boy wants a bicycle—a C. C. M. Don't disappoint him. He will only be a boy once.

Some fathers forget what joy a bicycle was to them when they were boys. They don't put themselves in the boy's place.

A bicycle will give him wings. It gets a boy away from street corner influences. With a bicycle he can "See the world". It will give him scope for his energies. It will develop him. A bicycle teaches him his way about, and how to take care of himself. On his bicycle he can ride to the parks and playgrounds, to the open country.

Every boy idealizes a certain brand of skates, or a certain kind of motor car, or a certain brand of jack knife. You'll find when it comes to bicycles

Your Boy Wants a C·C·M:

That's the wheel with the 20-year nickel, the rich, radiant enamel and the padded motor bike saddle. There are many other features he will probably tell you about if you ask him—such as the famous Hercules brake, the top quality Roller Chain, steel rims, the automobile style mudguards, and the Gibson one-piece aluminum pedals. One of these snappy bikes in maroon, green, blue or black, with their sporty gold trimming, would "tickle him to pieces."

BUSY YEAR FOR ALADDIN CO. IS APRIL OUTLOOK

Prospects Brighter Than 1927. B. G. Robinson, Manager, Tells The Examiner.

BIG LUMBER ORDER.

Most Business For Ready-Cut Houses From Ontario and Quebec.

The Canadian Aladdin Company's prospects are brighter than last year's, and 1927 was the best year the company has had since locating in Peterborough.

This information was given The Examiner yesterday by Mr. B. G. Robinson, the general manager of the plant.

"We have 25 men on our payroll", he said, "and in a short time when we get up to our summer strength we will have thirty at work." We have fifteen houses on our order sheet now, and they are coming in steadily. The present orders are mostly from different parts of Ontario and Quebec. We are buying our material from the International Paper Company, and gave them an order for 360,000 feet of pine for framing material and 150,000 feet of pine for interior trimming and finish. We have added new designs to our catalogue this year, and have made various improvements in the specifications for materials used in our ready-cut houses. During 1927 there was a falling off in the 'grade' of hemlock framing to the point that much of it will not come up to our rigid specifications, so this year we will largely use pine. We are paying a bonus on the price of our pine for frames and exterior trim so as to make sure of a grade that is 100 per cent satisfactory. We have also given special attention to our hardware and we know that in every particular our Aladdin homes are the very best for the purpose."

Where Houses Sold.

Mr. Robinson said that comparatively few Aladdin houses were in use in Peterborough.

"You know the old saying 'a prophet hath no honor in his own country', he remarked; "but about 25 per cent of our business comes from this city. That is our general work. We have been making very satisfactory progress in that respect. Quite a number of our homes have gone recently to Oshawa, Welland and Niagara Falls, just to mention a few of the districts that are our best customers. We are working, also, on a contract we got from the Wm. Hamilton Company. It comprises five air flotation racks or machines used in mining. One of them requires 1,500 feet of lumber to build. Two of them are 28 feet long and three are 18 feet long. I understand that they are for Northern Quebec."

Mr. Robinson stated that the instruction sent out with the ready-cut material for Aladdin Homes was so simple and so complete that any man who could "drive a nail without hitting his thumb" could erect them.

"You know how steel framework for buildings is put together," he explained, "well, that's practically our plan on a small scale, except that our material is wood. All the parts of one of our houses are designated, and we provide everything but the masonry.

Other Products.

The company's output includes various household furniture such as kitchen cabinets, bookcases, china cabinets, and other articles. Some of these are made in combination style as for example a combination bookcase and china cabinet, the usefulness of which has to be seen to be appreciated. Expert cabinet makers are employed in this department, and much of the work is done to order. Garages have been recurring rather frequently in the orders of the last year or two.

On the inside shipping platform yesterday was the material for several houses, rafters, studding, joists and all the rest of it assembled, marked and numbered and ready for the first incoming empty car. One of the houses to be built was the Victoria design as shown in the catalogue, perhaps the company's best model, and the material for this one house would fill a forty foot freight car.

The Aladdin factory appears to be an exceedingly pleasant place of work. It is airy and well lighted with ample space for all the machine work. Several new machines have been set up since last year.

Satisfied Buyer.

As an illustration of expressions of satisfaction the company receives in its business relations with the public the following letter was received from Niagara Falls, which indicates the efficiency of this Peterborough factory:

Dear Sir:

In reply to your recent letter if I was satisfied with my dealings with your Company, I can hardly express in words the satisfaction and pleasure it was to do business with you. Your Company went far beyond our contract to see that we were pleased and if you treat all your customers the same way your business should increase at a tremendous rate. At anytime it will be a pleasure to either Mrs. Hurd or myself to show any prospective purchaser of a home in this district through ours, for after a careful inspection, I cannot see how anybody who intends building would build any other way regardless of what any contractor may say for I have had the experience. If I had not found that so, I sure would have let you know for they do say that I am very exact and a little on the cranky side, so you can plainly see when you have pleased and satisfied me there is nobody in this Dominion your Company could not satisfy.

Wishing you and your Company all the prosperity they deserve, I am dear sir,

Yours respectfully,
(Signed) H. J. HURD,
533 6th Avenue.

DEBATE DECIDES FOR THE COUNTRY

grams, its daily newspapers, hospitals, fashions and more important still, markets for its surplus products.

Miss Frankish spoke of the outpost hospitals which have given the country districts a measure of independence from the city institutions. She also spoke of the leather industry which depends for its raw materials entirely on the country. Then not only for food and minerals, fuel and wool is the city dependent on the country, but also for its man power. Reading the obituary list in the city dailies, one sees that the majority of men who have achieved distinction were born and brought up in the rural districts. Miss Agnes McPhail, Canada's sole woman M.P., is a daughter of the farm.

Mrs. Davis spoke of the need of manufacture for many raw materials in order to make them of any value and while the country could supply the material, the necessity, of the city manufacturer to make them fit for use was obvious. As for depending for vegetables on the country, Mrs. Davis mentioned the numerous gardens in the city, where people raised excellent vegetables which were fresher and better flavored than those brought in from the country. The city institutions care for the neglected children, the sick, the poor and dependent.

Miss Mullen had a few minutes to refute the arguments of her opponents and spoke well and summed up her case with a clarity which won a round of applause from the audience.

Mrs. Lawrence Grahame was spokes man for the judges, who were Mesdames J. M. Simpson, L. H. Grahame, and W. W. Leonard. She gave an unanimous decision for the affirmative. The ladies who supported the negative presented their case in an excellent manner, but the affirmative had the best case, for the raw materials are all found in the country. Mrs. Grahame congratulated all the debaters on their addresses which were delivered in a pleasing and agreeable style.

Mrs. J. H. Payne was in the chair for the debate and Miss Lulu Darling acted as timekeeper.

Afternoon tea was served at the conclusion of the program.

GERMAN FLIERS TO CONTINUE HOP

gether in scattered messages from the outpost island of Canada's northland. Through it all is plainly discernible the fighting spirit of the two pilots of the plane, Capt. James Fitzmaurice, Commandant of the Irish Free State Air Force, and the German flying ace, Captain Herman Koehl and the cool fortitude and daring of the backer of the flight and fellow member of the crew, Baron Gunther von Huenefeld.

Barrett's message to the Marconi office here reads:

"Bremen shaft damaged but repairable. Expect leave Greenly Island Wednesday. Bremen had fog and snow during part of its flight. Took Greenly Island lighthouse for sealing steamer, but ascertained that it was lighthouse shortly afterwards and made landing on small pond. Crew were rather exhausted but quite recovered after short time.

(Signed) Barrett."

Fliers Divided

(By The Associated Press)

The three members of the crew of the Junkers monoplane Bremen, who braved together the dangers of a Westward flight across the North Atlantic, were divided to-day, the two Germans standing by their disabled ship on Greenly Island and the Irishman continuing his journey in another plane.

The Bremen left Ireland last Thursday morning, and Friday afternoon, while thousands were waiting to welcome them at New York, the airmen were forced down on the little island locked in ice between Labrador and Newfoundland.

Sunday two pilots and a mechanic forced a hazardous way to the island from the mainland. Yesterday one of those pilots, C. A. (Duke) Schiller, flew away with Captain James Fitzmaurice, co-pilot of the Bremen, taking him for the night to Natashquan, on the north shore of the Gulf of St. Lawrence.

Schillers companion pilot, Dr. Louis Cuisinier, and his mechanic stayed on Greenly Island to give what help they could to Baron Huenefeld, sponsor of the Bremen flight, and Captain Hermann Koehl, the Bremens chief pilot.

From Natashquan it was believed Schiller and Fitzmaurice would fly on to Quebec and thence down to New York. Some, however, thought that the Irish member of the crew would stay in Canada until his German companions were ready to continue in their own plane or another, so that all might reach New York, their original destination, together.

Relief plans for the Bremen continued during the day. Another Canadian Transcontinental Airways plane, similar to the one Schiller and Cuisinier flew, was at Seven Islands, to the south of Natashquan, ready to make the flight to Greenly Island yesterday if it was decided that any assistance could be given.

Establish Relief Base.

A sister ship of the Bremen, the Junkers F-13, left New York Sunday for Montreal and was to establish a relief base either there or at Quebec yesterday. The plane was flown by Fred Melchoir, Junkers expert, who was accompanied by Herta and Erhardt Junkers, daughter and son of the manufacturer.

It was planned to strip the F-13 of any parts needed by the Bremen and ship them in to Greenly Island, with fuel, by plane. If it should prove impossible to repair the Bremen on Greenly Island, Miss Junkers said she would take the crew back to New York in the F-13.

In the meantime, the Canadian government ice breaker Montcalm was pushing forward to the rescue and was expected to arrived at the island yesterday unless piling ice should completely block its course. The Montcalm was prepared to take the Bremen and remaining members of its crew aboard and transport them to some point where they could get all the materials they might need for quick repairs to the plane.

Wives of both the married members of the Bremens crew, Captain Fitmaurice and Captain Koehl, announed from Europe that they would come to American to join their husbands. They will sail on the same ship, leaving Cobh, Ireland, on April 21.

The "Flu" LEFT HER WITH A VERY WEAK HEART

Mrs. Beulah Demone, Pleasant River, N.S., writes:—"Having suffered with the 'flu' a few years ago, I was left with a very weak heart.

"I was unable to go about, and could not do my housework.

"I would get dizzy spells and would have to go and lie down.

"I could not sleep at night as the least little noise would wake me up.

"I tried different kinds of medicine, but they seemed to do me no good.

"A friend recommended MILBURN'S HEART AND NERVE PILLS I have used five boxes and am much better; do not get those dizzy spells, and can do my own work as well as ever."

DAUGHTER OF DURHAM PIONEERS

had no appetite for the ship's fare, because of serious ill-health.

In Millbrook 70 Years.

A continuous residence of over seventy years in one locality gives opportunity for witnessing many changes, and Mrs. Gillott has seen the village grow from a few scattered frame houses and stores, mainly on Tupper street, to its present proportions, a succession of fires, looked upon as a calamity at the time but really a blessing in disguise, wiping out the frame structures and leading to their being replaced by the substantial brick buildings of more recent years. She has seen, too, the population grow to at least 1,500, and gradually lessen again until but little more than half that number was recorded at the last census.

Recalling the excitement and the glowing hopes incident to the coming of the railway through here, Mrs. Gillott tells of the original intention to have the station north on Tupper street toward Dawson's Crossing. "Squire" William Sowden, however, anxious to increase the value of his property west on King street, gave the land on which the station was actually built, hence the diversion of traffic, and King street becoming the main thoroughfare of the community.

Improved Illumination.

For illumination purposes, Mrs. Gillott recalls the making and use of tallow candles; lacking these, some families would make use of the light from the burning wood on the open fireplace, or even take a saucer of fat, place a twisted rag in it, and burn that. She had one of the first coal-oil lamps in the community, but the oil was so crude and the odor so unpleasant it was some time before these became popular among the housewives or the storekeepers. It was a decided event when electric power became available.

When Mrs. Gillott came here to live board walks, one plank wide laid lengthwise, were on one or two streets of the village, but these she has seen replaced with granolithic pavement on practically all of the streets, and this summer the roadway of King Street will be paved as well.

Temperance sentiment has made great headway for fifty or sixty years ago every grocery store sold liquor, the village had five or six hotels, and three breweries. One of the breweries was located on the flats about opposite where the Leach homestead was later built, and kept a number of pigs which were fed on its by-products. Mrs. Gillott remembers an eight-year-old lad trying to cross the marshy ground behind this distillery and being nearly mired, so that he was rescued only with extreme difficulty. She herself helped to restore the exhausted, and badly frightened boy, and clean him up preparatory to being returned to his parents.

The Great Fire of 1873

Interesting reminiscences of the "great fire" in 1873, when nearly the entire village was wiped out, are related by Mrs. Gillott, whose memory is remarkably clear and who has a fair enjoyment of all her faculties considering her extreme age. A "bucket brigade" was the only "fire equipment," the men standing so many feet apart along both sides of the street, and passing the pails as they were dipped from the King Street creek.

In an effort to save their business premises, which had been completely burned only two years before, Mrs. Gillott took up the rag carpet from her front room floor and with some assistance plunged it in a barrel of rain water standing behind the little brick shop which was Carveth's butcher store. Getting hammer and nails from the workshop, and pressing Alf Lough and Wesley Walsh into service, she had the carpet nailed to the ridge board of the sloping roof of the old Breakey building, east of the Gillott premises. Quilts were tacked along the walls below the carpet, and the whole kept wet. When the men of the "brigade" became exhausted and felt they must give up, Mrs. Gillott said she would be one to stand in line and do her share in passing the brimming pails. Apparently this gave them fresh heart, for when Alfred Leach objected to a woman undertaking the heavy task, the men kept on as long as need demanded.

Among Mrs. Gillott's neighbors on Tupper Street when she first came here to reside were Mr. and Mrs James Stratton, and she often nursed the baby in the home, later the Honorable J. R. Stratton, prominent in the public life of the province. Many of the buildings on Tupper Street at that time, the Stratton house among them, stood up on posts to save them from being inundated by the spring floods which were a regular feature. Some time afterward the house which the Stratton family had occupied was moved to the side of what became the Leach homestead, and there it stands to-day.

Doubly Bereaved.

On November 14, 1903, Mr. and Mrs. Gillott celebrated their golden wedding anniversary, and shortly afterward moved into their new home on the corner of Union and Centre Streets, where Mrs. Gillott still resides. Recently she has been doubly bereaved by the death of a brother, Thomas Edwards, who lived at Mitchell, and was in his ninety-fifth year; and a sister, Mrs. Sheardown, who was eighty-six, and whose home was at Crediton, Ontario. Another brother, John Edwards, and Mrs. Gillott are the sole survivors of the family.

Having been burned out twice, and only saved with difficulty from a similar occurrence when the "big fire" of 1873 swept the place, Mrs. Gillott persistently urged her husband to bring the matter of fire protection before the council, of which he was a member. Finally the first "fire engine" was purchased, a hand-power affair that still stands in the fire hall, and that did good service for a number of years. It was usually called "Gillott's Baby," because of his repeated efforts to have the municipal body take action in this important matter.

The Town Pump.

Millbrook is so abundantly supplied with artesian wells to-day, it seems strange to learn that in earlier years a well of good drinking water was decidedly scarce. Mr. Gillott had one behind his warerooms that was so largely patronized it came to be called the "town pump," and when anyone was threatened with being brought before the J. P. (Mr. Gillott), the usual expression was, "I'll have you up before the 'town pump.'"

Although W. J. E. Gillott is her only son, Mrs. Gillott has given a mother's care to two others; one a nephew, Charles Reid, who accompanied her husband home from England, when he was nine years of age, and who died in Winnipeg about twenty years ago, and Margaret, after ward Mrs. Charles Byers, who was also in her ninth year when Mrs. Gillott took her, giving her home until her marriage soon after her eighteenth birthday.

Special recognition was made of the occasion when Mrs. Gillottt reached her ninetieth birthday, a largely-attended reception being held in the afternoon followed by a formal dinner-party at 6 p. m.; but failing health will not permit any elaborate celebration this year.

An ardent lover of flowers and successful in their cultivation, so long as health permitted Mrs. Gillott always supplied the altar table of her church, Grace Presbyterian, with either bouquets, or blossoming house plants from her own garden, or indoor collection, each week-end for the Sunday services. On her birthday each year the Women's League of Grace church always remember their 'honorary member' with a beautiful bouquet, usually of roses, and the fragrant gift will be among the many others from intimate friends presented to her to-day.

WITNESSES' STORIES DIFFER ABOUT DEAD

by the judge and told to ask him questions. He then said "No."

To witness' mind, Commander in Chief signified General Currie. He refused to alter his opinion even when an army book for use in the field was produced defining the term.

Mr. Regan continued to examine the witness closely on the article piece by piece. Finally resting on one point; that headquarters staff would refer to Canadian Corps headquarters.

Mr. Tilley read from the examination for discovery with reference to the location of the second article, not an editorial or front page article, but local news on page four. He read from the examination of W. T. R. Preston, who took responsibility for the article, as he actually wrote it. He discussed it with Mr. Wilson and certain changes were made. He had in mind either the Canadian corps commander or the commander for the whole British army. In the statement regarding the Canadian headquarters staff General Currie was "certainly" included.

Mr. Regan for the defence, said the Minister of defence had been called on to produce certain documents. Three men were present in the court with all or part of the documents. He had not had time or opportunity to examine the documents, and suggested that these men be called and placed in a room open to counsel for both sides while copies were being made of originals. Mr. Regan claimed he was refused admission to the documents while the plaintiffs were allowed full access.

Mr. Regan called Colonel Orde, of the Department of Defence authorized by the Minister to appear in his place. He had brought a large number of documents, which will be disclosed only "in part at the discretion of the minister. All are state documents subject to disclosure at the discretion of the minister."

Operation orders of army corps, Divisions, Brigades and Battalions, will only be produced at the order of the judge.

War diaries, reports, returns, telegrams, personal files and correspondence may be copied.

The Judge would not, in accordance with Mr. Regan's request, order Colonel Orde to make copies, since Colonel Orde had agreed to produce the documents.

Mr. Regan declared that the plaintiff was a military man while the defendants are not. The defendants are therefore handicapped as they do not know how to ask technically for a document.

Col. Orde explained how the documents may be easily procured.

Mr. Regan moves non-suit, saying the article was not libelous, and Justice Rose quashed the motion.

L. J. Hagey, librarian of The Toronto Globe, produced the article in the Globe which is mentioned in the Guide article. The Judge ruled the article irrelevant. Witness stated that if the article is headed Canadian Press Cable, it is a Canadian Press cable. The present news editor of The Globe would be the man who received the cable. Copies are not kept more than one month at the newspaper office. These are kept merely in case of a libel suit, he believes. From experience with The Globe, he can say a cable was received.

The Judge ruled the copy of The Globe can not be used as an exhibit and the witness was dismissed.

Harold Victor Fox, 195,079, Port Hope, was overseas. He was in the 21st Battalion Signal Section, 4th Brigade, 2nd Division. He went to France in 1916, and was wounded in Amiens. He joined the battalion after being wounded, November 9, 1918, situated near Mons. He went "over" on the morning of the 10th. Stopped near Mons just at sundown. One man was killed and some were wounded. He dug in during the night on the side of a small wood. The 25th Battalion went over them. The 21st remained there until well after dinner, November 11. The unit received a message that hostilities would cease. The message came about 7.30 a.m.

He went into Mons on November 11, but had no official orders to do so. He saw three dead men, Canadians, who lay as they had fallen. There was fighting at the time, machine guns and some shell fire. He saw no ambulances or stretcher-bearers at that time. The dead were 3rd Division men. Sullivan was killed about 10 a.m., November 11. He sent a message back to Battalion Headquarters.

Mr. Regan — "Sir Arthur Currie had sworn that there was no Canadian killed on last day of war."

Mr. Tilley—"He did not say that."

Mr. Regan— "We have his statement right here." (Reads from examination for discovery.)

Mr. Regan—"Do you differ with Sir Arthur Currie?"

Witness— "Those men would not be taken into Mons and left lying. Those men were killed between 10 p. m. Nov. 10 and 8 a.m. Nov. 11th."

Mr. Tilley took the witness—"Way could the men not be killed before ten o'clock.

"No troops there, the Germans occupied the territory. I could see machine gun and shell fire from the Canadian position one mile away. The three dead lay beside the roads."

Q.—"Positive there were three?"

A.—"Yes. There were more than three. Some were in Mons.

Q.—"Where were you up till 10 p. m. Nov. 10th?"

A.—"With the 21st Battalion, one mile from Mons. The Germans were in the city of Mons. We advanced 9 to 10 miles during the day of the 10th. We did no more fighting."

Mr. Regan questioned the witness, who claimed that the odd shell was fired after eleven o'clock on the morning of the eleventh to see who would have the last shot.

Edgar Joyce, who had a son killed at the front, produced a photograph. Mr. Tilley objected to the photo. Objection sustained.

The witness continued, stating his son was killed at 11.30 a.m. Nov. 11, 1918. He produced a letter from a chaplain giving the details of his son's death. Mr. Tilley read the letter and said he did not think it added to the evidence on the ground that the letter might fix the date, but not the hour. The letter was finally read in court. It was dated Nov. 12, 1918, and said the son was wounded in jaw, chest and arms and died soon after being brought to No. 1 C.C.S.

Mr. Tilley questioned Joyce, who said his evidence was given on the information received in letters.

Joseph Smith was in the Mons sector in November, 1918. He knows the last witness, Joyce, and knew his son. He saw the son alive for the last time on the right of Mons about 4 a.m., November 11th, also when wounded between 10 and 11 in the morning at battalion dressing station. He was with the 2nd Division in the same battalion. We were both on a ration party. There was plenty of machine gun fire early in the morning. He was in Mons in the afternoon and saw no dead on the way to Mons. Joyce had 13 machine gun bullets in him. He said he was dying. The wounds were mostly in the face and upper part of the body. He recalled the names of his comrades.

Mr. Tilley questioned the witness, who told the same story again.

Charles Leslie, 3rd Machine Gun Battalion, was called on by Regan. He was overseas and was in Mons on November 12 and 13, 1918. He saw a military funeral on the 13th of from 8 to 10 caskets. A photo was produced in court, and in spite of objection by Tilley, the Judge allowed it to be filed as an exhibit.

Leslie said his company went up to Mons on November 11th, about 5 a.m. He saw some dead, a couple of Germans and about four Canadians. He saw no Canadian dead in the city. There was firing when he entered Mons. The enemy was doing most of the firing. They reached the objective about 9.30 .m. They were told not to trade souvenirs with the enemy but to hold in readiness for a possible advance. A German plane came over and dropped bombs so he got down off a roof. Later British planes (11.00 a.m.) flew over with red, white and blue streamers flying from the wings. He could only say when men were killed by what officers and men said.

Mr. Tilley questioned Leslie. He said he knew Mons was the objective only when starting shortly after daybreak, November 11th. We reached Mons about 7 a.m., about two to go through the city. He knew of no one in his unit killed that day. Many shells were flying till nine o'clock, and only a few after that. The Colonel read the message. The funeral was some days later (13th), and burial in cemetery at Mons. The entire city turned out.

Mr. Regan objected to the question regarding the reason for the showing of citizens. Smiles were caused when Mr. Tilley remarked, "I have no doubt the witness recalls the day quite well. He was probably well kissed. Nevertheless, the objection was sustained and the witness was dismissed.

Justice Rose considered that the court had been in session for a sufficient length of time, and after a brief address to the jury as to their conduct during the interval of adjournment, declared the session adjourned till 9.30 a.m. Tuesday.

PEOPLE HONOR DR. THOMSON

Hastings Minister Receives Gifts From Congregation and Presbytery.

MANY ADDRESSES.

HASTINGS, April 17. — A very enjoyable and social evening was spent at St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church on Monday evening, on the occasion of receptions to Rev. Dr. D. A. Thomson, who received on April 10 at Knox College, Toronto, the degree of Doctor of Divinity.

Many local ministers, as well as old friends of Mr. Thomson during his ministry, came from out of town points.

Rev. William Allan, of St. Paul's Presbyterian Church, Peterborough, Moderator of Presbytery, acted as chairman for the occasion.

Rev. Mr. Pippin read the Scripture lesson, Psalm 91, followed by prayer by Rev. James Grier, of Campbellford.

Mr. Allan then addressed the gathering, telling how they had convened and appointed a committee to arrange for this occasion, and Mr. James Dutton was appointed secretary. He wished the audience to feel as a "fireside gathering," or in other words, a family gathering.

Mr. Dutton then read letters of appreciation from clergymen who were invited but were unable to be present. Those read were from Rev. C. S. Bretherton, of Our Lady of Mount Carmel R.C. Church, and Rev. Dr. Eakin, of Knox College.

Mrs. Walter Byers, of Peterborough, sang a solo.

Dr. W. E. Wilson was the first speaker called, and replied with a hearty welcome to all. He referred to several noted Scotsmen, among them John Knox and Robert Burns, who won for the Scottish people a great name, also such men as David Livingstone, Alexander Hamilton, Andrew Carnegie, Thomas Smith, and Lord Strathcona, who left their native land and went to other countries and made good. Thus Dr. Thomson's influence extended indirectly to all corners of the Dominion and these events would remain unforgotten until "the flood-gates of life have closed for ever." Dr. Wilson paid great tribute to Mrs. Thomson, and conveyed his message by reciting "Oft in the Stilly Night."

"Abide With Me," was then given by the quartette composed of Mrs. Byers, Miss Jessie Patterson, John Anderson, and George East, with Martin Chenhall at the piano.

Rev. A. C. Hie with great pleasure conveyed greetings from the Hastings United Church to Dr. and Mrs. Thomson, also his parish for having such an honor conferred upon their pastor.

"This honor conferred by a Christion institution, said Rev. Hie, "upon a man is the greatest honor a man can have. This is greater than any earthly crown."

He closed by stating the greatest fellowship existed among his and Mr. Thomson's congregations.

Rev. Mr. Pippen, rector of the Anglican church, conveyed greetings from his church. He pictured Rev. Dr. Thomson as the strong man, spiritually, having been pastor of this church for 45 years, and he fully understood why Knox College appreciated his wonderful Christian career, derived through his services for a Christian cause.

Rev. Mr. MacLeod of Brighton United Church, then congratulated Rev. Dr. Thomson on his having received such a degree. He referred to conferences they had had while in the Presbytery for a number of years back. He went on to say: "I believe Rev. Dr. Thomson is the only minister to-day who has spent 45 years in one church and that his heart must sometimes feel sad to see his loyal supporters pass away, but again he is also gratified to see so many of the younger generation brought to the altar of the Christian church."

"There is great joy in the work of the ministry, preparing God's message to convey to the people," were his closing remarks.

Alex. Wilson congratulated on behalf of St. Andrew's Church those who had taken part in the program. He read an address and presented Dr. Thomson with a purse of money on behalf of the congregation.

Mabel Fowlds presented Rev. Mrs. Thomson with a large bouquet of flowers.

Rev. James Grier of St. Andrew's Presbyterian church, Campbellford, read an address on behalf of the Peterborough Presbytery and presented Dr. and Mrs. Thomson with a beautiful silver tray.

Rev. Dr. Thomson thanked those who had remembered him and said it was a great pleasure to minister to them. "When I looked into the faces of the graduating class at Knox College last week I wondered how many of them would be ministering in 1973," quoted Rev. Dr. Thomson. He expressed great regret on some of the invited speakers not being able to be present as they were all good old friends of his.

Norwood Presbyterian church conveyed greetings through their pastor to Dr. and Mrs. Thomson.

John Anderson of Peterborough favored the gathering with a vocal solo.

Rev. Mr. Fowler of St. Andrew's Presbyterian church, Warkworth extended greetings from his congregation to Rev. Dr. Thomson. He is just a graduate himself and said the young graduates as well as the older ones should be very proud of Dr. Thomson.

Miss Jessie Patterson rendered a very pleasing vocal olo

W. M. Fowlds on behalf of the St. Andrew's Presbyterian church, thanked those from out of town, for assisting in the program, especially those from Peterboro.

After singing of the doxology, Rev. Archie Thomson, son of Dr. Thomson, on behalf of his mother, sister and brother, expressed great appreciation toward those who had held the reception in honor of his father. Rev. A. Thomson closed the meeting with the benediction.

A lunch was served in the Sunday school room of the church at the close.

OBITUARY

MRS. H. G. FITZGERALD.

LAKEFIELD, April 17.—The funeral of the late Mrs. H. G. Fitzgerald was held on Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock. The service was in St. John's church, which was filled to capacity, many being unable to find room, and was in charge of Rev. W. J. Creighton and Rev. A. W. Mackenzie. The latter spoke briefly of the deceased "as a model wife and mother, the woman who found her greatest pleasure in her home and with her family. She gave of her talents in the service of the church and her beautiful voice was heard in the choir singing the praise of her Lord. Her religion was simple, like that of a little child and she possessed a true and abiding faith in God. We leave her in God's hands having a sure and certain hope of everlasting life."

During the service two favorite hymns were sung, "Nearer My God to Thee" and "On the Resurrection Morning" and as the coffin was moved down the aisle the choir sang the Nunc Dimittis.

The pall-bearers were Messrs. W. H. Casement, Roland Denne of Peterborough, Dr. J. R. Fraser, S. Hunter, J. C. Strickland and E. R. Tate. Leaving the church the cortege proceeded to Lakefield Cemetery where the burial took place.

Mrs. Fitzgerald had made her home in Lakefield since her marriage, nearly twenty-eight years ago and was widely known. She took a prominent part in the work of St. John's Church, particularly in the chancel guild and the choir and in both organizations her sudden passing leaves a gap which will be most difficult to fill for she combined faithfulness with efficiency. For the past few years her health had failed considerably and she was not able to take as active a part in the community life as was her want but she remained deeply interested.

"MY FRIENDS ADVISED TANLAC"

Wonderful Recovery From Stomach Trouble

Friends are constantly advising their friends to try Tanlac. This wonderful tonic body-builder helps them to win back health and strength, and they are so enthused over Tanlac that they want others to use the only medicine in which they have confidence. So, when friends learned that Mrs. Arthur Caloustte, 585 Delanaudiere Street, Montreal, was in such a wretched condition they urged her to try Tanlac. "Stomach Trouble had brought me down to where I was so weak and nervous that life was almost unbearable. I had become just a skeleton of my former self. Tanlac has not only relieved the indigestion, nervousness and dizzy spells—it has increased my weight 12 pounds, and given me the best of health. I simply cannot praise Tanlac enough."

Don't wait. Don't suffer longer. No matter what other treatments you have tried, give Tanlac a chance to prove its marvellous powers in correcting your stomach trouble and giving you new strength, new health, new ambition and enjoyment. LYRICS OF LIFE

DOBBIN'S DAY
(Suggested by H. J. R., Exeter, Ill.)

Old Dobbin's day is over, old Dobbin's day is through;
Another Summer's clover, another year or two,
And Dobbin's eyes will flutter, and Dobbin's legs be still,
And only cars will splutter the highway up the hill.
The buggy's paint is fading, out there behind the barn,
No more it comes a-trading its butter for its yarn;
For now we travel faster than Dobbin's legs could run,
Machinery is master, and Dobbin's day is done.

And yet not altogether, or so it seems to me.
I often wonder whether these days will ever be
As pleasant to remember as days of long ago
When homeward in December we jingled through the snow,
Or when we heard the robin repeat his merry tune,
And drove our good old Dobbin the rosy roads of June.
Old Dobbin's days are ended, yet never quite depart,
For there is something splendid still singing in the heart.

The moon is bright above us, the stream below is fair,
And still the same girls love us, and still the same boys care.
We're driving home from dances, or listening to the birds,
And saving things with glances we couldn't say with words.
And then there comes a marriage, a house among the hills,
And then a double carriage, with Dobbin in the thills.
For memory's a rover, roams back to Dobbin's day,
A day that's never over, whatever men may say.

DRESS
By MARY MARSHALL

The new combination combines brassier top with bloomers that close at the sides with snappers. It is here made from peach-colored silk crepe.

Thirty years ago it was considered rather shocking that Aunt Mary—then a girl—had left off wearing her flannel petticoat, and in the dead of winter. Of course, she wore a short cotton petticoat to begin with—and a long white petticoat, and a ruffled silk petticoat, and her dress skirt had a silk lining, but still she wore only three petticoats!

And a year ago I was rather amused to hear a saleswoman in a fashionable dress shop say that she supposed she was a bit old fashioned, but that she did like to have women at least wear a step-in or a pair of bloomers when they came in to have fittings.

Now I understand it has become the fashion to wear more substantial underthings, though there are many women who like to have this foundation apparel go on all in one piece. There is still some demand for the so-called dance sets—narrow bandeau and short bloomers—that don't even attempt to meet in the middle, but there is an ever-increasing demand for the new underwear of the more adequate sort.

The sketch shows a type of combination originated in France, that combines a fairly closely-fitted bandeau with a pair of knickers. The slender woman may have these made without back or side opening at the bust or waist. The bloomers are opened at the sides and finished with an elastic band run in the lot hem.

BEES HOLD UP TRAFFIC.

HOROSCOPE

The Stars Incline, But Do Not Compel

(Copyright, 1928, McClure Syndicate.)

FOR WEDNESDAY, APRIL 18, 1928.

Good and evil aspects contend today in planetary rule, according to astrology which finds the benefic influences strong.

There is a favorable sway for banks and banking. Great and far-reaching combinations of capital are presaged.

Danger of conflict between competing banking institutions is indicated by the stars which are believed to presage tremendous enterprises for bankers.

Publishing is subject to the most stimulating influences and editors should profit in the coming year.

Advertising is well directed by the stars and this sway should be beneficial for personal publicity.

Much wrong thinking again is foretold by the seers who prophesy a national campaign in which there is much personal enmity, libel and ill-feeling.

Under this planetary government Uranus has a power, it is believed, to make truth appear false and for this reason the mind may be easily confused.

The day is not favorable to those who study and college men may feel unusually averse to books.

Spring fever is likely to be widespread at this time when summer appears near, but work will be a successful medicine.

Women should find this a favorable day for domestic plans and social activities.

It is a fairly lucky wedding day and love should survive many of the slings and arrows of outrageous fortunes.

The evening is particularly auspicious for entertainments and the theatres should benefit.

Persons whose birthdate it is may have a year of emotional stress that ends in happiness.

Children born on this day may reach the heights of fame and fortune. Both boys and girls should be fortunate in love.

Why We Do What We Do.

WHY WE ARE GROUCHY.

By Mehran K Thomson, Ph.D.
(Author, The Springs of Human Action)

We all prize cheerfulness yet there are times when we feel sullen, morose, obstinate, sour, cross, ill-humored, gruff, austere, harsh, spiteful. The slang word that covers all of these unpleasant moods is grouchy.

We are sometimes grouchy because our liver is out of order or the glands of internal secretion are not performing properly or we have had some mental shock in the form of a disappointment or disillusionment.

We are grouchy for lack of self control. The grouchy person has let some disappointment get the better of him. He is like the spoiled child who refuses to play because the other children do not let him win every time.

We are sometimes grouchy because we do not care to participate in social activities. We want to be let alone. And of course the grouch is the best means of keeping people away. It is like the small pox sign.

Not infrequently we are grouchy for the purpose of terrorizing people. We want them to feel bad for having made us feel bad. It is a form of spite and revenge. If you can't get your way by being pleasant you are sometimes more successful by getting angry and morose. People feel so sorry for you that they are willing to do anything to get rid of you.

In so far as grouchiness has the element of obstinacy and gruffness it is motivated by the desire to defend one's self against attack. We do not poke fun at a grouchy person. If you are planning on getting off some prize joke of yours you are careful to select a person who is likely to "take" it good naturedly.

We are sometimes grouchy as a means of getting what we want, of being let alone, of buying freedom from troublesome pleasantries, of inspiring fear and aloofness, and possibly for purpose of terrorizing others.

This sort of practice like all others, is likely to become habitual. It often does. Hence the perpetual grouch.

GUELPH THEATRE DESTROYED BY FIRE

Loss in Fire This Morning Placed at $115,000—Some Insurance.

GUELPH, Ont., April 17 (Canadian Press).—Fire destroyed the Castle Theatre here to-day, nothing but bare walls being left standing. The loss is placed at a hundred thousand on the building alone, with equipment adding possibly fifteen thousand dollars. Four stores in the building were also completely gutted. Smoke was noticed by a policeman on duty at 2.15 a.m., but by the time the firemen arrived the place was an inferno. The building was insured for sixty thousand dollars. The cause of the fire has not yet been determined.

SHOWER BATHS BEST.

In this generation we of America are so used to taking baths that it does not seem possible that bathing is really a modern practice, and that Continental Europe even to-day lags far behind in this hygienic practice.

In the time of the French kings they had no bathrooms or wash tables, and seldom washed at all. In 1780 a student in the Theological School at Leipzig University was not allowed to pass his examination for the Bachelor's Degree because of his modernism, which consisted in washing his whole body. It was whispered that the miscreant actually took baths! The Belgian medical authority in the 18th century advised that if bathing was too difficult an undertaking, people ought to put on clean linen at least once every six weeks.

In the case of the Dutch Calvinists it was good hygienic form to wash one's feet very seldom and the head never, although it was a common practice to wash the hands quite frequently.

In the diary of Pepys the washing of his feet was such an extraordinary event that he marked it down on his diary as having occurred on May 30, 1663.

It will be seen from the foregoing that we are in an advanced state of sanitary evolution, and that there is no reason for pessimism regarding the matter of public hygiene.

It is only within the last fifty years that the use of the bathtub has become quite general even in America. The doctor occasionally finds a patient who believes that it would eb injurious to his health to take a bath every day, but the common practice among our best citizens is to take one or two baths daily.

The increase in bathing has been so general during the last five to ten years that it is now my custom to warn patients against taking too many baths, and to advise them which is the best kind to take. People sometimes develop almost a mania for taking too many tub baths, and consequently weaken themselves by the use of too much warm water which makes their tissues flabby and depresses the circulation on account of the relaxing effect of the heat upon the blood vessels.

The best kind of a bath for all purposes is the shower bath. This can be taken in an ordinary bathtub if you do not have a built-in shower. You can secure an attachment for the bathtub in any drugstore at a cost of about a dollar, which is suitable for the purpose. A good plan is to take some exercises upon arising in the morning, and follow this with a cold shower bath, allowing the water to first play on the feet, then higher up on the body until the whole body has been wet for five or ten seconds. There is no advantage in taking a long bath even if it is a shower bath. The body should be dried vigorously with a coarse towel, and the skin made to glow under the effect of the rubbing.

Another good time of the day to take a shower bath is late in the afternoon, before dinnertime. It is always a good plan to take some vigorous physical culture exercise prior to the shower, as this will increase the circulation and open up the pores, which can then be cleansed by the flowing shower bath. If you are ever going to use warm water, take your warm shower just before retiring, when it will act as a sedative, and tend to relax the nervous system.

The only danger in taking too many baths is that you are apt to take too many tub baths, especially of warm water. It is almost impossible to take too many of the shower baths, particularly if you use cold water as much as possible.

Questions and Answers.

Question—Mary J. asks: "What causes hard skin around the finger-nails? How may I stop this? Also, what is lime water good for? Is it good to take when one has boils?"

Answer—There is a natural hard ring of skin around the fingernails. This is made tougher if it is trimmed or clipped during the manicure. Lime water is used to counteract stomach acidity and, with other alkaline water, is frequently recommended for the treatment of boils. But it takes more than this to stop the cause of boils which come from a combination of outside infection and a thoroughly toxic blood stream.

Question—Housekeeper writes: "You mention wholewheat mush in your menus for breakfast. Can one buy this kind of wholewheat where the health foods are sold?"

Answer—Almost every small city now has a store where you can buy real wholewheat flour or the coarse grained wholewheat which may be used for mush. Wherever you find a health food store you will surely be able to get this ground wholewheat.

Question—B. R. B. writes: "I am 24 and have had an enlarged gland in my neck since I was 5. It is about the size of a pea. Causes me no trouble, but I do not like the looks of it. Sometimes when I have a cold it is larger. Should I have it removed by surgery?"

Answer—The enlarged gland is probably an over-distended lymph node which gets larger when you have a cold due to the increased amount of waste carried by the lymphatic circulation. This enlarged gland can doubtless be reduced through treatments and a careful diet, or it can at least be kept from getting any larger. If it is removed surgically, there will only be an added burden on the other lymphatic glands which usually then enlarge, creating more trouble.

ECZEMA AND PIMPLES

Cannot Be Relieved By Salves and Ointments—Must Be Treated Through Blood.

Irritating sores, pimples, eczema, salt rheum and other skin disorders are all signals of distress, telling that your blood is weak or impure. You cannot get rid of eczema and other skin troubles with ointments and outward applications, because the trouble is rooted in the blood and can only be removed by purifying and enriching the blood. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills banish these troubles because they purify and build up the impoverished blood. This has been proved over and over again. Among those who has thus benefitted in Mrs. Chris. F. Hummel, Castor, Alta., who says:—"I was troubled with eczema for years and although I tried many remedies I did not find permanent relief until I used Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Whenever I did a little work my hands pained me greatly, especially my fingers and joints which were swollen and cracked, so that I could scarcely move them. Finally as the result of a statement I read, I decided to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and I had not been taking them very long when I found they were helping me. I then got a dozen boxes, and before they were all gone every trace of the trouble had disappeared. Had I known of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills earlier I might have been spared the suffering I endured, and saved the money spent for other treatments that did not relieve me. I hope some other sufferer will benefit by my experience."

If your blood is out of order begin taking Dr. Williams' Pink Pills today and note their speedy beneficial results. Sold by medicine dealers or sent by mail at 50 cents a box by writing The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

The ever-increasing number of wealthy Americans visiting England has given rise to a new occupation for some women in London, that of professional chaperones. Such a chaperone will take a rich young American girl under her wing and see that she gets invited to all sorts of smart social functions. She schools her in the social ways of England and receives a substantial fee for her services.

IT PAYS TO ADVERTISE

They sent people to jail for owning a bath-tub! Sounds incredible, doesn't it? But such was actually the case—history carries a record of all this. Learned physicians of the earlier era thought that to bathe was to invite all kinds of curious distempers and colds and diseases. And there was a law which made it possible for people to be locked in the county jail if a tub was found in their homes.

In the present generation, almost the opposite is operative. People who do not bathe themselves and their belongings are in true disfavor. Houses must be "bathed" in the sense that they are to be kept clean, inside and out, and tidily painted. The empty, uncared-for yard soon arouses the growling complaint of city fathers.

New York Giants Suffer First Defeat of Season

CY WILLIAMS GETS CIRCUIT

First Homer of Phillie Enables Philadelphia to Win 7-5 Victory.

BRAVES WIN 3-2

NEW YORK, N.Y., April 17 (Canadaian Press)—The New York Giants suffered their first defeat of the season here yesterday when Cy Williams, pinch batsmans for Bob McGraw, touched Fitzsimmons for a home run with two Phillies on base in the eighth. Philadelphia won 7 to 5. This was the first circuit smash of the championship campaign for Williams, who tied with Hack Wilson of the Cubs for the National League home run leadership last season.

The Boston Braves won their first victory of the championship season at Brooklyn yesterday when they came from behind in the eighth to defeat the Brooklyn Robins, 3 to 2. Hornsby led the Boston attack with three singles in four times at bat.

The Chicago Cubs pounded Jess Haines for seven hits in the first five innings at St. Louis yesterday and won from the Cardinals, 6 to 3. The Cubs scored five runs in the fourth and added another on Webb's home run in the fifth. Guy Bush was in form, holding the Cards to seven hits.

Donnie Bush's Pirate artillery swung into action against Eppa Rixey and Jim Edwards at Cincinnati yesterday to win the third game of the season 8 to 1. They took Rixey for seven hits and six runs in two innings, and followed up the attack on Edwards for two more runs.

Big Swim May Go To Montreal

TORONTO, April 17.—Allan Ross, president Canadian Wrigley Co., who sponsors the Marathon swim, said yesterday morning that the C.N.E. board have decided to allow the swim to be held off the Fair Grounds, he has not been approached officially.

"As a Torontonian I would prefer to see the swim held here, but for the good of all concerned I think the big swim should not be held in the same city two years in succession", said Mr. Ross. "I am going down to Montreal to look over Lake St. Louis, where we think the swim may be held. If there, it will be 21 miles."

C.G.E. TO HAVE GIRLS' SOFTBALL

Officers Elected at Enthusiastic Meeting Held in Plant. Yesterday.

FOUR TEAMS REPRESENTED

The ladies of the Canadian General Electric Company held an enthusiastic meeting in the Lecture Room of the Labratory last night in an effort to organize the ladies soft ball league. J. O'Brien was chosen for chairman and he briefly outlined the object of the meeting and the prospects of having a good league this year. W. J. Nelson was unanimously elected president of the league and J. O'Brien to be the secretary. Discussion arose with regard to chosing players from other departments and it was decided that where there were not sufficient players for a team in a department other shops close to them could use those players.

Four teams were represented, the Meter, Fractional, Punch Press and Office each having a lady present. The executive committee will consist of the two men officials and Miss C. Taylor, Miss L. Campbell and Miss D. Mortimer. There is good prospects of having a team from the Compensator and another from the Wire department. E. Hardie and H. Foster were present at the meeting and gave valuable suggestions with regard to the co-operation of the league with the Social and Athletic Association of the plant.

After the league is properly under way it is quite possible that fans will see the girls perform against an out-of-town team.

INTERNATIONAL FOR BIG YEAR

Eight Clubs More Evenly Matched Than Has Been in Recent Years.

EXPECT BIG GATES

NEW YORK, April 17.— More international than it has been in years and with an added population of 1,000,000 persons through re-arrangement of the circuit, the international league is ready to open its season next Wednesday. Advance forecasts generously concede all the eight clubs chances to figure in the pennant fight.

"The four opening day games should attract 50,000 fans for a starter and that is a conservative estimate," said John Conway Toole, league president, to-day.

"Newark with its great club and added capacity for 5,000 spectators, will have 20,000 or more if the weather is good on the opening day.

"Jersey City, with the greatest team it has had in years, should play to 12,000 and a revival of interes in Baltimore is calculated to attract from 12,000 to 14,000. Reading has a better club and is popular. There should be 6,000 to 8,000 there for the opening."

The added population is the result of the substitution of Montreal for Syracuse. The Canadian city returning to the league with one of the best minor league parks, seating 25,000 will have its opening May 2.

"It should be the best year we ever had," said President Toole.

"We have better club heads and better playing talent than ever before."

The eight clubs appear more evenly matched than has been the case in many years.

VIEWS ON SPORT

LADIES' SOFTBALL LEAGUE
Good prospects for strong league seen at C.G.E. ladies' softball meeting, held in plant yesterday. W. J. Nelson was elected president, with J. O'Brien as secretary.

The Canadian General ladies are going to give girls' softball a strong boost this season in an effort to re-establish the game which was so popular when the Ladies' Softball league was going strong here a few seasons ago. Then, the girls' games drew as large a crowd as the mens' league, but after a season or two the best players seemed to congregate in the spring at one camp, making it practically impossible for the other managers to pick a crew which would put up a even contest.

* * * * *

The poor weather over the week-end cast a damper over the hopes of all amateur ball tossers who hoped to get in a useful workout. The rain and cold made practice impossible. The different hard and softball leagues expect to hold their opening games within the next few weeks and the players will need all the workouts they can secure to put them in any shape at all.

Unless he has become mellow with age, Tommy Holyman, the new manager of the Petes, should uphold the standard set by his predecessors as heads of the noble order of goat-getters. Solomon and Johnson were always crabbing about something. It is to be hoped Holyman has learned from experience that it doesn't pay.

Tommy Holyman, for several years shortstop, second baseman and umpire-baiter of the Peterboro C.O.B.L. team has been appointed manager of the Petes, and will follow in the footsteps of such illustrious bosses of the team as Jacob Solomon and Senor Pietro Johnson.

As a player Holyman was always willing enough, and while he never hit much more than his weight he knew his baseball oats. In fact he was continually making the ammunition which "Shiner" Johnson used in the years he rode as chief of the Peterborough team. Holyman now slips into position of high supreme mogul of the porridge- eaters, a position he should fill with efficiency.—Kingston Whig-Standard.

Entries were received for intermediate teams from Oshawa Christians, Bowmanville and Port Hope at an executive meeting of the Oshawa and District Amateur Baseball League held in the Queen's Hotel, Port Hope. Considerable talk was heard on the prospects for 1928 and the outlook is bright. Last year the league had a most successful season with Port Hope carrying off the honors. Cobourg or Oshawa General Motors have not as yet entered the league, but have until May 1st to do so. As a rule the Ferrytown is a little tardy getting organized, but it is quite likely that when the time rolls around that Cobourg will be in there and right up with the leaders in the league race. Port Hope and Cobourg have always been the keenest of rivals in any kind of sport and would be sadly missed from the league.—Port Hope Daily Times.

GEHRIG CLOUTS SECOND HOMER

Yankees Defeat Red Sox 7-2 in First Game at Boston.

BROWNS LOSE OUT 7-0

NEW YORK, April 17.—(Canadian Press.)—Lou Gehrig's second home run of the season, off Danny MacFayden with nobody on base, in the second inning, was the first shot in a barrage which enabled the New York Yankees to win, 7 to 2, in their first game in Boston this season. The Yankees drove MacFayden from the box with a five-run tally which put the game on ice in the third

George Pipgras, a Yankee hero in the last World Series, started his first championship game of the year and held the Red Sox safe at all times. Boston got only five hits off him

BROWNS DEFEATED 7-0.

Manager Schalk shook up his lineup, put Alphonse Thomas on the mound and the White Sox defeated the St. Louis Browns, 7 to 0, for their first victory of the season at Chicago yesterday.

In addition to holding the slugging browns to seven scattered hits, Thomas hit a home run with one man on base in the fourth inning.

Two costly errors by Marty McManus, Tiger third baseman, contributed to Detroit's 5 to 4 defeat by the Cleveland Indians in the third game of the series at Detroit yesterday.

The Washington Senators defeated the Athletics in the first of a three-game series at Philadelphia yesterday 5 to 4. It was the third straight defeat for the Mackmen.

Singles by "Goose" Goslin and Ossie Bluege that drove three runs over the plate in the eighth inning broke a 2-2 tie and gave the Senators the victory.

GIANT LEADER HEARTENED BY YOUNG CHAPLIN

Andy Cohen Threatened With Writer's Cramp by Demands for Autographs.

LEVEL-HEADED ATHLETE

McGraw Banking Heavily on His Young Pitchers This Season.

NEW YORK, April 17.—There is one deadly peril confronting Andy Cohen, overnight hero of Coogan's Bluff. If he does not have a care he will succumb to an attack of writers' cramp.

Not that Andy has taken up writing as a side line. At this early date he has not made a sufficient number of base hits to gain a foothold in the field of syndicate literature, but he does a tremendous lot of writing nevertheless.

At eventide, when he emerges from the clubhouse after a day's work at the Polo Grounds, our hero is immediately surrounded by an army of youthful idolaters, each bearing an autograph album and a pencil.

"Endeh! Oy, Enreh! Sign in de book, plizz!"

Being an accommodating young man with due regard for his public, Andy signs a thousand autographs every afternoon, and is threatened with a charley horse in the right arm.

Level-Headed Athlete.

Outside of that, he is a level-headed athlete without any illusions about the permanence of popular esteem. He knows that he will be razzed profusely whenever he falls into a batting slump or boots a couple of important grounders. And he knows that he will be greeted with Bronx cheers when the Giants battle on foreign fields.

Leaving aside the hero stuff, Andrew has shown that he is a pretty good ball player and that second base at the Polo Grounds will be capable hands this season. All of which is pleasant news to John J. McGraw, who has been hoping for some such consummation ever since the Hornsby trade.

Another heartening circumstance last week was the work of Jim Chaplin, one of the new crop of Giant pitchers. Jim made his debut on Friday the Thirteenth and threw the jinx for a loss. The Braves smote him rudely in the first inning, but after his nervousness had worn off he did a workmanlike job. Jim is a large, robust youth with speed, curves and control. Having realized that big league batters are only human after all, he is likely to win a lot of ball games.

Faith in Youngsters.

McGraw is banking heavily on his young pitchers this season. Benton and Henry have been doing their stuff with verve and skill all Spring, but his other two veterans, Fitzsimmons and Barnes, on whom he had placed much dependence, have not been doing so well. Time may bring them around, but until then the younger generation will be called upon to carry a heavy burden.

In addition to Chaplin, there is Walker, a southpaw of promise; Faulkner, another side-wheeler; Mangum, a right-handed banjo virtuoso, and Clarkson, a veteran, but still a youngster. Not to mention Jake Levy, the best pitching violinist in the National League.

The absence of Vic Aldridge makes it necessary for one of these youngsters to step up and take a regular turn on the mound. It was McGraw's intention, when he sent Burleigh Grimes to Pittsburgh, to use Aldridge early and often in the Spring, as he is known to be an early starter. From the looks of things just now, Vic will not be pitching in Spring, or in Summer, or in autumn either. Hence the importance of deveioping a youngster who can make the grade.

Balanced Outfit.

As to the general aspect of the Giants this year, they look like a well balanced outfit, without any weaknesses except what might be discovered in the pitching staff. There is batting and fielding strength in the outfield and infield and behind the plate.

Maroons Disband After Season's Work

MONTREAL, Que., April 17 (Canadian Press). — Montreal Maroons, runners-up to the New York Rangers in the Stanley Cup series for the worlds professional hockey championship, disbanded yesterday, and while a number of the players are in Montreal still, the majority are speeding to their respective homes to spend the off season.

President James Strachan and Manager Eddie Gerard were busy yesterday settling affairs with members of the team. Included in their tasks was the pleasant duty of presenting to each of the players a bonus of $1,000, a bonus personally subscribed by the directors of the hockey club and a number of admirers of the team. Besides this, the players received a bonus of $500 each from the Canadian Arena Company, which operates the Montreal Hockey Club—all a tribute to the players for their excellent showing during the past season.

ELECTED PRESIDENT

At the annual meeting of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association held in Ottawa, W. A. Fry, Dunville, was elected president. In the absence of Dr. F. E. Sandercock, Calgary, Mr. Fry was the chairman of the meeting.

SOCCER OPENING ON SATURDAY

De Laval and Thistle Meet in League Fixture—Use King Edward Park.

At the regular meeting of the soccer association last evening in the G.W.V.A. rooms, it was arranged that the opening match be on Saturday, under the league auspices, between DeLaval and Thistle, at King Edward Park. Kick off at three o'clock.

It was suggested that the fifth day of May be set as the date for the benefit game, arranged under the control of the committee that has received sanction from the executive board.

The league schedule committee will meet on Thursday evening in the G. W. V. A. to draw up the fixtures for the season.

Use King Edward Park.

Permission was granted the Association by the city council for the use of King Edward Park, under the same conditions as in previous years. Acting upon the suggestion of the soccer players the pavilion will be placed in the east end of the playing pitch, instead of being on the north side line, which interfered with the play. In all probability the pitch will receive a filling in where it is needed.

Players Registered.

Two players were registered by the Thistle F. C. as follows: James McLeod and Thomas McPhate.

Fourteen players were registered under the C.G.E. club as follows:—Henry D. Henshaw, Alex. Burgess, Henry W. Mann, Alex. R. Mitchell, W. E. James, Peter Hutton, Henry Ferguson, F. E. Wade, J. L. Wade, William H. Hobb, S. F. Laidley, Geo. Blowers, George Clark and Robert Dawson.

Quaker Oats and DeLaval have not registered their players.

Charity Money Forwarded.

The secretary was instructed to forward to St. Vincent Orphanage and the Children's Aid Society the money collected in the Charity Cup games run under the Phalen competition.

a stunt," said Fitzmaurice. "Valuable scientific data will be obtained, but the public must be prepared for something entirely different in aeroplane and engine construction before the dream of ocean air service is ever realized.

"Planes and engines of the future will be unlike anything we have seen so far. The Bremen, which I consider the latest word in airplane construction, is as different from the Wrights' crude machine which flew at Kitty Hawk as the modern Rolls-Royce is from automobiles of thirty years ago. We must expect even greater progress in airplane construction.

Single-wing Plane.

"Personally I conceive the plane of the future as a great single-wing with passengers inside of it soaring across the ocean, the machine being propelled by engines totally unlike anything we have to-day. They must be propelled by some sort of concentrated fuel or by an engine which will do what the Diesel model has for marine engineering.

"We know the secrets of flight, but the whole future of aviation depends upon the fuel and engines. Future generations will laugh at us for attempting to fly the Atlantic with fuel weighing seven to ten pounds a gallon."

Commandant Fitzmaurice takes no stock in flying the Atlantic by stages, using landing platforms in mid-ocean and other such contrivances. He believes in making one long hop, like the Bremen's.

"I have seen artists' conceptions of great mooring stages anchored in mid-ocean, compared with which liners like the Leviathan and Berengaria are mere specks," he said. "This seems absurd. What private interests or governments are going to build ocean landing stations several times larger than the greatest liners? The mere cost of such a scheme defeats it."

Neither does the Irish airman consider the re-fuelling of planes from mother ships feasible.

PLAY PRESENTED AT DOWNEYILLE

Large Audience Sees "Cyclone Sally" Played by Reaboro Club.

DOWNEYVILLE, April 17.—A large crowd gathered at the hall on Monday evening when the Reaboro Dramatic Club presented the play entitled "Cyclone Sally". Everyone took his part exceptionally well and all are worthy of the praise given them.

The story concerned Jack Webster, pampered owner of the Webster place who returned home after a long absence with the purpose of marrying Sue Bascom. Immediately upon his arrival, he was met by open defiance, at the hands of Sally Graham, known as Cyclone Sally, who was in reality a very charming girl. Hostilities opened at once and the battles raged fast and furiously and after many thrills and much laughter, the grand climax arrived when Jack found to his dismay that instead of courting Sue Bascom, he has been courting his mortal enemy, Cyclone Sally.

The cast was as follows: Jack Webster, Charles O'Dell; Reggie Manners, Ward Holmes; John Jerkins, Victor Sloan; Willie Clump, Elwood Smith; Sally Grahma, Cyclone Sally, Meta Graham; Jenny Thatcher, Leta Smith; Ruth Thratcher, Mrs. K. Thorn; Effie Varden, Ida Calvert; Vivian Vernon, Olive Houghton

Between the acts, solos were sung by Charles O'Dell, while Dinner's Orchestra from Lindsay supplied splendid music for dancing which followed the program.

Personals

Mrs. Lillie Lucas, Thelma and Donald have returned home after spending a few days with Mrs. Lucas' parents, Mr. and Mrs. Simon Perdue in Peterborough.

Mrs. Frank Cavanagh has returned to her home in Ennismore, after spending a few days with her mother Mrs. Herlihey in the village.

Miss Genevieve Lucas has returned to Toronto after spending the week-end with her parents, Mr. and Mrs Charles H. Lucas.

Mrs. Paul McGuire and Miss Anna Murray spent the week-end as the guest of their aunt, Mrs. Lynch, in Peterborough.

Miss Marguerite Clancy, of Enterprise, is spending the holidays with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. M. J. Clancy.

Miss Mary Connell is the guest of friends in Detroit, Mich.

Nothing has been done here as yet on the land and the season is getting very late. The ground is very wet and unfit to work.

SPRING WORK IS WEEK LATE

Farmers Usually On Land Near City About Middle of April.

SNOW HELPFUL.

Spring operations on the farms in the Peterborough district will begin at least a week later than last year. One farm recorded its first work on April 16 last year, and it is usually one of the earliest to get under way.

From his contacts with farmers, Mayor Denne said this morning that he did not expect suitable conditions until next week, and possibly not then. Unprofessional weather prophets announce that the weather will not change until the new moon on Thursday next, and the inference, of course, is that the change will be an improvement. The moon that is now in its last quarter strayed across the border line of April from its cycle days in March. In other words, this has been a March moon, and has been responsible for the March weather, for winter's lingering in the lap of spring.

Mayor Denne says the recent snow was a providential boon to the farmers in its effect on the ground and fall sown grain. "It acted on the frost in the ground just as a poultice acts on a person with a heavy cold or other ailment. It tends to draw the frost out, and at the same time it is a blanket for the new crop. So, if it made a mess of the roads here and there, it was a very timely benefit."

INDIANS DISAPPOINT AFRICAN VISITOR

Lady Expected To Find Them in Original State, Like Blacks at Cape.

TORONTO, Ont., April 14. — Canadian Press. — Miss Pope-Ellis, an interesting visitor to the city from South Africa, interviewed locally, said:

"You all seem to know so much about Australia and New Zealand, and so little about South Africa. I was taken to see Canadian Indians, and was pitifully disappointed. You see I expected to see them living their old time lives, like our natives in South Africa, and it seemed terrible to see them in the awful clothes they wear."

Miss Pope-Ellis is completing a trip that took her to California, where she went to learn weaving. "I am taking home the knowledge so I can teach our people. They have wonderful facility with their fingers. The women are always at work plaiting something a few blades of grass or their own hair. Their thatching and hut construction show a real skill in design and I believe I have the beginning of a handicraft industry that may become important.

"One of the interesting things about my trip has been that while I was in California, I was told of an old man in Hamilton, Ont. who was the daddy of them all. It was from him that much of the knowledge I had gained had come originally. I went to see him and he rather perfunctorily showed me his place. Then he learned that I was going to South Africa and the purpose for which I wanted the knowledge of weaving. Oh, what a glorious difference! He gave me all its secrets, even those he has guarded so carefully from others on this continent."

THEATRES

AT THE CAPITOL.

It was not until after Director King Vidor had filmed more than a million people in the congested manufacturing and commercial centers of the eastern states that he believed he had caught the proper spirit of "The Crowd," his new twelve-reel special for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, now being shown at the Capitol Theatre.

Most of these people were filmed at a time they were utterly unconscious of the fact they were appearing in a motion picture.

With masked batteries of cameras, Vidor caught the immense theatre crowds of New York's Broadway. He filmed the noon day crowds of Fifth Avenue and Broadway, the exclusive shopping districts of New York, the great financial district, the docks and waterfronts.

He got the exits of the towering skyscrapers as they discharged their tens of thousands of employees for the night and from barges in the harbor "shot" the magnificent skyline of the busiest city in the world.

At Pittsburgh, Penn., he used the thousands of employees of the world's greatest steel mills and at Rochester, N.Y., worked against a background of the great Kodak factories and the Eastman laboratories.

Coney Island furnished its great crowds of merrymakers, and Niagara Falls was used as a location where he filmed the honeymoon sequence, much of it against the scenic backgrounds of the falls that have been visited by countless honeymooners for more than a century.

"The Crowd" is Vidor's first all-American story since "The Big Parade" and was written by himself. Eleanor Boardman and James Murray have the principal romantic roles in the greatest human interest tale ever screened.

AT THE REGENT.

"ADAM AND EVIL" AN ENTERTAINING COMEDY

Lew Cody and Aileen Pringle Score as a New Comedy Team in This Genuinely Amusing Robert Z. Leonard Production.

No better screen vehicle for the initial co-starring appearance of Lew Cody and Aileen Pringle could have been chosen than "Adam and Evil," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's new feature comedy, which opened yesterday at the Regent Theatre.

Cody and Miss Pringle make ideal team-mates for comedy and there is little doubt there will be a lot of genuine surprise on the part of picture-goers to learn that the sophisticated Aileen Pringle, who has always appeared in society dramas, bearing little relation to comedy, is a genuine comedienne of the first class.

The picture-going world has been used to the Pringle of "Three Weeks," "His Hour," "Soul Mates" and other such productions and there is probably not one picture-goer in a thousand who ever dreamed that Aileen could do comedy like a veteran.

It must be that Miss Pringle, off the screen, is somewhat of a comedienne. Otherwise no picturewise producer would ever have switched her from the niche, in which she was already established, to pioneer in co-starring comedy roles.

At any rate, Aileen proved that she is a comedienne, just as Lew Cody, some years ago, made an overnight switch from "heavy" roles to sophisticated comedy—and made a huge success of it.

The co-stars of "Adam and Evil," however, are not the only comedians in the cast.

There is Roy D'Arcy, noted for his black villainy in such productions as "The Merry Widow," "Bardelys, the Magnificent," "The Temptress," "Winners of the Wilderness" and many other box office attractions. Roy proved that he is an actor with a wide range of histrionic ability yet he has proved such a popular "heavy" that it woud almost seem a shame to switch him from the sort of roles that have stamped him one of the "best" villains in celluloid.

Director Robert Z. Leonard has succeeded in getting a lot of comical acting out of Gwen Lee, Gertrude Short and Hedda Hopper.

What CAN a Man Believe?

By BRUCE BARTON

Author of "The Book Nobody Knows," "The Man Nobody Knows"

XXVI—Confucius Disappointed at Death

CONFUCIUS was devoted to the founders of the Chow dynasty. In a spirit of great reverence he visited the royal capital and returned, not disillusioned by what he saw of political power, but rather strengthened in his veneration for the government. But it was not so with his respect for Lao Tze, the founder of Taoism, whom he visited on this same journey.

Lao Tze was about fifty years older than Confucius, and promulgated a soft, sweet gospel that offered no cure for the problems of the world. He was a pacifist, withdrawing himself from evils which he could not prevent and toward which he could assume only an attitude of imperturbable meekness.

Confucius went to see this venerable man who, according to the Taoist traditions, read to the ardent young teacher a lofty lecture, the burden of which was advice to cease meddling with matters which were beyond his control. It was characteristic of Confucius that he did not reply, but the advice of Lao Tze was lost on him. He was a practical man; Lao Tze was a dealer in sweetness and light. So the two eminent teachers parted and never met again, and the two systems developed side by side and neither gave much aid or comfort to the other.

It was a part of the method of Confucius not to answer back.

"A sage will not enter a tottering state nor dwell in a disorganized one. Where right principles of government prevail, he shows himself, but when they are prostituted he conceals himself.

"The ancients were guarded in their speech. Like them we should avoid loquacity. Many words invite many defeats. Avoid entering many businesses, for many businesses create many difficulties."

These were not original precepts with him, but when he saw them in an inscription on the back of a statue with a triple clasp upon the mouth of the man, he applauded it.

"Observe this, my children. These words are true, and commend themselves to our reason."

The Duke of Tse had been a patron of the teacher and offered him a pension. Confucius could have used the money to good advantage but he refused the gift.

He said to his disciples: "A superior man will only receive reward for services which he has done. I have given advice to the Duke of Tse, and he has not obeyed it; yet now he would bestow on me this gratuity. He is very far from understanding me."

"Superior Man"

This incident shows his high superiority to bribes or perquisites. He maintained, even in poverty, a resolute independence. He was determined to be what he talked so much about, a "superior man."

For thirty years, from the time he was twenty-one till he was fifty-one, he was a successful teacher, with a large and reverent band of students. In 500 B. C., he was appointed magistrate and then promoted to be assistant superintendent of public works, and later, a minister of justice. These were high positions and enabled him to test out his theories with success.

But jealousy and intrigue unseated him, and in less than five years he was out of office. Then for thirteen years, from 496 to 483 B. C., he was a wandering teacher, but in the latter year he settled down in his native province, completed his literary work, and in 479 B. C., at the age of seventy-two, he died. He left only one original composition, Spring and Autumn, which is said to have had large influence in the reform of the province of Loo.

Thought Himself a Failure

He died disappointed, and seemed to himself to have been unsuccessful. In his last years he meditated:

"The great mountain must crumble! The strong beam must break! The wise man must wither away like a plant! There is not one in the empire that will make me his master! My time has come to die!"

Tomorrow—Millions Worship Confucius.

SURVEY REVEALS INTERESTING FACTS

Many Imbeciles Have Defective Parents—Few From Well-To-Do Families.

SAINT JOHN, N. H., April 17— (Canadian Press).—In his tenth annual report Dr. G. G. Melvin, chief medical officer of New Brunswick, presents some very interesting facts regarding the survey of the mentally deficient, which is in progress. The work was begun last June and carried on by the six medical inspectors of schools. Only a small part of the Province was covered, but this included the city of Saint John.

The returns thus far submitted cover 562 mental defectives, ranging from infancy to persons more than seventy years old. Of the 562 no less than 292 were examined by Dr. Mabel Hanington, of this city, but they include inmates of a number of institutions. The census showed 139 imbeciles, 189 low morons and 198 high morons. Defects in parents were found in 177 cases. Those requiring institutional care number 269, or nearly half of the total number. No less than 325 were in poor circumstances, while forty-two were paupers. Only five of the families concerned were well-to-do and 184 were set down as comfortable. With regard to racial origin 279 were English, 172 French, 50 Irish, 36 Scotch, 18 of other nationalities and 7 unreported.

CITY COUNCIL CLEARS SLATE

"We recommend that the matter of arranging for the use of the football ground at King Edward Park this season be left with the Chairman."

Ald. Stocker, speaking to the Parks Committee report, urged that the city use the bulbs from the principal parks for a second year in such places as the corner of Burnham and Hunter streets.

Ald. Ackerman, Chairman of the Property Committee, reported that the incinerator is in worse shape than had been supposed. Repairs could be made for $700 or $800, but more would be needed in a couple of years, while approximately $2,000 would make a proper job of it. The incinerator is at present under repair and Ald. Ackerman was authorized to have such work done as he sees fit.

Street Railway Again.

A formal motion was passed declaring the liability of the Peterborough Railway Company and its successor, the Hydro-Electric Power Commission for the costs incurred in taking up the rails and repairing the roads, as agreed by the company under its franchise granted in 1903. The company ceased operations for a period longer than ninety days without permission of the council.

The Mayor stated that the City Solicitor advised this procedure, and Mr. Wearing added that getting the money would be a different manner.

Although Ald. Stocker introduced and sponsored by-law 2769, covering the paving of Aylmer, Park, and McDonnel streets, he refused to vote for the clause specifying asphalt when the by-law was considered in committee of the whole. The by-law passed, all the other members of the council voting in favor.

Information Still Lacking.

The government auditors' report on the business of the gas plant was not at hand, although the valuators' report asked for at the same time had been received, and the council therefore deferred consideration.

The C. P. Telegraph Company will be asked to pay $100 a year for the use of the city's conduit from the station to the George street office and The Examiner office. The wires are now carried up George street on the Utilities Commission's poles and their removal is desired. The company offered to pay $60, although stating that the city has, under an agreement, to provide them with poles to carry their lines. The company further asked that a guarantee be given that the Utilities Commission's wires will, if laid in the conduits, be so placed as not to cause trouble to their wires. The council was not willing to grant this and also specified that any damage to the pavement must be repaired.

The price to be charged was, the subject of a short debate, as Ald. Stocker moved that the price be the $60 offered, plus $15 for the extension to The Examiner. Ald. Macdonald opposed this and Ald. Stocker agreed to make the figure $100. The conduit system cost the city $3,000 last year.

At City Treasurer Adams' suggestion the rate of interest on the debentures being issued to pay for the city's share of the provincial highway and the extension to the court house will be 4½ per cent instead of five per cent.

Dog Catcher To Be Hired.

Aldermen Ackerman and Huffman made a spirited opposition to the employment of a dog catcher, but every other alderman favored his employment and Ald. Phelan was authorized to engage him.

Ald. Ackerman declared that the activities of this employee make the city council a laughing stock while Ald. Huffman declared that dog catchers have been known to take dogs off private property. Ald. Greene spoke of the damage done by stray dogs and was supported by the rest of the council.

Ald. Lowe endeavored to have the cigarette tax cut in half. He said many merchants claim that the fee ($20) is too high, and proposed that it be made $10.

Ald. Phelan explained that the tax had been placed on the sale of cigarettes in the first place because the tobacco dealers complained that every grocer and small storekeeper was handling cigarettes and spoiling business. It had been set at $50 but later had been cut to $20.

There are 68 licenses out. Ald. Lowe remarked, and there would be a certain increase, though not enough, he admitted, to make up the loss in revenue.

The matter was left over until the next meeting.

City Engineer Parsons was authorized to make plans for the south end of Ashburnham. Instructions were given at the last council meeting to advertise James and Rogers streets, but Mr. Parsons pointed out that parts of these can not be served without a pumping station as they are lower than the outfall sewer.

As it would cost about $2,200 to build 900 feet of sewer to serve two houses on Centre street the engineer advised that this be not done and the council concurred.

No Further Grant.

Ald. Phelan proposed that the city make a grant to the Trent Waterways Association towards advertising in Cleveland.

Ald. Ackerman supported him, pointed out that the Ontario Tourist Association, which had advertised Ontario in Cleveland, has ceased functioning and the local association has consequently taken it up. All the smaller municipalities had made extra grants for this purpose.

Ald. Greene demurred as there is no provision in the estimates, but Ald. Phelan suggested that $100 could be paid and charged to grants and a chance taken on coming out even at the end of the year.

Mayor Denne remarked that the city has given $400 to the association for advertising and that this other was an afterthought.

Aldermen Macdonald and McIntyre moved that no action be taken and were answered by an amendment by Aldermen Ackerman and Stocker that $100 be paid. The vote on the amendment was five-all, the alignment being: For—Aldermen Phelan, Stocker, Huffman, Hamilton and Ackerman; against—Mayor Denne and Aldermen Macdonald, McIntyre and Green, and Lowe. The amendment was therefore lost and no vote was taken on the motion.

The Aladdin Company asked for the city's best price for a building lot off the city's property south of the plant. The company wishes to erect a dwelling on the lot. The Property Committee will discuss the matter.

The Councils of the Cities of North Bay and Stratford endorsed the city's suggestion that public utilities owned by municipalities be taxed. Ottawa and Kitchener did not approve the scheme.

DEMONSTRATION GIVEN
Peterborough's first "Le Mur" permanent wave demonstration was held last night in Lewis' Beauty Parlor, Hunter street. Starting at 7 o'clock Mr. Kingsbury did a full permanent wave in one hour and forty minutes. The finished job brought much applause and favorable comment from the large crowd of interested spectators. During the demonstration, Mr. Kingsbury showed that with this system it is possible to produce permanent waves without kinks or frizzes.

PREMIER KING SHOULD ATTEND LEAGUE SITTNG

Sir Herbert Ames Thinks It Would Show Appreciation of Tribute.

MIGHT MEET IN OTTAWA.

Dominion Capital Has Machinery For Handling Sessions of League Council.

MONTREAL April 17. (Special.)—Ottawa may conceivably be selected for a future meeting of the Council of the League of Nations, and Right. Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King, Prime Minister of Canada, should attend the next assembly of the League, in appreciation of the honor and tribute to her prestige as a nation paid the Dominion by her election to the council of the fourteen leading powers of the League of Nations, was the statement of Sir Herbert Ames, for seven years financial director of the Secretariat of the League of Nations, when interviewed here yesterday.

"The Prime Minister," Sir Herbert added," could effectively use his influence, if he attended a meeting of the league, to have a future assembly take place in Ottawa. Geneva enjoys no monopoly, for the council has already met in Paris, Brussels, Rome and other points in Europe. It has the desire to change its place of meeting occasionally in order to demonstrate to the various countries of the world by direct contact exactly what is being done by the league council. So far it has not met outside Europe and it is both desirable and possible that it might soon seek another continent, and that Ottawa and Canada should be selected for one of the occasional meetings."

Sir Herbert stressed the fact that Ottawa possesses bilingual machinery for the services of its Houses of Parliament which with little reinforcement could cope efficiently with the conferences of the council. "A meeting in the capital city of the Dominion would," he said, "show Canada most effectively the functions of the international machine. It would more particularly awaken and attract the interest of the United States, and finally such a meeting would make the Dominion and her possibilities known throughout the world more widely than anything else."

OBITUARY

MRS. JOHN JAMIESON.
After an illness extending over a period of two months, there passed away at 314 Boswell Avenue this morning, April 17, Mrs. Jane Jamieson, widow of John Jamieson, who predeceased her in January, 1924. The late Mrs. Jamieson was a regular attendant at St. Andrew's United Church previous to her illness.
Left to mourn are three daughters, Mrs. W. A. Richardson, Frederick Avenue, Mrs. E. V. Eldridge, Boswell Avenue, and Mrs. E. C. Howard, of Gananoque. Funeral announcement will be made later.

REV. MICHAEL O'BRIEN.
The funeral of the late Rev. Father Michael O'Brien was held this morning at nine o'clock in St. Peter's Cathedral. Rev. Austin O'Brien, brother of the deceased priest, sang the solemn high mass, assisted by Rev. K. Corkery as deacon and Rev. V. Corkery as sub-deacon. His Lordship Bishop O'Brien assisted at the throne with Rev. J. V. McAuley and Rev. H. Carr as deacons of honor. Rev. J. J. O'Brien, assistant priest, and Rev. J. T. Finn as master of ceremonies. The mass was sung by the High School girls of St. Peter's School and the girls of St. Mary's Convent.
After the mass His Lordship spoke of the priesthood and excellent manner in which the late Father O'Brien had fulfilled all his duties.
Among the priests present were: Rev. Fathers. H. Belisle, of St. Michael's College, M. Cline, D. O'Connor,, M. Oliver, M. Johnston, L. Hodgins, all of Toronto, J. O'Leary, McCabe. Murray, P. Costello, J. McCarthy, C. Moloney, J. Guiry, C. Carroll, P. McGuire, F. O'Sullivan, J. O'Sullivan, J. Ferguson, J. Phelan, D. McNamara, J. Collins, C. McCarney, P. Galvin, McGuire, J. McGuire, Mgr. Kelly, Mgr. McColl, H. Black, S. Maher, M. O'Leary, V. McFadden, and V. Gillogly.

JOHN EDWARDS.
The death occurred in Peterborough, this morning, April 17, of John Edwards of Keene, in his 89th year. The funeral will be held from the residence of his son at Keene, on Thursday, at 2.00 p.m., to Keene cemetery. One son, David, of Otonabee, and four daughters, Mrs. W. McNevin, and Mrs. C. Edwards of Otonabee, and Mrs. E. Wright, and Mrs. A. Brown of Peterboro, survive.

Five Cent Piece Found In Salmon

KYUQUOT, B.C., April 17 (Canadian Press).—Just how long and how far a Canadian five-cent piece has been joy-riding in the Pacific Ocean inside of a 35-pound spring salmon is a matter of conjecture, but it is quite possible the coin may have travelled thousands of miles.
Recently John Nelson, New Westminster fisherman, was trolling in Quatsino Bay, west coast of Vancouver Island, when he landed the salmon, and while cleaning the fish made the find. The reverse side of the coin was worn smooth but the obverse side revealed the features of King George clearly.
It is believed the fish swallowed the coin while it was sinking after being dropped from a ship.

Wrong Stamp Book Is Taken From Show

Through an error at the conclusion of the Hobby Show on Saturday evening, some boy carried away the wrong book of stamps. The directors of this department would therefore ask that every boy who had an exhibit examine his books and if in possession of the missing collection return it to the Y.M.C.A. The missing collection was not a place winner, but is all the same of great value to the owner whose name appears on the front cover page. The book is grey with red trimmings and was entered in section two.

IN MEMORIAM
DEWDNEY.—In loving memory of my dear sister, Maud Dewdney (nee Rendle), who fell asleep, April 17th, 1923.
It was five years ago to-day
That Jesus called her hence away.
She is gone from this world to the land of her rest;
To the country of the happy and home of the blest;
Released from all sorrow and freed from all pain,
Triumphant for ever with Jesus to reign.

FITZMAURICE TO AWAIT OTHERS AT QUEBEC CITY

Plans To Make Trip To New York With Other Members of Crew.

MONTCALM RECALLED.

Attribute Failure To Reach Gotham To Lighting Equipment of Plane.

QUEBEC, April 17. — (Canadian Press.)—Yesterday brought new details of the historical flight of the German plane Bremen from Baldonnel, Ireland, to Greenly Island, Straits of Belle Isle, in Northern Canada. It also brought changes in the previously announced plans of the German members of the Bremen crew to repair their damaged plane and continue their flight to New York.

Wireless messages from Point Amour stated that Baron von Huenefeld and Captain Herman Koehl would abandon the Bremen, temporarily at least, and accept places as passengers to Quebec City, in one or another of the rescue planes. From there they will probably fly the sister ship of the Bremen, the F-13, to the welcome that awaits them in New York.

Colonel James Fitzmaurice, Irish member of the Bremen crew ,arrived at Clarke City on the north shore of the Gulf of St. Lawrence, yesterday afternoon, flying with Duke Schiller in a Canadian Transcontinental Airways plane from Natashquan, where he had spent the night. They are expected to continue to Quebec to-day. Colonel Fitzmaurice plans to make the trip to New York with the other members of the Bremen crew.

Montcalm Recalled.

The government steamer Montcalm, which had been bucking ice fields in the Straits of Belle Isle in an attempt to reach Greenly Island, was recalled from her task last night. The Montcalm had been expected to take the Bremen from the island in the event it was found too badly damaged to be repaired for a continuation of the flight to New York.

The new details of the Bremen flight came by wireless to Saint John, N.B., and to Montreal. Nurse Greta Ferris, of the Grenfell Mission, Labrador, after mushing to Greenly Island by dog team, wired a graphic description of the flight obtained from the fliers themselves.

In other wireless messages, Baron von Huenefeld attributed much of the failure of the fliers to reach New York to the lighting equipment of the plane going out of commission The fliers flew without the use of their instruments to determine their course during a number of hours.

The German fliers on Greenly Island have been offered the use of the Junkers F-13 by representatives of the company, who went to Quebec city by train yesterday and later proceeded to Murray Bay to confer with Colonel Fitzmaurice when he arrived there.

Duke Schiller at present transoprting Fitzmaurice to Quebec City, has offered to make a return trip to Greenly Island to bring off the other members of the Bremen crew.

Another relief plane, carrying newspapermen and photographers, took off from Seven Islands for Greenly Island yesterday, but no news of its progress had been reported early last night.

Clergyman Would Ban Religious Marriages

CHICAGO, April 18. — Religious marriages would be abolished under a proposal submitted to the Episcopal clergy of Chicago. Suggesting that it would be more desirable for the church to bless only those unions which were sanctioned by the State, Rev. F. R. Neely, of Calvary Church, proposed that clergymen leave performance of the ceremonies to the civil authorities.

SPLENDID PLAY IS PRESENTED

Immaculate Conception Church Club Puts On "Now Fawncy That."

ATTENDANCE LARGE.

In their flawless almost professional presentation of the comedy-drama, "Now Fawncy That," staged at St. Alphonsus Lyceum on Monday and Tuesday evenings, April 16 and 17, the cast and management of the Immaculate Conception Dramatic Society earned for themselves a reputation indeed enviable in dramatic circles.

The play as a drama, replete with all the desirable elements of love, romance, unfathomed mystery, successive surprises, the apparent failure of the hero followed by a stroke of good fortune and ultimate success, has in it all the necessary qualifications of a beautiful and interesting drama. Because of its originality—indeed unique in the extreme—it stands out alone from all other plays termed as Irish, the great majority of which are untrue to Irish character at its best. Because of its sustained plot and succession of surprises, it grips and holds the entire audience until the last curtain is rung down. Because of its admirable blending of apparent tragedy, rich scintillating comedy and a plot that reveals itself only in the last few minutes, it is indeed unique among dramas, and a radical but successful departure from the old-time Irish comedy.

The drama, "Now Fawncy That," was presented in Peterborough by special arrangement with the author, a young priest of Toronto diocese, the Rev. Father Johnston, who has already achieved considerable fame in things dramatic, and has already to his credit several successful drama productions. This opportunity is taken on behalf of the management and cast to thank the reverend author for his kindness in loaning his original manuscript, and also to congratulate him on his work and efforts.

The play was presented by the Dramatic Society of the Immaculate Conception Parish, following two months of arduous and painstaking preparation. It is gratifying to note that the persevering efforts and wonderful spirit of co-operation among the cast have been so amply rewarded It has been said that the proof of the pudding is in the eating—and no doubt the proof of a play is in the patronage accorded it. The fact that two capacity houses witnessed this production is "nuf said."

The play entails three acts and seven shifts of scenery, and a cast of twenty-five characters. Because of the unusually large number of characters it was necessary for several of the cast to "double up" in their playing of character roles. It is felt that this was accomplished with eminent success without sacrificing in any way the effect of realism in the play. In the slumming scene of the Paris underworld, in a dark and dimly lit cavern in the bowels of the earth, the audience viewed life in all its grim and realistic tragedy, but still interspersed with comedy and light-heartedness. In this scene was portrayed life in all its tragedy and cruel fate—in striking contrast to that simple pastoral life lived among the hills and dales of the dear old Emerald Isle.

The leading lady of the play in the role of Molly Malloy, "the fairest colleen in all Ireland," the cynosure of all eyes in County Ballyclare, was played with an ultimate perfection by Miss Anna Gallagher. Naturally blithesome, but necessarily sad during the prolonged absence of her sweetheart across the briny waters in a foreign land, Miss Gallagher interpreted her difficult role with a dramatic talent that gave the impression of absolute perfection.

The role of "Terry Sheehan," the young Irish lad, gifted with a voice, discovered only by accident, a voice which brought him fame and later disgrace, but finally ultimate rural happiness in Ireland, was admirably played by Joseph Clancy. His voice reveals a beautiful baritone quality which blended beautifully with that of Molly's in their joint rendition of the song, "Perfect Love," a song of parting as he bid a fond good-bye to Ireland's shores. His voice was also heard to good advantage in the song of the masquerade scene, "Those Far-Away Bells."

The role of Terry's father was played in admirable fashion by Michael Clancy. In his acting he revealed the fond loving heart of the Irish parent towards his children, and a father's anxiety regarding the wanderings of his long-lost son in France.

ATTITUDE TO WATER PROJECT IS UNKNOWN

Washington Senate in Doubt Regarding Dominion's Attitude Towards Plan.

MANY STATES INDIFFERENT.

Chief Opposition To St. Lawrence Project Comes From State of New York.

WASHINGTON, D.C. April 18.—(Canadian Press.)—Canada's attitude toward immediate development of the St. Lawrence deep waterway is variously interpreted here as positive, negative or neutral following publication of the exchange of notes between Washington and Ottawa on the subject.

Advocates of the scheme here see in Canada's letters to Secretary of State Kellogg a basis for immediate negotiation of a treaty looking toward the development in the near future of a joint deep waterway. Opponents declare that the subject has been postponed indefinitely. Both sides are reluctant to discuss the matter officially and no responsible member of the United States government will add anything to the bare text of the notes made public yesterday morning.

The chief opposition will come from the state of New York, and the supporters of "an all-American" route to the sea. Many states are indifferent, but the significant thing in election year is the enthusiastic support by western states of the project, which is eknown to have the active endorsement of Secretary of Commerce Herbert Hoover.

Would Pay For Itself.

The attitude of the western members of Congress is summed up in the comments of Senator Norris of Nebraska, Independent Republican, who believes the majority of the people of the Western States will authorize the expenditure involved, convinced that the St. Lawrence waterway would pay for itself in a reasonable lapse of time through the reduced cost of transportation and the sale of power developed and amortization over a term of years of the initial cost.

"We are willing," he said, "that the Eastern States should have the benefit of power for the development of industry. Canada may or may not export power and there is no reason why the Dominion should not limit the terms of leases if control of Canadian-developed power is desired."

Senator Norris thought that the lake levels had been very properly introduced by Canada into the discussion. He thought that Canada was entitled to underline more emphatically the necessity for a settlement of the controversy over the right of the city of Chicago to take water from the Great Lakes watershed and empty it into the Mississippi river.

He did not think that the tariff question should be brought into the St. Lawrence discussion.

"The tariff has nothing to do with it," he said.

Uncle Thady, admirably played by Dan Leonard, and Aunt Bridget, equally well played by Miss Stella Brady, indeed did their bit in admirable fashion in their injection of wholesome Irish comedy and native wit. They were old in years, it was true, but eternally young in spirit. Their constant repartee, their unexpected entrances, their vigorous, if not exactly skillful rendition of a "twosome" will long be remembered in the minds of the audience. Robert Armstrong, in the role of Clarence George Murdock, and John Madden, as Percival Gerald, the would-be poet, the composer of "odes" to dear Fawtha and 'Chawming Girls,' kept the house in a scream with their inimitable character presentations of the conventional, aristocratic stage Englishman.

This comedy, rich in the extreme, was in striking contrast to that furnished by Uncle Thady and Aunt Bridget. The above four characters injected the comic element with unqualified success.

Maurice Leonard as Brian Sheehan and Romeo Leonard as Dan Sheehan, were superb in bringing out the wit of their Aunt and Uncle and had heaps of fun with the Murdocks. John Holland as John Ferguson ,apparently a publisher, and later a secret service agent in the employ of the Irish Free State government, characterized his role in an excellent and completely satisfying manner. Mary Holland as Billy Clancy, captivated the audience with her splendid acting and charming demeanor Edmund Leonard as Parsons, the butler, provoked constant merriment, and later in the play, as a habitue of the Bas Quartiers, he received two encores as a dancing artist. Ulric Brioux, as a broken-down musical artist, in the same scene treated the house to several beautiful and artistic selections with the mouth organ. He will be remembered at least as "the master of the mouth organ.'

The Misses Carmelita Theobald and Helen Clancy were captivating in their charming and beautifulcostumes at the masquerade.

John Primeau, in the role of Fiske O'Toole played his part in his well known satisfactory manner.

The play was under the able and experienced directorship of John Primeau. The name "John Primeau, director," always means 'success.' Miss Margaret McCabe filled the difficult position of musical and dance directress, with an ability, the result of talent and experience. Sincere thanks is also due Sister Patricia, of St. Peter's High school for her kindness in favoring the production with a high class musical program. The musical ability of St. Peter's High school orchestra is sufficiently well known to render words of praise unnecessary. The members of the orchestra are to be congratulated indeed on their musical program. The management wish also to thank Gerald McFadden for properties loaned, Messrs. John McCabe, Robert Gillman, Angus MacPherson and Patrick Devlin for stage work, properties and lighting effects, Miss Mae Perry for the loan of several beatuiful costumes, also to the ladies who furnished the splendid luncheon both evenings.

Two delightful features were introduced, first on Monday evening, in the presence of Reverend Father Johnston, of Toronto, author of "Now Fawncy That," and on Tuesday evening in the presence of Rev. Father Peter McGuire, who entertained the audience with an instructive and humorous address, in which he congratulated the cast and the author in glowing terms of praise.

Easter Celebration Causes 21 Deaths

VACANCY FILLED ON EXECUTIVE

Horticultural Society Extends Work Among Junior Members This Year.

EXHIBITIONS PLANNED.

At a meeting of the directors of the Horticultural Society, by a unanimous vote Mrs. M. Grierson was appointed to the directorate to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of D. G. H. Melton.

A membership of 102 was reported to date, which includes a number of new members. It would help the directorate greatly if those having reply cards would return them to the secretary promptly so that the time might be spent on securing new members.

W. H. Young was again appointed to the chairmanship of the exhibit committee and will make arrangements for the monthly display, starting with the tulips in May and following these up with iris, peonies, sweet peas, roses and gladioli as they become seasonable.

This present week the junior membership campaign, under the direction of A. J. Madill, has been got under way with an objective of 1,000 members. Those eligible to join this section of the society are the pupils of the public and separate schools, including May's and the new Confederation School.

This year the directors have thought it advisable to ask the juniors to make a pledge whereby they will endeavor to keep from thoughtlessly damaging any lawn, park, flower beds, trees or shrubs.

To encourage the junior members and to give assistance and advice the directors started an honorary junior membership, which is open to any person who is not eligible to an active junior membership. For the fee of 1 cents these honorary members will receive the regular junior membership button without the option of a packet of seeds. They must live up to the pledge of a junior member.

W. H. Young, 1st vice-president of the society, was the first to pay for his button. Being young as his name implies, he thought he should be entitled to all the privileges of a junior member, but was ruled out of order.

DEFENSE CASE NOT EXPECTED TO END TO-DAY

Only Three Witnesses Heard at Morning Session of Currie's Libel Suit.

JUDGMENT CRITICIZED.

Witnesses Say He Should Have Refused To Order Advance —Examination Evidence Read.

COBOURG, April 18 (Special to The Examiner)—With the resumption of the hearing this morning of the Currie libel suit, it was expected that the defense would complete its side of the case, and the plaintiff's counsel begin their formal reply. But with only three witnesses called and lengthy portions read of General Currie's evidence given at his examination for discovery, there is no indication that the case for the defense will be completed to-day.

Of the witnesses called, several were asked to criticise the advance on Mons made by the Canadians on the eve of the armistice. One witness said the Canadians should have refrained from advancing and that General Currie should have refused to obey any orders to advance which may have been received. This action, the witness declared, should have been taken regardless of the respective positions and movements of other troops on the flanks of the Canadian Corps.

One witness who had ranked Company Sergeant-Major considered he was in a position to criticize the final advance and thought the attack should have been stopped.

After hearing these witnesses the defence read from the evidence of General Currie taken at his examination for discovery. This reading was not completed when the court rose for the noon recess at 1.10 p.m.

Artillery Fire Continued.

Russell Belk was the first witness called by the defence at the opening of the Court this morning. He was overseas with the 1st Brigade, C.F.A., going to France in September, 1915, as a sergeant, and getting a commission early in 1916. He is still on the roll of reserve officers. He was with the unit on November 10, 1918. The four batteries of the 1st Brigade fired on the morning of November 11. They were located just west of Mons. The firing was after daylight before eleven o'clock. He recalls an order coming to the Brigade that hostilities would cease at eleven o'clock. The firing continued after the order was received. The batteries received orders to fire from higher up.

Mr. Regan asked that orders for the 1st Brigade, C.F.A., for this date be looked up.

The witness continued, saying he went to Mons on November 12, and saw two or three dead Allied soldiers.

Mr. Regan asked: "The war was going on about four years. Currie was corps commander only part of the time. He knew that negotiations were under way for peace, and the German army was incapable of giving battle. He also knew the Armistice had been signed at five in the morning. Was the offensive justified?"

Mr. Tilley did not object, and the bench ruled that witness might answer. The witness did not wish to answer, but finally expressed the opinion that if a man knew for certain that the Armistice was signed, further hostilities were unnecessary.

Questioned by Mr. Tilley, the witness recalled a message beginning: "Hostilities will cease at eleven a.m." They did cease "right on the dot."

Albert Mason, who had given evidence previously, was recalled by Mr. Regan, and asked regarding General Currie's reputation among his men.

Mr. Tilley objected to the witness being recalled to give evidence, which he claimed was irrelevant . The Judge hesitated to give a ruling, and at General Currie's suggestion Mr. Tilley withdrew the objection. The Court reporter read the question, and witness said Currie was not "as popular as the others."

Q.—"What others?"

A.—"The other generals."

The bench did not wish other names brought into Court. After argument by counsel, the Judge disallowed the question ,also one as to General Currie's concern for the men in the ranks.

Witness would not have ordered an offensive had he been in the position and knew the Armistice signed. "The offensive should not have gone on after five o'clock."

To Mr. Tilley's questions, witness said he was a company sergeant-major. He admitted that the Germans were fighting as they retired, a rearguard action. He thought the Canadians should have stood fast and allowed the enemy to retire if they so desired. An extra few kilometres would not matter. He knew the front extended over a number of miles in conformity with the armies to the north and south. He thought Currie should have "refused" to carry out orders.

Mr. Regan asked for an exhibit from the examination for discovery. A copy of The Times, London, containing a report of Sir Douglas Haig on the operations of the Imperial troops during the last few days of the war showed that all the British troops were advancing. He would file it as an exhibit, but the Judge would not allow it to be entered. The report said that only in the neighborhood of Mons was "substantial opposition encountered." The witness still stated that the Canadians should not have gone on with the offensive.

David E. Davies.

David E. Davies, who went overseas with the Canadian Light Horse, told the court of there being one casualty in his unit early on the morning of November 11.

Q.—Were you at Mons

A.—Yes.

Q.—At what time?

A.—We entered between 3 and 4 o'clock in the morning.

Q.—Do you know how long fighting continued that day?

A.—I saw no hand to hand fighting, but I saw shells landing around the canal on the outskirts of the town.

Q.—"What time in the morning was the shelling?" asked Mr. Tilley.

A.—Between six and seven.

Q.—You say you had one casualty?

A.—Yes.

Q.—Killed or wounded?

A.—I can't tell you.

Q.—What his name?

A.—Prichard.

Question Not Allowed.

Robert Marshall was recalled by Regan and asked: "What was General Currie's reputation among his men?" The Judge ruled the question not allowed. Mr. Regan quoted from a legal volume with which the bench was familiar ,and Justice Rose asked Mr. Regan exactly what was his question. Mr. Regan repeated the question to the witness and it was still inadmissible. Mr. Regan wanted his inexperience considered as well as Mr. Tilley's vast experience.

Asked by Mr. Regan the witness expressed the opinion that the fighting was not necessary. Mr. Tilley did not wish to question the witness. Mr. Regan expressed the opinion that perhaps nothing said in court had any bearing on the case. Also that every time he tried to ask questions they were objected to and objection was sustained.

William Tediman.

William Tediman, who served as a sergeant-major overseas, was then called by Mr. Regan.

"I am going to ask your opinion as to the advisability of the fighting around Mons, after the armistice was signed, resulting in the loss of life."

His Lordship—"Is this an expert witness, Mr. Regan? I cannot call him that."

Then followed an argument between the court and Mr. Regan as to the putting in of expert evidence.

"Sir Arthur Currie has said that this fighting was justified in his examination for discovery."

To the witness—"Now do you——"

His Lordship—"No, no, no."

Mr. Regan—"I want to make myself clear on this point to the jury."

His Lordship—"This is not a time to address the jury.."

Mr. Regan then asked the witness to stand aside, and he commenced to read the examination for discovery. Mr. Tilley objected and His Lordship pointed out the uses that could be made of the examination for discovery.

Mr. Tilley—"Might I suggest that my friend, if he puts the hypothetical question to the witness, he will be over this difficulty. Say to him, 'If General Currie said such a thing what is your opinion?'"

Mr. Regan—"I am willing to put it anyway under the sun."

The witness was recalled.

"Was an offensive justified when Sir Arthur Currie knew that the armistice had been signed at 5.30 on the morning of November 11?" he asked, but before witness answered the question Mr. Regan went on to read a military report of Sir Arthur Currie, in which he told of the cavalry of the 63rd Division advancing. The infantry failed to reach their objective, and the Canadians had to clear the enemy out. "Now that is an offensive," said Mr. Regan. Witness then said further fighting on November 11 after the armistice was signed was not necessary.

Q.—Was it justified?

A.—It was not.

Q.—Do you express the opinion that the Canadian Army should work on their own initiative and not cooperate with the other armies? asked Mr. Tilley.

A.—I certainly do.

Death Sentence Is Discussed In Commons

LONDON, April 18 (Canadian Press Cable). — Re-assembling after the Easter recess, the House of Commons yesterday discussed the death sentence in the Army, which, under a Bill passed last night, is now limited to mutiny, treachery, cowardice, desertion, and leaving a post before being relieved.

At question time, Right Hon. W. G. Bridgeman, First Lord of the Admiralty, announced confirmation of the sentences on Captain Kenneth G. B. Dewar and Commander H. M. Daniel, of H.M.S. Royal Oak, who, however, may be re-employed later. He also announced that Rear-Admiral Bernard St. G. Collard has been placed definitely on the retired list.

ATTEMPTS TO ADDRESS JUDGE AFTER BEING BARRED FROM BOX RESULTS IN PROMPT EJECTION

Objection To Recall of Defense Witness Sustained By Court.

INTERRUPTS COUNSEL.

Former Colonel of Red Watch Insists On Making Explanation in Spite of Warnings.

COBOURG, April 18 (Special to The Examiner). — Fireworks were expected this morning, for on the arrival of Col. John Currie, M.P.P., he joined in conversation with W. T. R. Preston and T. F. Hall, K.C., acting for the defendants.

The next move was to put Col. Currie in the box, but before he got there Mr. Tilley was on his feet objecting to the Colonel being put back in the box.

Justice Rose wanted to know why the Colonel was being put in the box.

Mr. Regan said: "I wish to deny a statement made by General Currie in his examination for discovery."

Col. Currie, who had advanced part way to the box, interrupted Mr. Regan to address His Lordship.

"Your Lordship," he began.

"Stop, man," Justice Rose ordered.

"Yes, wait a moment,' 'added Mr. Regan.

Col. Currie persisted in his address to the Court.

"Your Lordship, I want—" he pressed.

"Stop,' 'commanded Justice Rose. "Mr. Sheriff, will you have this man removed from the Courtroom."

"But, Your Lordship," Col. Currie again interjected.

"Remove him, Mr. Sheriff," the Court ordered.

Upon instructions of Sheriff D. J. Nesbitt, Col. Currie was led from the Courtroom by Chief of Police John C. Ruse.

"Wait outside," said Mr. Regan, as Col. Currie was led away by the constable.

In Trouble Yesterday.

Within an ace of being sent to jail for contempt of court yesterday afternoon when, during his examination by Frank Regan, counsel for the defendants, he insisted on making comment after he had been ordered by Mr. Justice Rose not to answer questions put to him.

Col. Currie was called as a witness to testify about Sir Arthur Currie's reputation. Mr. Regan began to ask the colonel questions about incidents at the second Battle of Ypres, in 1915, but His Lordship ruled them out, and it was when the witness insisted on commenting that the court threatened to commit him for contempt.

The colonel was dimissed from the stand, but recalled a few moments later, when Mr. Regan started, "Were you in any dugout. . ."

Mr. Justice Rose interrupted impatiently: "Oh! You needn't ask him that."

Colonel Currie started to say something; but His Lordship cut him short with, "If you do not get out of that witness box, I will send for the sheriff to put you out." The witness left without any further comment.

The examination of Col. Currie was the high spot of the day. He was a full colonel he said in reply to questions of Frank Regan defence counsel, having been connected with the militia since 1892, when he joined the 48th Highlanders as one of the original captains. He is still attached to its reserve battalion. He offered the services of that unit on August 12, 1924, he continued, went to Valcartier and subsequently sailed with the First Division for England and later to France as commander of the unit. He was offered a staff appointment, he explained, but he thought that might involve staying in London, so he refused and went to France with his men.

At that time, he went on, Sir Arthur Currie was in command of the 2nd Brigade while his unit was in the Third Brigade.

Further questioning led up to the battle of St. Julien, one of the engagements which are known as the second battle of Ypres. At this point Mr. Regan asked Mr. Tilley if he might borrow the plaintiff's map of the Ypres salient and Mr. Tilley rose to state that he did not know what the court had to do with the Ypres matter; this action was about Mons.

His Lordship wanted to know the relevancy of the evidence and Mr. Regan replied that he wanted to show there had been an enormous loss of life at that battle because of the plaintiff's action.

Mr. Tilley: "I do not know whether my learned friend wants to take advantage of this trial to make other charges."

Mr. Regan— "I press the matter because the conduct of the plaintiff was such as would not reflect any credit on him. At this battle the story goes out. . ."

His Lordship—"Never mind what story got out. Just say 'some story' got out."

Mr. Regan—"And it got out on the floor of the House of Commons. I

Junkers Plane Will Be Given Clearance

ST. ALBAN'S, Vt., April 18 (Canadian Press).— The Junkers relief plane F-13, which flew to Montreal on Monday carrying Miss Herta Junkers and Fred Melchoir with spare parts for the trans-Atlantic ship Bremen, now at Greenly Island, will be given clearance through United States Customs District 2, here, when it returns to New York, customs officials said.

Collector of Customs Harry C. Whitehill, when advised that the members of the Bremen's crew would continue their flight to New York in the F-13, said that his department would expedite matters by giving the plane customs clearance at the Montreal field. He probably will personally clear the ship.

BOY INJURED BY AUTOMOBILE

Driver of Car Turns Into Ditch Trying to Avoid Hitting Child.

BOY RECOVERING.

Severely cut about the face and left side, the 11-year-old son of Dalton Dolan, who resides near the Sherbrooke street crossing on the Peterborough-Port Hope highway, lies at his home slowly recovering from the result of a serious accident which occurred on the highway about seven o'clock on Monday evening. The child was struck by a passing motor car, the driver of which turned into the ditch in a vain effort to avoid the accident.

It appears that the little lad had been near the street and had suddenly dashed across while there were cars coming from both directions. The car which struck him was proceeding at about twenty miles an hour on the right side of the road.

Dr. D. W. Clark was immediately called and attended the injured child while Provincial Constable N. F. Maker investigated the accident. An X-ray examination on Tuesday did not disclose any internal injuries, and it is believed that young Dolan will recover within a short time.

FIRE DESTROYS 1,000 BUILDINGS

Seven Hours' Work Needed To Bring Blaze in Japanese City Under Control.

DAMAGE $500,000.

TOKIO, April 18 (Canadian Press) —More than one thousand buildings were destroyed in the city of Hirosaki in Northern Japan by a fire which raged for seven hours before being placed under control to-day. The damage was estimated at one million yen, approximately half a million dollars. No casualties were reported.

CITY TIME-GUN WANTED.

City officials of Cannes, France, have been asked to restore the noonday gun so that the citizens may be able to set their watches. The request mentions that the city has no public clock, and further asks that if the gun be restored that it "could be relied upon to be accurate."

SKIDER KILLS HEALTH MAN.

Bitten on the leg by a poisonous red-backed spider while on his vacation, A. E. Cresswell, senior analyst of the Health Department of Australia, died from bloodpoisoning recently at his home at Melbourne. The Government entomologist said that the species is the most deadly in Australia, and has caused several deaths in recent years.

MICE OVER-RUN RANGES.

LEWISTON, Idaho April 18. — (Canadian Press.) — Thousands of field mice are over-running live stock ranges on the Upper Snake river. The rodents have eaten one-third of the grass in the section.

American locomotives are being used on the Madagascar Government Railways.

KING CONFERS HONORS UPON EARL ATHLONE

Three New Knights of the Garter Are Appointed By His Majesty.

HAD MILITARY CAREER.

Duke of Abercorn and Lord Desborough Other Two Recipients.

LONDON, April 18 (A.P.) — The King yesterday appointed three new Knights of the Garter, the highest order of chivalry. Recipients of the honor are the Earl of Athlone, Governor-General of South Africa; the Duke of Abercorn, Governor of Northern Ireland, and Lord Desborough, Chairman of the Thames Conservancy Board and President of the British Imperial Chamber of Commerce.

Earl of Athlone

The new honor to Earl Athlone, who is a younger brother of the Queen, comes on the heels of the death of his son and heir, Viscount Trematon. The young man died a few days ago in Paris of injuries sustained when he drove an automobile into a tree. A fellow undergraduate of Cambridge University who with a third student was accompanying him on a European trip, was killed. The Earl of Athlone is the first of that name, the title having been created in 1917. He has had a military career and gained mention in dispatches for his service in South Africa and was twice cited for honor for acts in the World War. His wife was Princess Alice of Albany.

Duke of Abercorn

The Duke of Abercorn is the third of that title. He has been governor of North Ireland since 1922. He was named Lord Lieutenant of Tyrone in 1917. He was in the army as a young man, but resigned in 1903. His family traces back to Baron Paisley in 1587. The Duchess of Abercorn was Lady Rosaline Bingham, daughter of the Earl of Lucan. The duke's mother was Lady Mary Curzon, daughter of Earl Howe.

Lord Desborough

Lord Desborough was a noted mountain climber, swimmer, Oxford oarsman and stunt athlete of the late 70's. He is the first Baron of Taplow, the title having been created in 1905. He gained his baronetcy after a parliamentary and political career. He was elected to the House of Commons four times, his last term expiring in 1905.

Lord Desborough, as William H. Greenfell, became known as a distance runner for Oxford against Cambridge in 1876. He rowed on the Oxford eights the next two years. His stunts included two swims across the Niagara River and the stroking of an eight-oared crew across the British Channel. For three successive years he won the English punting championship and he shot big game in the Rocky Mountains of America when the Western United States was still the haunt of hostile Indians.

BOY INJURED.

Log Swings Round On Load, Crushing His Foot Badly.

CAVAN, April 18.— Vance Woodall, of Hamilton, who was spending the Easter holidays with his grandmother, Mrs. Touchbourne, met with a painful accident. He had gone to Millbrook with his uncle on a load of logs, and when they were drawing them into the mill on a boat, one of the logs swung around, crushing his foot very badly and tearing the shoe completely off. Dr. Turner gave first aid, after which he was removed to his home, his uncle, S. Touchbourne, accompanying him.

283 ENTER RACE.

BOSTON, April 18. — (Canadian Press.)—There were 283 runners entered to-day for the 32nd running of the Boston Marathon, the final Olympic try-out at this distance, but only a dozen need to be reckoned with, according to Tom Kanaly, of the Boston Athletic Association.

DATE CHOSEN FOR FALL FAIR

Apsley Exhibition To Be Held On September 5th and 6th —Floods Subsiding.

PLAY PRESENTED.

APSLEY, April 18.—The three act comedy, "Aaron Slick from Punkin Crick" was preformed in the Parish Hall on Thursday evening, and kept a fair sized audience in almost continous laughter for two and a half hours. Mrs. G. Kilborn, as Sis Riggs, a regular tomboy, carried off all honors though all the company filled their roles exceedingly well, three of the cast making their debut on the stage.

The characters were represented as follows: Wilbur Mandew, Norman James, Clarence Green, George Tanner, Aaron Slick, C. Spence, Mrs. Rosy Berry, Phyllis Spence, Gladys May Mandew, Idena James, the girl in red, Mrs. F. Tanner, Sis Riggs, Mrs. G. Kilborn.

Date Chosen

The directors of the Apsley Agricultural Society met on Saturday afternoon and choose September 5th and 6th as the date for the fall fair. They also inspected the only two available sites for a fair ground, and finally decided to purchase six acres from Russell Hales behind Jim Downing's lot at the east end of the village at $35 an acre.

Floods Subsiding

The floods are now subsiding after what is declared by R. H. Knox as the worst flood since 1870. It is reported that nearly all the bridges "up north" have been washed away but little damage has been done here though at times the situation regarding Knox's saw mill was critical.

Red Cross Receives $500

The Rev. C. A. G. Spence, president of the Apsley Red Cross, is in receipt of a cheque for $500, a legacy left to the Red Cross Hospital by the late Mrs. Mary Bickell, of Lakefield.

WELCOME PARTY.

Social Gathering Spent at the Home of Mr. and Mrs. Delbert Bowins at Pontypool.

PONTYPOOL, April 18.— A large number of the friends of Mr. and Mrs. Delbert Bowins gathered at their home on Monday evening to welcome Mr. Bowin and his bride, who was formerly Miss Hazel Aldread. The early part of the evening was spent in cards and dancing and at midnight lunch was served, after which John Payne, on behalf of the gathering, congratulated the young couple on their marriage, and stated that he was glad to see them settle down in this community, for he personally know Mr. Bowen, to be a good citizen and a chap who was interested in the church, L.O.L. No. 82, sporting activities and other community enterprises, and was the type of citizen most required in this locality. He asked Mr. and Mrs. Bowins to kindly accept the different gifts as a slight token of the esteem they held in the community.

Mr. Bowins thanked his many friends for their kindness and assured them that they would be welcome at his home any time. He also stated that he was the fifth generation to reside on that farm. Short addresses were made by Messrs. W. L. Rayfield, T. Webb, and Ernest Bowins.

The remainder of the evening was spent in dancing. The committee in charge was Messrs. L. Aldread and J. Payne.

Personals

Mr. Frank Moore, of Kinmount, is spending a week with Mr. Albert McMahon.

Miss Muriel Matchett, of Cavan, and Miss Anna Hawthorne, of Millbrook, have returned to their respective schools.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Hooper are spending a week with their daughter Mrs. T. W. F. G. Andrews, at Sault Ste. Marie.

Mr. W. Voysey, of Drum Corners, has commenced plowing activities and reports the ground in fair condition, but the wet spots are slow in drying up. Those who have tapped trees reports a poor run. The late spring will also play havoc with the feed question and a number of people will be scarce of it unless winter ends soon.

NORHAM DEBATERS WIN ARGUMENT

First of Series of Inter-League Debates Held at Norham.

NORHAM, April 18.—"Resolved that steam is of more value to mankind than electricity," was the debate given on Thursday evening between the Young People's League of Myersburg and Norham. This is the first of the series of inter-league debates of the Bay of Quinte Conference.

Miss Jennie Dilworth and Owen Clark, of Myersburg, upheld the affirmative, while Miss Claire Curtis and A. Meneilly were on the negative side. The Rev. D. R. Clare was chairman, while Mr. Coxswell, of Campbellford, Orville Kelly, of Warkworth, and Ewart Huyke, of Norham, were judges.

Four excellent addresses were given and many arguments were advanced by both sides, but after deliberation, the decision of the judges gave the victory to the negative side, the Norham debaters.

The Rev. D. R. Clare was the critic for the evening and gave some excellent advice to the debaters. First study and read and re-read the subject given until fully understood; second, study all available material on both sides of the subject; third,

CHARACTER NEEDED TO BUILD UP CANADA

Rev. Ernest Harston Addresses Christ Church Men's Club.

CAMPBELLFORD, April 18. — The Men's Club of Christ Church, Campbellford, enjoyed a special treat on Monday night in a most interesting address by Rev. E. Harston, LL.B., of St. John's United Church. A large attendance was on hand, and evidenced their pleasure by giving Mr. Harston three cheers upon his entering the hall.

After a characteristically humorous introduction, the speaker announced his topic as "Putting Canada Upon the Map." In reply to a question put to a banker, a Westerner, a farmer, and another friend, he received various answers, but all showed that they thought Canada required material assistance, whether by way of money, better transportation, better crops, or more immigration. The speaker believed Canada must look for something more permanent and more vital than material things. History has proved the futility of dependence upon such things.

In the spring of 1918 it looked to all the world as if the Allies could not stem the force of Germany's materialism, but suddenly two forces turned the tide, viz., the collapse of Germany's moral fibre and the quality of manhood in the Allied armies.

There is something in life enormously more valuable and efficacious than money; there is something bigger and finer than material things—it is manhood. There is nothing can approach character as a force to "put Canada upon the map." The speaker referred to the heroism of the British sailor as exampled in Tennyson's poem, "The Revenge," quoting:

"Sink me the ship, Master Gunner,

Plague of Locusts Crosses Holy Land

JERUSALEM, April 18.—Clouds of locusts appeared over Jericho on Monday arternoon, but were checked in their advance by the wind. The Department of Agriculture yesterday was attempting to exterminate them with flame guns. Travellers from Trans-Jordania said they passed through five miles of locusts between Maan and Amman.

British Bond Issue Is Admitted To Trading In New York Exchange

NEW YORK, April 18 (Canadian Press).—The United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland 4 per cent refunding loan of 1960-1990, the largest foreign government bond issue ever listed here, was admitted to trading yesterday on the New York Stock Exchange. The original amount of the loan was £409,111,600, and the total now outstanding is £388,000,000, or approximately $1,890,000,000.

The bonds will be dealt in on an "and interest" basis, to be computed at parity of exchange. Quotations will be similar to those on United States Liberty bonds. The £100 and £500 bonds will be treated in all respects as if they were $500 and $2,500 bonds respectively.

Inasmuch as the number of the bonds available for actual delivery in New York may be less than the amount required for the market, trading will take place for delivery within 30 days at the seller's option, as well as for regular delivery.

No change in the stock exchange requirements for the listing of foreign external obligations, or foreign shares, is involved. The primary market for the loan will remain in London and the price here will naturally follow the London quotation. Dealings will occur in the original British bearer bond certificates, making them negotiable simultaneously on the London and New York exchanges.

IN POLICE COURT

Appearing before Magistrate O. A. Langley in Police Court this morning, two local men faced charges of reckless driving. A fine of $10.00, and costs, was imposed on each of them. A second case, in the nature of a non-support charge, was brought by a young Peterborough wife against her husband. It was adjourned.

Arthur King appeared before Magistrate Langley, charged with stealing the motor car of C. M. Moncur in this city on Tuesday, April 17, contrary to Section 386 of the Criminal Code. He asked a week's remand, and G. W. Hatton, K.C., consented, though in view of prisoner's past record, he would not consent to allowing King out on his own bail. Accordingly, the prisoner was remanded until April 25, at 10 a.m.

Arthur Dundas was charged with the theft of $10.00, the property of John Dundas, on Monday, April 16. He consented to summary trial by the Magistrate, and pleaded guilty.

Dundas had taken the money from a purse in the home of his brother, but had been overtaken by detectives and all save 10c had been recovered. Accused had a clean Court record previous to this case. He had worked in Peterborough last summer, but had been in Fenelon Falls during the winter.

Taking all these facts into consideration, Magistrate Langley adjourned the case for one week, in which accused is to earn the money to pay the costs of Court.

TRENT RIVER HIT BY STORM

Property Along River Bank Damaged By Saturday's Storm.

WORST IN YEARS.

TRENT RIVER, April 18.—Saturday night's blizzard was the worst of its kind remembered here for many years. The terrific wind began early Saturday and continued throughout the night and high winds prevailed all Sunday. The high water was blown up on the shores which made matters worse. One resident, who lives on the 14th Concession, said that they had lived in that locality for more than twenty years and had never experienced a windstorm like it. Their house, which is of a high structure, rocked during the storm.

The acre of marsh land which broke loose a week ago and lodged in a cove up the river, was again blown in mid stream, and just at dusk Saturday night, landed in the cove at E. H. Fairbrother's dock, and is held there by the little bridge leading to the small islands at that shore.

James Cook's boat house was badly damaged and floated to a big tree where it is held secure, the doors being torn off and the boats were let out on the river. Frank Brewer's boat house was shifted around. Mrs. W. Wylde's boat house on the shore of her cottage (occupied by Mr. McIntyre) was shattered and completely lifted up and thrown back on the land. The water is over the main pier and lashing up around the monument at the government grounds. The little bridge leading to the Campbellford cottage Island, is almost surmerged. The road on either side is flooded.

Miss Bessie G. French has to use a boat to cross when going uptown.

Personals

Miss Ruth Fairbrothers left for Gananoque on Saturday accompanied by four C. G. I. T. girls: The Misses Ina Allen, Mary Mitchell, Margaret McMinch, and Jean Reid. They took their daily hike to Havelock for supplies during their stay.

The road scraper has been doing good work on the main road. The high winds are causing the roads to dry up.

Mr. Jack Christie has returned to Toronto after spending a few days at the Christie Cottage.

Mrs. Andrew Carnrite is visiting her daughter, Mrs. John Hay, at Campbellford.

Miss Helen Scott of Norwood Road was a week-end visitor with Miss Florence Wildman.

Mr. and Mrs. George Vanvolkenburg, Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Vanvolkenburg, Miss Ethel Rose and Mr. Harold Vanvolkenburg were Thursday visitors with Mr. and Mrs. E. Wildmand and family.

Miss Ethel Rose left on Monday for Toronto after spending the past few weeks with Mr. and Mrs. George Vanvolkenburg and family.

Mr. Reg. Brennan, of Havelock, was at "Algrada" opening up for the season. Mr. Brennan has purchased more land adjoining his summer residence.

Mr. John Garratt, of Toronto, paid a visit to his cottage recently.

New Divorce Rule.

LOS ANGELES, April 18 (Canadian Press).—Here's a new one. If a woman insists on driving the family car, she isn't entitled to a divorce when her husband makes love to a woman in the back seat. A Superior Court judge ruled that yetserday in a divorce suit.

TWO DELEGATES ARE APPOINTED

Easter Meeting of Presbyterian W. M. S. Held at Madoc.

DISTRICT NEWS.

MADOC, April 18.—Mrs. West and Mrs. Milne were appointed as delegates to the Presbyterial, which meets at Gananoque on May 22, at the Easter meeting of the Presbyterian W. M. S. held at the home of Mrs. Curry. In the absence of the president, Mrs. E. West, the first vice-president, Mrs. Marshll, took charge of the business period.

Mrs. Milne explained the lesson from the study book, "The Royal Road." It was very interesting to listen about the different hospitals, some of which Mrs. Milne visited during her tour through the west.

Mrs. Watson read the scriptural reading and offered prayer. Mrs. Mettit sang "Once I thought I walked with Jesus", before closing prayer by Mrs. J. Allen.

Mrs. Jenkins will also attend the Presbyterial, as a representative of the Mission Band. The Easter offering amounted to $29.30.

Plowing Done

Mr. Jack Caskey, of Madoc township is the first to report ploughing done in this section. Jack was ploughing on Friday, 13th, but has had to quit on account of the storm and snow.

Wild Geese Seen

A flock of wild geese was observed flying south on Friday, 13th, presumably on account of wild, stormy weather further north.

Birthday Party

Mrs. A. Thompson was pleasantly surprised by her friends recently, on the occasion of her birthday, when about thirty guests were present and she was the recipient of many beautiful gifts and numerous wishes for many happy returns of the day. A beautiful birthday cake with colored candles was presented to Mrs. Thompson during the lunch hour.

Personals

Mr. Wm. Mackintosh, of Belleville, has been relieving at their branch store in town.

Mrs. Roscoe Vanderwater and children were guests of her sister, Mrs. A. Kincaid, over the week-end.

Messrs. Carl Caskey, of Toronto, and Herbert Caskey, of Sulphide, are spending their holidays with their parents in town.

Mr and Mrs. R. McGhee and Miss Mary McGhee were in Toronto last Wednesday attending the funeral of Mr. McGhee's sister, the late Mrs. Strain.

Miss Lucy Foster spent the Easter holidays with her parents at Moira.

Mr. Vaughan Jack, of Deloro, spent Easter Sunday with friends in town.

Miss Mary McGhee, of Parry Sound is the guest of her parents in town.

Miss Ella Adams spent the Easter week with her uncle in Belleville, and also visited her two sisters while there.

Mrs. Joseph Burns is visiting her daughter, Mrs. J. Wilson, in Toronto.

Miss Helen Keene, of Queensboro, has been visiting friends in town.

Mr. Keith Jarvis of Oshawa spent the holiday with his mother in town.

Mr. William Bassett, of the Hydro-Electric Power Co., Oshawa, is at home for a week's visit.

Mr. Allan Burris, of Lindsay, spent a few days in town with friends.

COLLARD PLACED ON RETIRED LIST

Admiral Concerned in Royal Oak Trouble Relieved of Command.

LONDON, April 17 (Canadian Press).—Rear Admiral Bernard St. G. Collard, central figure in the famous Royal Oak affair which involved the court martialing of Captain Dewar and Commander Daniel, has been relieved of his command and placed upon the retired list.

Announcement of this was made when the House of Commons convened to-day after the Easter recess by W. C. Bridgeman, First Lord of the Admiralty, in the long-awaited address on the Royal Oak controversy.

Mr. Bridgeman said that the Board of the Admiralty was of the opinion that the initial blame for what had occurred aboard the Royal Oak lay with Admiral Collard in dealing with trivial causes of dissatisfaction in a manner unbecoming his position and showing himself unfitted for high command. Therefore, it had been decided, in spite of his good services in the past, to retire him.

OLD ACTOR ILL.

LOS ANGELES, April 18.—(Canadian Press.)—Frank Currier, an actor of the old school, who made his first appearance on the stage at the age of three in 1860, is critically ill here with septic poisoning.

If you could only see the Joker in the "CHEAP" Paint Can

COMPARED on a cost per gallon basis with Sherwin-Williams House Paint, it looks as if "cheap" paint had the best of the argument. But—there's a Joker in the deal.

You pay a little less for the low priced paint by the gallon, but you pay a lot more for it by the job and by the year than if you selected SWP to do the work. The "cheap" paint lacks coverage. A gallon of it covers 250 square feet less than a gallon of SWP. You'll need more of it for the job. By the time you've finished, the difference in cost of material between the "cheap" paint and SWP will be reduced to the vanishing point. So — where does the saving come in?

The labor cost per gallon will be the same in both cases, but more gallons of cheap paint will be needed. SWP will weather slowly. It will still look good and be in excellent condition long after the "cheap" paint job has gone. Apply SWP under the right conditions and it will last two to five times as long as the average "joker" paint.

Don't let the low-price appeal mesmerize you. The whole argument on behalf of "cheap" paint is plain "applesauce." The way to save disappointment and needless re-painting cost is to select SWP — the paint that gives you full value for every cent of the purchase price.

The local Sherwin-Williams dealer—"Paint Headquarters"—can supply you. Visit him. He'll show you how much SWP you'll need for that job of yours. He'll give you useful literature and copy of the Sherwin-Williams "Household Guide" free. Do this and the Joker in the "cheap" paint can won't worry you.

REV. FATHER O'BRIEN'S PASSING.

With deep regret was the news received in Peterborough of the death, during a visit to Montreal, of Rev. Father Michael O'Brien, a well-known former resident of this city, whose taking off at the early age of thirty-nine years has brought genuine grief to a large circle of friends.

Rev. Father O'Brien is remembered not only as a priest but for his early career in Peterborough when, as a student at the Collegiate Institute and before entering upon the priesthood, he was a noted athlete, one of his marks as a jumper still remaining a record in the Collegiate sports' calendar while as a baseball player and member of Peterborough Senior team he was famous as a clever first baseman and a consistent batter.

Of broad sympathies with a keen wit and an ability to see the problems and worries of those with whom he came into contact Rev. Father O'Brien's personality endeared him to all who knew him.

His chuch has lost an able and faithful priest.

THE RURAL SCHOOL PROBLEM.

Something that opponents of the Township School Boards plan should think over is the fact that the records show that in 1926 there were 69 rural schools in Ontario with three pupils or fewer and eight with only one pupil.

That is a condition that should cause some earnest study of the whole problem of rural education.

Premier Ferguson offers his plan as a remedy for this and other defects in the present system of education in rural Ontario but the proposal so far has met with almost unanimous disapproval.

In the county school sections the Fergusonian cure is looked upon with acute suspicion, but unfortunately while his plan is being rejected nobody else has any any other policy to bring forward.

Between a proposal that offers some good reason for anticipating an improvement and the retention of a system that is no longer capable of complete efficiency these should be little difficulty in making a choice—but rural Ontario would apparently rather bear those ills it has than fly to others that it knows not of.

ONTARIO LEADS IN PLEASURE BOAT BUILDING.

Ninety-eight establishments were engaged in the manufacture and repair of boats and canoes in Canada, for the year 1926, as compared to eighty-eight in 1925, according to a report recently issued by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics on the boat building industry in Canada. These establishments employed 598 workers on salaries and wages amounting to $702,633. The industry used raw materials in 1926 which cost $437,059, and the value of products and work done was $1,576,276. A decrease in the capital invested of $1,616,908, for 1926, is noted, when compared with $1,677,684 in 1925.

The building of small pleasure boats and canoes is most highly developed in the province of Ontario, where there are fifty-three establishments engaged in this work. The most important class of small craft made in 1926 was that of canoes, of which 3,986 were manufacutred and valued at $282,056. Next in order of importance are row-boats, skiffs, dories, etc., of which 2,580 were made with a value of $146,226. Motor boats, of which 370 were made, were valued at $573,554. Miscellaneous marine and fisherman's supplies were valued at $63,012, and repairs at $186,923.—From the files of the Peterborough Chamber of Commerce.

APRIL GARDENS.

April flowers are the brightest and the sweetest scented of the whole year. They are the gay buds of our imaginations, evoked by the seedsmen's allurements and by the beckoning of our bare and still muddy gardens.

Here are perfect blooms of flawless form and with no detracting nor disillusioning circumstances. No worms in the bud of the rose, no swarms of aphis on its stems and leaves, nor spearing thorns! No serpent, or if you will, mere insect in this Eden, nor ugly ally the toad! No midges nor mosquitoes to spoil our contemplation, no beating rains nor splashing soil to bedraggle the bloom. But the bees shall hum in the summer sun, and the butterflies shall weave their restless color into the beauty of the blossoms. The tulips shall live on, and the ferns retain their vivid greenness until the frosts come. As creators of this paradise we refuse to think of fading beauty. It is an eternal, deathless bower.

Hope plants and tends the struggling shoots and watches uneasily the first intimations of withering, the gradual decline and final passing of all the loveliness. Time gathers its harvest in the garden, leaving only the seeds for another year, for a new generation and new hopes. And we realize the Beauty in the garden of Utility. Beauty is not an end in itself, but a purpose, a means to that end. In the human garden, we vainly try to persuade ourselves that it is an end in itself, while all around us is beauty fading and faded, and too many of its brightest and best flowers leave no seed, nor hope of another flowering.

THE NATIVE SONS.

Peterborough, we are informed, will soon have a branch of the Native Sons of Canada.

The objects of this organization as outlined by one of its officers, leave little room for criticism; in fact they strike most people as entirely laudable.

And yet the feeling will not down that there is no pressing need for such a movement in this country, that Canada would be better off if there were fewer organizations to divide the people of the Dominion into separate camps, if there was less stressing of nationalities and more emphasis placed on the fact that here in this wide-flung land it is our duty whether we were born here, whether we have adopted Canada as our home to work together as Canadians all.

Membership in the Native Sons is confined to those who were born in Canada or of Canadian parents and those who have lived in Canada before they were six years of age.

The restriction would bar thousands of men who are Canadians through and through, men who have brought honor and distinction to the land and whom we are glad to have known to the world as Canadians.

Had such an organization been in existence in 1867 many of the Fathers of Confederation would have been unable to qualify.

Sir John A. MacDonald would have squeezed in because he came to this country at the age of five, but George Brown, D'arcy McGee, Alexander Galt and other "Fathers" couldn't have become members.

Empire builders like Baron Shaughnessy and Lord Strathcona would likewise have been left out in the cold.

And coming down to present day conditions we find many celebrated Canadians who would be blackballed if they tried to join the Native Sons.

With all his wealth and influence, Sir Herbert Holt couldn't get in; famous Canadian writers like Stephen Leacock and Frederic William Wallace are barred. Principal Bruce Taylor of Queen's University would have to stay out, so would Stewart Lyon, veteran editor of the Globe whose writing has always been the very spirit of Canadianism, and Dr. Charles Best, co-discoverer with Dr. Banting of insulin, Fred Acland, the King's Printer for Canada, John Kay MacDonald, president of the Confederation Life, Charles F. Sise, president of the Bell Telephone Company of Canada, D. B. Hanna, first chairman of Ontario's Liquor Control Board, Dr. Herbert Fricker, conductor of the famous Mendelssohn Choir, and hundreds of other distinguished Canadians.

E. A. Peck, Federal member for West Peterborough, although he has lived in this city for fifty-nine years and is a Canadian to his finger-tips would fail to qualify and he would have lots of company from Canada's Parliament for the list of members not eligible under the restrictions of the Native Sons to join that order would include Hon. Charles Dunning, Minister of Railways; Hon. Robert Forke, Minister of Immigration; Hon. H. H. Stevens, ex-minister of Trade and Commerce; Sir George Perley, and Wm. Duff, M.P., to name a few.

VOCAL NUISANCES AT GOOD HOCKEY MATCHES.

Why is it that at nearly every hockey match one goes to see there is a man somewhere in a seat behind, and not far away another man, who keep up an endless stream of loud talk about the game or at each other. They are going to bet, but they don't. Sometimes they are going to go outside and slay each other, but they don't.

Evidently they are not the same men each night. If you look at them two different nights they do not seem to be the same pair, but their loud talk is always of the same sort. Each yells for one of the teams. Each is contemptuous of the other players. Both regard the referee as incompetent or worse. First one and then the other is disgusted with the poor quality of the game he is witnessing and shouts his demand that those on the ice play hockey. He never saw so poor a game.

The game may be one of the best exhibitions of hockey ever seen in town, but these loud-voiced disturbers of those present do not know it. They frequently reveal, during the course of the game, the fact that they actually know nothing about the rules of hockey as it is played this season. They rail at the referee for putting a player off when the reason for it is apparent to everybody. When the bell rings for the puck to be brought back and faced off, they see nothing in it but robbery. They use their voices so much that they see little. By shouting they advertise their unacquaintance with the rules governing the game. Why do they do it? Can they imagine that those who are forced to listen to them enjoy their raucous voices, their valueless opinions, their unfair shouting at the players and officials? If they believe that, they will believe anything. Excited and enthusiastic supporters of a team are all right. They improve the game. But these others spoil the occasion for all whose seats are anywhere near them.—Toronto Star.

SHOULD NEWSPAPERS DO THIS?

(From The Toronto Saturday Night.)

We note an increasing tendency on the part of certain Toronto newspapers to follow in the steps of the American tabloids and refer to criminals by their Christian names. Thus, "Hilda Goes Down for Life," "Arthur Pays Supreme Penalty" or "Jerry Spends Sleepless Night in Jail," are typical of the headlines that have come to adorn the columns of these newspapers. As a result, the public is brought into the same feeling of intimate acquaintanceship with the outcasts of society as with motion picture stars and civic politicians.

It is a question whether the pursuance of such a newspaper policy is wise. When the subscriber picks up his paper in the evening and learns that Henrietta has left to spend ten years in the Kingston Penitentiary, or that Bertie has been hanged by the neck until he is no longer news, he (the aforementioned subscriber) is apt to feel a strong sense of personal loss. One whom, through the medium of his daily newspaper, he has come to know more intimately and completely than he knows many an acquaintance of long standing, has gone out of his life and left a gap that cannot be filled until the advent of another murder or bank robbery. In this way, through the thoughtlessness of his newspaper, he has been burdened with a totally unnecessary grief, a useless and uncalled-for pain.

It would seem, therefore, if the newspapers are sincere in the concern they express for the happiness of their readers, that they should exercise a higher degree of wisdom and care in dealing with a public criminal figure and present him more distantly, with greater reticence and reservation, in order that the readers may not become too personally interested in an individual whose afflictions, sooner or later, will only bring them distress and sorrow.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

Empire buyers are Empire builders.

The way some newspapers talk you'd get the idea that they were responsible for the whole success of the Bremen's trans-Atlantic flight.

A lot of fans will not believe the baseball season has started until Babe Ruth makes his first home run.

Perhaps Sir Henry Drayton will be willing to supply the figures as to the sales at individual Government stores.

If those trans-Atlantic flyers were determined to advertise Canada they might at least have chosen a landing spot which was not ice-bound in the middle of April.—The Globe.

If we knew where there was such a spot we'd feel like landing there ourselves.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Que., April 18 (Canadian Press). — Extreme dullness marked the export trade in Canadian grain here yesterday, there being little demand from foreign buyers.

The trade in cash grain was also quiet but the undertone was firm and prices were unchanged.

A stronger feeling developed in the market for Winter wheat flour and prices were advanced ten cents per barrel. The demand was dull. A little business was done in Spring wheat flour and values were steady.

A fair volume of business was done in most lines of millfeed and values were unchanged. The trade in standard grades of rolled oats was quiet but the undertone was firm.

Owing to the falling off in the consumption of eggs of late and the fact that supplies coming forward are in excess of daily requirements, a weaker feeling deeveloped and prices were reduced one to two cents per dozen. The receipts were 4,193 cases.

Prices for Quebec potatoes were well maintained under a moderate demand from local buyers.

The strength that has characterized the imported bean market of late was more pronounced yesterday and prices were marked up another 20 cents per bushel. Car lots of choice white hand-picked to arrive sold at $4.20 per bushel, ex-track, and smaller quantities at $4.40 per bushel ex-store.

The feature of the local butter trade was the weaker feeling that developed and prices scored a decline of ½ to ¾c per lb. This was attributed to the more liberal arrivals of fresh made goods and the continued limited demand. The receipts were 457 packages.

There was also a weaker feeling in the cheese market and prices for fresh made fodder goods declined with sales of small lots on spot at 20c to 20¼c per lb. The receipts were 362 boxes.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

CHICAGO, April 18 (Canadian Press) — Predictions of rain which promised relief to drought regions led yesterday to the first big break in wheat values since the government April crop report. Besides, the wheat market had evidently become overbought, and many holdings of future deliveries were sold out yesterday on standing orders to stop losses at various fixed limits.

Closing quotations on wheat were unsettled, 2 to 3 cents net lower, with corn unchanged to ¾ cent up; oats at ¼ cent to ⅝ cent decline, and provisions unchanged to 12 cents down.

In addition to likelihood of improved moisture in the Southwest and West, where there have been serious complaints about prolonged dry weather, the fact that the wheat market had scored advances of 13 to 14 cents since last Wednesday did a good deal to induce active speculative selling, the ground was taken that such gains in price were more than enough to discount all unfavorable aspects of the domestic crop situation at present. Moreover, Liverpool wheat quotations displayed unexpected weakness, and there was much back spreading here between corn and wheat, with corn being bought against sales of wheat.

Crumbling of outside support, which of late had been forthcoming from constant new buying, was a further bearish factor yesterday in regard to wheat, and so likewise was an estimate that only 250,000 bushels of wheat from North America had been taken yesterday for shipment to Europe. On the other hand, No. 2 red Winter sold yesterday to $2.00 a bushel here, and in St. Louis, 45 cents over Chicago May. High winds, too, were again reported in parts of Nebraska, Kansas and Oklahoma, and advices were at hand that in Nebraska from Hastings and Lincoln to Omaha, wheat had made no material top growth for a month.

In the corn market, upturns were ascribed mostly to undoing of spreads against sales of wheat. Another strengthening circumstance as to corn was the fact that hog values showed $1.25 gain compared with two weeks back. Oats advanced early to the highest price which May has reached yet this season, but eased later with other grain and as a result of profit-taking. There were reports that Illinois and Kansas oats had been damaged by freezing weather.

Provisions sagged on account of lard stocks here having increased more than was looked for.

Let's Have More Free Speech

To the Editor of the Examiner,

Sir: I read with much interest the letter from W. L. Smith of Myrtle Station and heartily endorse his stand on free speech. The International Bible students have built a broadcasting station and broadcast a musical program that is very much appreciated by a very large portion of the public. True there are some that protest, but what has there ever been that was worthy of a name that did not cause a protest. I also have a radio and it may be that my ear is untrained to the proper appreciation of music, but on our radio from 0 to about 35 the sounds that we receive are commonly known by the name of jazz. To me this is a waste of that much energy, but there are many others who thoroughly enjoy these programs. Why should they be deprived of their enjoyment when by simply turning the dial a little I can get a program to suit my taste and still let others enjoy themselves?

It would seem that the present is a very poor time to add fuel to the already too numerous protests against the curtailment of free speech.

GOD'S MINUTE

He will love thee and bless the.—Deut. 7:13.

Our Heavy Father, Thou hast been good to us, and we come to Thee in love and gratitude to thank Thee for the right use of our minds, for health of body, and for opportunities of development and service. Help us to show our gratitude by obedience of our lives. May we labor in joy and trust, by Thy grace, to make this world a brighter, happier, and better place for men and women to live, and for children to play and grow. May all fathers and mothers have a sacred sense of privilege and responsibility, and may the God of all grace be merciful to the multitures of mothers and fathers, brothers and sisters, wives and little children, who suffer from the curse of strong drink. Lord, destroy that which would destroy those for whom Christ died. Keep all Little children, all boys and girls, all young men and women, unscarred and unstained by sin, and remember in great tenderness the aged, the lonely, the sick, the tempted, the discouraged, and those who suffer for the sins of others. May joy and peace and harmony and holiness alone reign in our hearts. Bind us closer to each other, and closer to Thee. Help us to be happy, and useful, and good.

These things, with the forgiveness of sin and the baptism of the Holy Spirit, we ask in the Name of the Blessed Christ, who loved us and gave Himeself for us. We can ask nothing more; we dare nothing less. Amen.

INCREASES POWER OF 'MYSTERY PLANE'

Couzet Substitutes 3 Motors Totalling 720 Horse Power For 3 of 180 Each.

PARIS, April 18.—Rene Couzinet, the twenty-four-year-old French engineer whose transatlantic "mystery plane" has been the subject of wide discussion in aeronautic circles has largely increased the horsepower of his machine by replacing his three 180 horsepower Hispano-Suiza motors with three of 240 horsepower of the same make. The change caused a delay in the initial tests which were to have been carried out the first week in April, but M. Couzinet now expects to take the air for his first flight at the end of this week.

A visit to the military aviation centre at Orly, outside Paris, disclosed the beautiful Couzinet plane in an advanced state of preparedness. All that remains are the final touches to the new motors. The first tests, will necessarily be of a limited nature and not more than 5,000 pounds weight will be carried aloft. This will gradually be increased until the full capacity, 18,000 pounds, has been reached.

To prepare for the transatlantic crossing which is now tentatively scheduled for the last week in May, M. Couzinet will take off in an attempt to break the endurance record recently established by Eddie Stinson and George Haldeman at Jacksonville, Fla. With this as a preliminary, M. Couzinet believes that his "Rainbow" will have proved its capacity for transocean flying.

Rather than advancing his plans, the flight of the Bremen has served to make M. Couzinet more cautious for he believes that at the present moment the odds are terrific against Europe to America attempts, but that the winds will be much less unfavorable in the latter part of May.

A newspaper man will form part of the crew of the "Rainbow" in its ocean attempt. M. Couzinet has not yet chosen his journalistic companion, although there are many volunteers.

Couzinet's courage in his struggle to build and complete his plane in the face of what appeared to be overwhelming obstacles has aroused the keenest enthusiasm and his plane is regarded as one of the three likeliest French contenders.

C.N.R. MAY STOP PLANS FOR STATION

HAMILTON, April 18. — Impatient at delay and resenting the demands of North End residents for compensation for the closing of McNab street and Hughson street bridges, the officials of the Canadian National Railways are just about ready to abandon construction of the new million-dollar station here, it is stated.

This information was conveyed in Montreal to Controller Bell and Alderman Polson, when they conferred with the officials of the railway.

There is real concern among members of the city council lest further delays may result in Hamilton not getting its new station.

Mayor Burton stated yesterday he would take action in the matter himself as he felt it would be a serious misfortune for Hamilton if the station is postponed after Hamilton has waited for it so many years.

The Canadian National Railways, it is said has decided to apply to the Dominion Railway Board for an order to close the McNab street and Hughson street bridges. Much will depend upon this order. If it is granted the bridges in question could be closed, it is said, and neither the C.N.R. nor the city would be liable residents who have clamored for compensation.

Felt More Like Work After Taking Them

Says Ontario Lady After Using Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Mrs. C. Shank Suffered With Backache and Tired Feeling

SOUTH CAYUGA, Ont., April 17. —(Special).—"If I had not started taking Dodd's Kidneys Pills I am sure I should have had to stay in bed", writes Mrs. C. Shank, a well-known resident of this place. "I had no life in me and did not care whether I worked or not. I am always very busy, having three young children. I would get so tired and would not know how to keep going. After taking Dodd's Kidney Pills I felt more like work. I have great faith in them and always keep them on hand. I can recommend Dodd's Kidney Pills for backache. I know what they have done for me."

Winter is the season of ill health. Your resistance is lowered through continual cold, chill winds, snow and rain. Unless you keep your vitality up to "concert pitch" you will surely fall an easy victim to Rheumatism, Colds, Grippe or General Debility. Take Dodds' Kidney Pills and safeguard your stamina.

COBHAM OVERDUE AT SIERRA LEONE

British Flier Should Have Arrived There Yesterday On African Tour.

CAPETOWN, April 18 (Canadian Press)—A despatch to the Cape Argus from Sierra Leone on the West coast to-day states that Sir Alan Cobham should have arrived there yesterday, but has not yet put in an appearance. There was no trace of him at Grand Bassam or Monrovia.

(Sir Alan with Lady Cobham and a crew of four, is making a twenty thousand mile flight around Africa and was last reported as arriving at Takaoradi Harbor on the Gold Coast)

HAGUE HAS FILM EXHIBITION

To give as varied a review as possible of motion picture photography in all its phases, the International Film Exhibition was held at the Hague this spring. All the profits were to be turned over to the Red Cross. The exhibition was divided into various sections, such as dramatic, culture, historic, technical, accessories, cimenatograph, advertising and amusement. American motion pictures and motion picture products were prominent. The executive committee of the affair consisted of an importer representing American and French interests, a film critic, a department store manager, a representative of the Dutch Film League, a manager of a German film producer, a newspaper editor and Dutch film producers and censors.

MUST MEN FEAR MIDDLE LIFE?

If Past Forty Years Old You Should Read This

It is claimed that practically 65 per cent of all men past middle life are afflicted with Bladder Weakness or Inflammation, Urinary Irritation and Prostatic Troubles.

These conditions are now the accepted cause for many of the annoying ailments commonly associated with advancing years—such as aches in back, feet, legs and down through groins; frequent but scanty and painful urination; getting-up-nights; nervousness and loss of vitality.

While it is true that these bothersome, often embarrassing and frequently painful ailments do come to a large majority of men past middle life—it is not true that they cannot be helped or that the condition is a natural handicap of advancing years, and here's a simple home test to prove it!

Without slightest risk of cost unless pleased with results, obtain from your druggist a package of Dr. Southworth's "URATABS" a wonderful prescription used in the Doctor's private practice for over 40 years) and take them regularly according to directions for the full 10 days. Then, if you are not satisfied "Uratabs" are just what you need and that they will help you more than anything you have ever used—the druggist who supplied you is authorized to cheerfully return the small price you paid. If "Uratabs" bring you swift, certain, lasting comfort—you surely will be pleased. If they do not satisfy, they cost you nothing.

LADS AND DADS OF ALL SAINTS' HAVE BANQUET

Boys of Sunday School and Scouts Assemble With Their Fathers.

SPLENDID ADDRESS.

Appeal Made To Men To Take Greater Interest in Their Boys—Good Program.

"Boys are what men are made of." This truth, voiced by the Rev. J. Douglas Paterson, was the keynote of all the speeches at the annual father and son banquet at All Saints' Sunday School and of the Fifth Peterborough (All Saints') Troop of Boy Scouts and Wolf Cub Pack. The banquet was held in the parish hall and was attended by nearly two hundred boys and men of the congregation and their friends. A hearty meal, served by the ladies of the church, formed a suitable opening number, and then when every one was well filled and content there followed a varied program of short speeches, recitations, and musical numbers, concluding with the investiture of Eric Denston into the Fifth Wolf Cub Pack.

Mr. Paterson was chairman and was supported at the head table by the church wardens, the president of the Men's Club, the Superintendent of the Sunday School, and others. The program follows:

Recitation, Joe Johns—"A Little Shop."

J. A. McKone congratulated the Cubs and Scouts of All Saints on the work they are doing, expressing his belief that it is a good thing for a church to have such live organizations. He also congratulated the boys on the type of men taking an interest in them.

Attendance at such an occasion make men wish they were boys again, according to Dr. A. W. McPherson, who advised the boys to enjoy themselves as much as they can as they will be old soon enough and are now in the best time of their lives.

In his chairman's remarks, the Rev. J. Douglas Paterson said he wanted to have organized in All Saints' Church a good Boys' Work Board. He wanted boys around the church, and the congregation is proud of the boys in the church now. The officials and other men of the church want to help the boys. The Men's Club has stood behind the boys' work, and Mr. Paterson urged the fathers to come around and support the boys in sport, in scout work, and in Sunday School. Their presence last night was, he said, a guarantee that the men of the church are behind the boys' work and with such support their success is guaranteed.

Cups Presented.

John Ward of the Church Hockey League executive presented the cup won by All Saints' Juvenile team. There is, he said, no greater work for a man than that among the boys. All Saints' boys had won the cup on their merits and the meeting last night was an evidence of the live organization behind them. That church work is not, as many say, effeminate, was shown, he said, by the good running of Eric Liddle of Edinburgh in the Olympic games. He refused to run on Sunday but during the week he won the race and broke the world's record.

He also presented to the midget team, which won it last year, the shield emblematic of the championship of that series. He urged them to try and win it again and hold it permanently. He congratulated the leaders, not only on their success but on their interest in work among boys.

Another hockey title was recognized by President J. John of the Peterborough Scout Association who congratulated the boys of the Fifth Peterborough (All Saints') Troop on winning the championship of the Scout League and promised that a cup would be presented to mark the victory and to be an emblem of the Boy Scout Hockey championship of Peterborough.

Banjo selection—Frank Clarke. Mr. Clarke was forced to respond to two encores.

Recitation—Jim Runnett—"S'prisin' Eliza" and "Why the Rooster Wouldn't Die."

A. H. Cuttle, Finance Commissioner of the Diocese, the speaker of the evening, was introduced by Charles Lacheur, who said that Mr. Cuttle is a young people's friend in Toronto, who depends on the young people of his Sunday School there to do anything he wants done.

Mr. Cuttle remarked that he felt at home among the large collection of cups won by All Saints' boys as he is president of the Toronto Boys' Work Board and twice a year presides at a meeting where many cups are presented. He told of a girls' team from his church which won the inter-church city and provincial championship in girls' intermediate basketball and offered to bring them with him next time he comes to beat All Saints' boys.

He expressed his pleasure at being present with the older men as well as the boys, as such functions were not as popular in the Anglican church when he was a boy. He told the story of a colored mammy who was going to put the ice cream freezer beside the Anglican Church to get cold. This lack of warmth was not evident in All Saints'.

An Appeal to Men.

Mr. Cuttle's address was an appeal to the fathers to become comrades of their sons and endeavor to bring them up to be men of whom they and the world might well be proud, and to the boys to try and become worthy successors to those who had marched away in 1914, and to such heroes as Raymond Allen whose sacrifice in the Balsam Lake tragedy is commemorated by a tablet in the church. A forceful speaker, Mr. Cuttle used many apt illustrations in his speech, which was equally interesting to boys and men.

Fathers sometimes feel, said Mr. Cuttle, that they do not give enough time to their boys. Both father and son would find life richer for the hours spent in companionship, whether at home or outdoors, at play or in study, and they would be looked back to as treasured memories. Fathers miss a great privilege when they leave their boys to enjoy themselves as seems best while their elders go and enjoy themselves in another way. Much of the trouble in which boys find themselves can be traced to this, he declared, mentioning one case of a boy in juvenile court. The magistrate found that the father had not been home with his son for one night in the past six months and reprimanded him strongly, laying on him the blame for his son's waywardness.

"Men, let us be sure that the things we give our boys are pure, righteous, and holy. Then we will not be criticizing them because we think they are stepping aside from the right path!" he appealed. "Oh! the glory that will come into our lives when they grow up to be the kind of boys we hoped they would become, because of our influence, because we have put something of our own lives into theirs. Their is no greater privilege that can come to us than that of shaping these boys that God has given us."

Mr. Cuttle went on to speak of three great conventions held in Europe during one year. The first was that of the British Association for the Advancement of Science. The second was the League of Nations Assembly. The third was a great gathering of boys and boys' workers in Finland. Sir Philip Gibbs, the greate writer who was knighted for his work as a war correspondent, touched lightly in his articles on the scientists and on the league, but he wrote a great deal on the boys' meeting, which he said was by far the most important of the three, as boys' problems were being discussed in boys' language.

There was no doubt, continued the speaker, that the boys into whose eyes he was looking had the spirit which had marked those boys who had marched away in 1914, or the spirit commemorated by that tablet on the north wall of the church to one who only a few years ago had given his life for others. This last, he felt, would have more effect on the younger boys than the references to the boys of 1914-18. While that same spirit exists, the speaker declared, there is no doubt of the great future that lies in store for Canada.

The speaker urged his hearers to determine that they would live lives of service and influence others by their influence. He spoke of the custom of the Greek church, in which, once a year, the head of each family goes to church and brings home a lighted candle, with which he lights the tapers of all the members of his family. The father should influence his children and be to them as the taper was to those of the children. If the fathers of All Saints' would be such a light to their children a great movement and influence would radiate to all parts of the world.

Mr. Cuttle quoted from Robert Service's poem on the kind of men needed for the Yukon:

"Send us men, strong men for the battle,
Send us men, grit to the core."

These, he said, are the kind of men needed in All Saints' to work among the boys. He told of two groups of boys, one in prison and one in a leadership training camp, as evidencing the effects of a father's influence on his son's life, and closed with an appeal based on Earl Haig's last message, when he urged the boys to become crusaders in the great crusade that is to go out and save the boyhood and manhood of the world and present it to the Saviour.

The vote of thanks to Mr. Cuttle was tendered by Mr. Paterson and heartily endorsed by all present. After Homer Lundy and Spencer Hope had presented a colored comic specialty, a vote of thanks was moved to the ladies by Charlie Lewington and G. Richardson, while J. Runnett called for three cheers.

The solemn investiture of Eric Denston into the Wolf Cub Pack then took place when he made the Wolf Cub promise:

"I promise to do my best, to be loyal and to do my duty to God and the King and to keep the law of the Wolf Cup Pack, and to do a good turn every day."

Cubmaster A. Hope presided over this ceremony, which concluded the evening's program.

Printer, 62, Climbs High Mountain Peak

"At last, at 62 years, I have climbed the famous Pike's Peak. Vinol gave me the strength to do the trick."—E. S. Meyers.

Vinol is a compound of iron phosphates, cod liver peptone, etc. The very FIRST bottle makes you sleep better and have a BIG appetite. "The Canadian Home Comes First"

A Message of Real Importance to Canadian Women

WHEN your grandmother was a young bride, her gleaming kitchen was fitted with a fine selection of pots and pans and other utensils bearing one of these famous old names—"McClary," "SMP" or "Davidson." Today there is not a home in Canada where these names are not well and favorably known.

Last fall, after operating separately for generations, the three famous old companies making these utensils decided to join forces. This was done, and the new company was named General Steel Wares, Limited.

Think of it! All the wisdom and experience, all the skill and knowledge of these three great companies are combined.

The objective of this new company is to make goods that will please Canadian women.

If we produce goods that make the housework of Canadian women easier and more pleasant, then they will come back for more, and thus will the new company succeed as the three great old companies succeeded in the past.

Goods bearing the well known "SMP," "McClary" and "Davidson" trade marks will be even better than ever before. We will give Canadian families better home-heating, better cooked foods, better cooking utensils, up-to-date refrigeration, the very latest and finest products for home use.

Whenever you see the "SMP," "McClary" or "Davidson" trade marks on any goods, buy with complete confidence that they represent finest value at lowest possible cost.

Dry Weather In South Causes Advance in Wheat

CHICAGO, April 18 (Canadian Press)—Influenced largely by persistently dry weather southwest and by forecasts of lower temperature, wheat to-day scored an early sharp advance. Speculative purchasing was on a large scale, with considerable replacing of lines that were sold out yesterday. Opening ½ cent off to ¼ cent up, wheat quickly rose all around. Corn and oats were likewise stronger; Corn starting at ⅛ cent decline to an equal gain, and later showing general upturn.

Hollinger Continues Weak; Mine Shares Uncertain

TORONTO, Apjril 18 (Canadian Press).—Hollinger Consolidated continued to be the weak spot on the Standard mining exchange this morning. After opening at 15.80 it dropped down to 15.30, but rallied at the close to 15.70, which was 25 points down on yesterday's close. Pend Oreille showed a great deal of activity, selling at 20.70 for a gain of 1.70, and Sherritt Gordon, another strong spot, advanced 14 to 6.04. Treadwell suffered a fifty-point loss at 22.50 in very light trading. Dome Mines at 9.90 declined ten. Sudbury Basin closed at 9.80 for a twenty-point loss after opening at 10.20. Hudson Bay, Abana, and Mandy made gains of from ten to fifteen points.

DEFENCE CASE NOT OVER TO-DAY

Q.—The armistice was signed at 5.30. How long would it take, in your opinion for the news to reach all necessary factors in the Canadian Army?

A.—From one to three hours.

Q.—Do you know how long it took the information to reach General Currie?

A.—I should say about one hour.

Q.—Then it is a surprise to you that some did not hear it until 10.30?

A.—It certainly is not.

Q.—Then should some units stand to when they got the word and other units who had not heard go on fighting?

A.—No.

Q.—Then was not eleven o'clock a most suitable time for the cessation of hostilities and should not those plans made before the signing of the Armistice for the morning of the eleventh be carried out?

A.—Yes.

Col. John Currie was then recalled and objected to by Mr. Tilley. Col. Currie tried to address the court and was ruled out of order. On his repeating his attempt to speak, the Judge ordered the sheriff to remove him. Col. Currie was removed from the court room by police constables and the defense entered General Currie's evidence given at his examination for discovery. T. F. Hall, K. C., attorney for the defence, read the evidence while the plaintiff and Mr. Regan retired from the court room.

Court was resumed at 2.10 p.m., with Mr. Regan requesting permission to put a witness in the box and temporarily dispense with the reading of General Currie's examination for discovery.

Joseph Golding, who enlisted in October, 1914, at Port Hope, was overseas more than four years. He was in about all the engagements in which his division took part. He was with the 21st Battalion, 4th Brigade, 2nd Division, about a mile from Mons on the night of November 10, 1918. They advanced about 1,400 yards on November 10. He heard of a casualty named Sullivan, but did not see the incident. They were ordered to advance on Mons, and were supposed to be front line troops till the other half of the 4th Brigade went through them toward Mons. The witness heard mcahine guns after the other troops had gone forward. The witness remained in position during the night of Nov. 10-11. He went into Mons the next day and saw dead on the roads leading into Mons and in the streets of the city. He believed the Canadians were killed that night in the advance. There were no British troops in the sector before. He saw between half a dozen and a dozen dead which he believed were killed from the ranks of the advancing troops of his Brigade.

Mr. Regan read question 2097 from the preliminary examination regarding the effect on the morale of the Allied Armies by the attack on Mons. He then asked witness, after explaining the meaning of General Currie's response, "Do you agree with Sir Arthur Currie?"

Judge: "Don't answer that question."

Regan: "Or do you differ?"

Judge: "Don't answer that one either."

Regan: "Then, I can contradict Sir Arthur?"

Judge: "Now, Mr. Regan."

The result was that the question was not pressed. The witness admitted he knew nothing of the rules governing generals and corps commanders. Mr. Regan said he could not get at his witness and claimed he could make use of examination evidence.

The Judge censored Mr. Regan for speaking improperly and pointed out that he was not following the proper practice of the Court.

Mr. Regan: "Then there is no sense in keeping the witness."

To Mr. Tilley the witness admitted that the dates were fixed by memory only. There might be a mistake in the dates, but he could not admit it. He has an official diary of the battalion. There was not much fighting but the enemy was using machine guns in open fields and roads, which was dangerous to human life.

Some Life Added.

After a colorless opening this afternoon and every indication pointing toward a dull session, the court was afforded some slight entertainment when Major E. F. Nickle, son of ex-Attorney General W. F. Nickle, was placed on the stand. Major Nickle, in reply to an ambiguously worded question, told the court, 'Well, he's still my father." The sheriff found it necessary to restore order. Time and again Major Nickle reminded counsel that he was here in a purely impartial position and had served under Sir Arthur Currie. However ,the tenor of the entire examination of the witness put the court in much brighter spirits for the remainder of the session, which consisted mostly of reading evidence from examination preliminaries.

Major Nickle, called by Mr. Regan. When the war finished Major Nickle was private secretary to Sir Richard Turner, chief of headquarters staff in London ,and in the night of November 9th he received a phone message from Birtish general headquarters, France, teling him to communicate with his chief and to get in touch with the heads of the departments in England, ordering them that as the armistice was expected to be signed, to discontinue sending men and supplies to France.

"I don't mind telling you I am not here on my own wish. I was served with a subpoena and am forced to be here to-day. I served under Sir Arthur Currie."

His Lordship— "That is not evidence."

Q.—From your general knowledge of army procedure, do you know of General Currie would get that news when you did.

A.—I suppose he would.

Q.—Did the late Col. Thomas Gibson ever come to you and make a statement about the casualties at Mons?" Mr. Tilley objected and Mr. Nickle explained that two weeks after the armisfice he and Sir Edward Kemp were asked by the Minister of Militia for Canada General Newburn, to inquire into the casualties at Mons.

Q.—Why did the government ask you to do this?

A.—Col. Gibson came over to general headquarters in London, England, saying he had received a communication from the government in Canada concerning criticism of deaths in the last few days of the war among the Canadian troops.

Col. Duguid, of the Department of National Defence, was asked by Mr. Regan if he could supply the original communication. Col. Duguid replied that he had not it with him, but it might be in Ottawa.

Mr. Regan will send a telegram for it. "I understand you were subpoened to bring certain documents," he said. Col. Duguid smiled. "I am not sure it is there."

His Lordship— "Perhaps the Department of National Defense might be brought to Cobourg."

Cobham safe

CAPE TOWN, South Africa, April 18 (Canadian Press).—Sir Alan Cobham, noted British flier, who was reported missing somewhere along the Gold Coast on his twenty thousand-mile flight around Africa, was reported to be safe in a message received from Accra to-day. Plane trouble developed on his way to Sierra Leone, and the flier returned to Abid Jean on the Ivory Coast, where he had started.

NEW
and critics say, "two years ahead"

"Two years ahead in appearance and mechanically," says H. F. Blanchard of Motor . . . "New in every respect. Gives the impression of being in a much higher price class," A. F. Denham of Motor Age . . . "An important advance in the art of car building," Walter C. Boynton in Automotive Daily News.

ACCORDING to men whose opinions count, there is the spirit of tomorrow in the thrilling performance and voguish appearance of this new Oldsmobile Six.

A new, high-compression 55 h.p. engine offers an abundance of smooth, quiet, economical power, resulting in flashing get-away, speed and long-lived stamina.

The smart lines and luxurious finish of new Fisher Bodies match the advanced engineering of engine and chassis. New roominess and silenced interiors provide new comfort and enjoyment.

A score of other new chassis and body features—features which heretofore have identified high priced cars—definitely establish this new Oldsmobile as the Fine Car of Low Price.

Drive it. Put it to your own test for quality. Then you, too, will agree with engineers and critics — it is truly two years ahead.

Is YOUR body "on strike"?

Impure blood causes so much illness—pain—expense. How much better to keep your blood pure—yourself healthy!

If your stomach, liver or bowels, are giving you trouble, set them working properly, with Gallagher's Blood Purifier. It builds up your blood. Stops the chance of chronic ills later.

Gallagher's Blood Purifier is distinctly in a class by itself. It is made entirely from Nature's Healing Herbs—from the original formula of James Gallagher, who has been rivalled by but few men in knowledge of herbs.

The Gallagher Herbal Remedies have been used for 50 years. Their popularity is great. Gallagher's Blood Purifier has earned the goodwill of many people. One of them, Mrs. Napoleon Desarmeau, 243 Frank St., Ottawa, used Gallagher's Blood Purifier and Kidney Remedy together. She writes:

"For 15 years I suffered with nervous indigestion, which affected every part of my body. I also had Neuritis from head to foot. After taking a few bottles of your Blood Purifier and Kidney Remedy my Neuritis, Stomach and Nerve troubles disappeared. I heartily recommend Gallagher Remedies."

NORHAM DEBATERS WIN ARGUMENT

do not attack opponent's points unless you can refute them, fourth, give the authority for your statements and if possible have it with you.

The ladies of the Norham League were the hostesses at a social half hour. The Mission Band members added to their funds by a sale of homemade candy.

W. M. S. Organized

Mrs. D. R. Clare was elected president of the Women's Missionary Society, for which a number of ladies from Norham, Myersburg and Bethany met on Friday at the parsonage to organize.

After the devotional period, the following musical program was given: Duet, Miss Lulu Mitchell and Mrs. West; piano solo, Miss Edna Evans; duet, Misses Florence and Ida Clare. Mrs. Terrill of Wooler was to have been speaker of the afternoon, but owing to illness in the family, she was unable to be present. Mrs. W. H. Ashton, of Campbellford, very ably gave an address on the great need of a W. M. S. and a brief review of all the fields in which the W. M. S. of the United Church of Canada work. In conclusion, Mrs. Ashton, urged the need of the prayer life in the making of a successful auxiliary.

Other officers elected were: 1st vice-president, Mrs. R. Mitchell; 2nd vic-president, to be filled later; 3rd. vice-president, Mrs. Nelson; recording secretary, Mrs. Lorne Evans; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Curtis, treasurer, Mrs. S. Benton; Baby Band superintendent, Mrs. I. Denike; "Missionary Monthly" secretary, Mrs. D. Evans.

It was decided to hold the meetings on the second Tuesday in the month.

Those present besides the Norham ladies were: Mrs. Ashton and Mrs. Williams, of Campbellford, Mrs. Nelson and Mrs. Dilworth of Myersburg, Mrs. H. Reddon, Mrs. Reddan, Sr., Mrs. Ryckman and Miss Lindsay of Bethany.

A number of the young ladies of the congregation assisted Mrs. Clare in serving lunch.

Personals

Miss Eva Platt and Miss McClare have returned to the city after the Easter holidays.

Miss Jean Diamond is at present ill with mumps.

The Rev. Mr. and Mrs. Clare and family motored to Welcome on Wednesday.

Mr. Clare officiated at the wedding of Miss Bernice Bebee, of Morrish, and Mr. F. Taylor, of Oshawa.

A number of young people motored to Castleton on Wednesday night, to attend the play staged by the Shiloh young people.

The roads have improved wonderfully in the past few days, due to the drying winds but there are a number of holes, where the frost is still coming out and travelling by motor has its difficulties.

Among those from Warkworth who attended the debates at Norham, on Wednesday night were: Miss Thompson, Mrs. Baker and Mr. Kelly.

The young people of the Y. P. L. are busy practising for the play, "Go Slow, Mary," which is being presented in the near future.

NEW GAME PRESERVE.

British Columbia Government Sets Aside Large Area as Sanctuary.

VICTORIA, B.C., April 18 (Canadian Press).— Mountain sheep, moose, deer and other game animals will be protected from hunters in a large new game preserve created by the Provincial Government in the northeastern section of British Columbia.

The area lies along the Alberta boundary on Sheep Creek, 120 miles north of McBride the nearest point of settlement to it. It is thirty miles long, its eastern boundary being formed by the interprovincial boundary, and fifteen miles wide. It will contain 450 square miles

Some of the largest bands of big horn mountain sheep in British Columbia live in the reserved area, and it is the purpose of the government to protect them, as well as other game animals within the area.

CHARACTER NEEDED TO BUILD UP CANADA

Sink her—split her in twain;
Fall into the hands of God—
But not into the hands of Spain."

He set off material as opposed to character most aply by quoting a poem showing the insignificance of the most elaborate silver candlesticks behind the chairs of the guests in an English castle in comparison to the loyal clansmen standing behind the chairs of the same guests in a Scottish castle.

"The question we have to ask ourselves is "How can we help Canada to lay a firmer hold upon this most essential requisite?" The Men's Club is one of the important and active factors working to this end. It is impossible for men to meet under such auspices without being influenced by atmosphere or without getting a better insight into the most essential things of life.

"To-day there is nothing that comes under such severe criticism as the Christian Church, and as the church is the most important force in character building, we naturally inquire as to the reason and fairness of such criticism. Often the church is impotent to accomplish anything when society is passing through tragic times, such as wars, strikes, etc. The man in the street sees the church rendered helpless by a triangle of doctrines, creeds, and internicine strife.

"Such a picture is overdrawn but there is too much to be said for the veracity of such a picture. The Christian church is the force that puts character into the world and we as professing Christians must shoulder our fair share of the burden. War expressions were created because they expressed succinctly the thought in the mind of the soldier. Thus we Christians must 'stick it' in the battle of life.

"We ought to be 'fed up' with present conditions and strive to improve upon them. 'Lead slinging' and 'lead slingers' were detested in the army because the latter were 'yellow' and did not live up to their professions. The soldiers demanded reality and would tolerate no sham.

"'Be what thou seemeth—live thy creed.' Thus the criticism of the church originates from men who hold this idea. They expect church people to be different from others; they expect professing Christians to provide examples for others. There should be a sharper and more distinct line between the Christian's principles and those of the world.

"If the church is going to be a character building force there must be greater reality in our religion.

"There has also to be a change in our home atmosphere. Men should be in their homes more to give the supervision discipline and example which only a man can give his sons. No boy can take an example of a woman not even if that woman is his mother."

Referring to a story told by Judge Mott of the Juvenile Court of Toronto of the boy who "never had a chance," he made the striking statement: "There are too many boys in our homes to-day who have never had a chance; too many boys in the best homes have never had the chance of a father's example or supervision of his education pleasures and training." The men of Canada to-day have an added responsibility to make a real man of the boy in the home by being a manly man in the home himself.

The way to put Canada upon the map is to build such character in the land that when people of other lands come in touch with Canadians they will see the greatness of the country in the character of its people. Canadians have demonstrated that they can be heroic, resourceful, and constructive in war. The world knows of their enormous natural wealth and thus must show it that they are as great in peace as in war, and that manhood is a characteristic which remains whether in peace or war. "We must set to work to clear away all obstacles which prevent the building of character in our country."

The speaker closed with this statement: "The biggest thing in the world is Manhood-Character."

Prolonged and vigorous applause indicated the enthusiasm with which the remarks were received.

After remarks by Mayor G. A Kingston, Reeve J. M. Bygott and the Rector, lunch was served in which the Willing Workers were invited to participate. During the lunch hour a hearty vote of thanks was tendered Mr. Harston for his interesting address.

Miss Kitty Jarvis, of Camberwell, claims to be, with the exception of her mother, the only woman rat-catcher in Great Britain. She can trace her family back well over 200 years, and from father to son all have been professional rat-catchers, although Kitty is the first to begin the descent from mother to daughter.

ROADS BETTER IN WARSAW DISTRICT

Grader Used On Dummer Roads Last Week—School Board Meets.

WARSAW, April 18.—There was some discussion of the withdrawing of the grant, at a recent meeting of the ratepayers held in the school house. Dr. Munro was chairman and Allan Edwards secretary. The trustees are to interview Mr. Lees and another meeting will be held.

New Bulletin Erected

The new bulletin board which was donated by the Ladies' Aid of the United Church was put in place last week. The first text advertised was "How to Abolish War". The Rev. H. B. Herrington very kindly assisted in making the cost very much less.

Roads Better.

The roads are getting better. The grader was on the Dummer road on Thursday and Friday. Trucks may not carry more than one half loads. Cars are now running on the boundary.

The land is too wet or too hard to work to any extent. The little snow is a great protection to the wheat and meadows, which so far look well.

Personals.

The Anglican Ladies' Guild held its regular meeting at the home of Mrs. H. G. E. Choate.

Relatives of Mr. G. Washington Reid have received word from his son in Gananoque, with whom he has made his home recently, that he is seriously ill.

Mr. E. Hawthorne has sold his property in Warsaw.

Miss Anna M. Greig, who has been visiting in Warsaw for some weeks, left for her home in Buffalo on Friday. She will visit friends in Peterborough and other places.

Mr. Currie returned to Warsaw on Saturday. He spent the greater part of his vacation in Toronto, attending various sections of the O. E. A.

LEAGUE SOCIETY WANTS MEMBERS

Will Start Drive Next Week For 100,000 in Canada.

OTTAWA, April 18. — Tuesday, April 17, has been named "League of Nations Day" in the dominion and the League of Nations Society in Canada, in connection with a drive for 100,000 "dollar members" has issued the following appeal:

"There was a time when supporters of peace movements were considered fanatics and 'cranks', and the term 'pacifist' was synonoymous with 'nincompoop' or from coward'. So estranged did supporters of such ideals become from popular sentiment, and so relatively few were they in number, that it was quite reasonable for them to be regarded as eccentrics.

The Great War, however has taught the world much. It left a disinclination for further bloodshed, and the certain knowledge that another war under modern conditions would result in as wholesale annihilation as a Great Plague.

"This appreciation of the situation by the world at large has altered the position of the peace supporters. He is no longer a lone crusader. His number is legion. He is no longer humored and condoned as a misdirected enthusiast, but hearkened to and aided, even by military men. His arguments are no longer in the plane of the abstract. He has colossal, indisputable facts to cite from recent events. He has definite and tangible dangers to warn against. He has, above all, something concrete to put forward as a remedy, as an antidote.

"The League of Nations is one of the first efforts towards the maintenance of world peace that has materialized into an effective being and existence. It has stood the test of trail and time, and showed itself capable of taking action and of accomplishing its purposes. It appears to be the only way out of a precarious situation, and a good way at that, and one deserving of and appealing for the support of all men.

"The League of Nations Society in Canada is now appealing for the support of all Canadians. Canada as a nation in the British Commonwealth is a member of the League, which includes fifty-five other great nations of the world. To justify this high honor, Canada's representatives require the united support and understanding of the Canadian nation as a whole.

"The object of the League of Nations Society is to create and mould and organize public opinion in favor of the League, that is its central purpose. The place for that public opinion to crystalize is in the membership of the Society. It supplies its members with literature and a monthly magazine giving current and up-to-date information regarding the League. It gives, also, every assistance possible to the clergy and educational authorities in their treatment of that subject."

The present membership of the Society in Canada is 6,000.

Unpardonable Perspiration Odour

readily avoided

What quality can match the beauty of a lovely skin? And what social error can so readily embarrass its possessor, as that subtle offence — perspiration odour?

Of course, every one perspires. In this way nature rids the human system of one to two pints of moisture every day.

But this perspiration, so necessary and so healthful, need not be offensive.

Why not be sure of absolute personal daintiness? All you need to do is use Lifebuoy for face, hands and bath — and perspiration odour will vanish.

Lifebuoy, besides being a delightful, all-sufficient toilet soap, possesses mild but effective antiseptic qualities which clear away clogged pores, purify them, and make perspiration odourless.

To Keep Well

Drink plenty of water, perspire freely, bathe often with Lifebuoy Soap.

And there is no price penalty, because Lifebuoy costs no more than toilet soap that is just "soap."

American Automobile Magnate Unable To Ask Questions In Talk With Lloyd George

LONDON, April 18 (Associated Press). — Henry Ford saw Lloyd-George at his best yesterday. The war-time Premier, just back from the Easter holidays, was as keen as a whistle and so inquisitive about the United States that he almost forgot to eat his chop.

Mr. Ford accepted Mr. Lloyd-George's luncheon invitation with pleasure, and anticipated hearing much about British politics. Mr. Ford had many questions in mind to ask the Liberal leader. But Mr. Lloyd-George started asking about the presidential campaign. Then he got Mr. Ford's views on prohibition, on industry, on exports, on imports, or agriculture—the former Premier being particularly interested in farmers. He asked about tractors, and inquied about rubber, about Wall Street, about Dearborn, about Detroit, about America's view on the League of Nations—in fact, just about everything under the American sun. And the first thing Mr. Ford knew, the luncheon was concluded, and Mr. Lloyd-George rushed off to attend the opening of the House of Commons.

"My goodness," exclaimed Mr. Ford afterward, "but that man can ask questions."

GO WEST THIS SUMMER ON THE "CONFEDERATION"

If you are going to visit Western Canada this summer, plan to travel on the "Confederation", the Canadian National de luxe train between Toronto and Vancouver, which will commence service again on May 19th. This train, first established last summer and named in view of the national celebration of the Diamond Jubilee of the Dominion, proved instantly popular with the travelling public and will undoubtedly be equally popular, and deservedly so, this year.

The equipment of the "Confederation", of all-steel construction, will include compartment-observation-library-buffet car (radio equipped) standard and tourist sleeping cars, dining car and coaches, while the route via Sudbury, Winnipeg, Brandon, Regina, Saskatoon, Edmonton and Jasper will provide excellent additional service to and from all these points.

Tickets and further information from any Canadian National Agent.

Bonarlaw

BONARLAW, April 18.—Mr. and Mrs. William Barlow left on Monday for Toronto. Mr. Barlow has purchased a new Whippet car.

Little Annie McInroy is ill.

Miss Bernice and Daisy McInroy of Peterborough spent Easter at Bonarlaw.

Miss Goddard, of Kingston, is guest of Miss Grace Stiles during the holidays.

Miss Frieda Matthews, of Stirling, spent a few days this week at Mr. Thomas McKeown's.

Mr. William G. Stiles, of Belleville, spent Easter Sunday under the parental roof.

Mr. David Wellman was in Toronto this week attending the annual meeting of the Ontario Educational Association.

Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Stiles and family spent Monday evening at Mr. A. Burkitts.

Mrs. Sarah McKeown of Toronto is visiting friends on the 12th Line this week.

Miss Chute, of St. Thomas, arrived on Friday by motor. She is engaged as public school teacher on the 12th Line S.S. No. 14.

Mr. Thomas Hannah was in Detlor this week attending the funeral of his father, the late Mr. Archibald Hannah.

Mr. Albert Weymark of Havelock was a guest at Arthur Burkitt's on Sunday.

Miss Leah McKeown of Hamilton spent Monday at Mr. John McKeown's.

Mr. George Wellman returned home on Saturday after spending the winter in Toronto.

Ennismore

ENNISMORE, April 18.—Gerald Cavanagh began plowing on sod on Thursday. The clay was a little heavy in places but quite free of frost. Thursday night's frost and Saturday's snow stopped the work on the land for a few days.

Bridge Closed.

On Saturday the Chemong Bridge was closed to traffic. The ice was piled against it and the approaches on either side were flooded with water. Owing to its serious condition, the stage went around by the head of the lake.

Personals.

Miss Florence Sullivan of Lindsay is spending the holidays with her parents.

Mr. Robert Young, of Kingston, spent a few days recently with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Young.

The Misses Eleanor and Mildred Kennedy are spending their vacation with friends in Toronto.

Mr. M. D. Crough of Peterborough is spending the vacation with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Crough.

A very pleasant social evening was held in the hall on Monday evening under the auspices of the Altar Society and the Sacred Heart League. Dainty refreshments were served and excellent music for the dancing was provided by Mr. and Mrs. M. Twomey.

BOOKS IN LIBRARY BUT DOOR LOCKED

Montreal Has Equipment But No Money For Staff To Serve Children.

MONTREAL, (Que.), April 18.—(Canadian Press).—Canada's largest city, numbering in its population some hundreds of thousands of school children, is unique among Canadian towns of importance in that it has no children's library, or, rather, it has a children's library, but one that, through lack of funds with which to pay attendants, has never been opened.

It is ironical that while the young people of Montreal clamor eargerly for the reading privileges available to those of much smaller towns, a fine collection of books for children arranged upon spacious shelves awaits the turning of a key to begin its life of public usefulness.

When the Fraser Institute, Montreal's only public English library, was closed for alterations a few months ago, P. P. Crevecoeur, the librarian, devoted several weeks to the arrangment of a children's department. With loving care he marshalled a valiant army of story books, sages of woods adventure, war and school life, stories for girls. On the inviting tables he arranged bright, covered magazines and picture books for the "very young", and on the high walls, above the rows of shelves, he placed an intriguing array of pictures and posters, calculated to delight the eye of any child.

The fruit of his labors remains behind a locked door. Three months ago the Fraser Institute re-opened to the public. New subscribers flocked in to make use of its improved circulation, reference and periodical departments. And with them came scores of children to visit their own library which, they had heard, was to be a feature of the institution.

There was the sign on the door in large letters: "CHILDREN'S DEPARTMENT", but the door was bolted. The kindly librarian was sad at heart as he told them that only a golden key could give them access to the wonderland. And almost every day since then they have come in wistful groups to inquire whether the key has been found. And every day M. de Crevecoeur must make the same answer.

The books are there, the furnishings are there, but the money to pay the salaries of two attendants can not be found. The resources of the institution are strained to the uttermost to maintain its present staff. Its nine attendants are already overworked, for it is probable that no library on the continent serving as many subscribers as the Fraser Institute has so limited a staff.

Probably Montreal is the only community in Canada or the United States claiming the title of "city" which does not possess a children's department attached to its public library. This condition contrasts strangely with that prevailing in Toronto and Ottawa. The public library of the former city devotes an entire modernly equipped building to the reading needs of the children while the Ottawa library features its children's department. But a striking contrast is to be found far nearer home. The little city of Westmount, enclosed like an island within the boundaries of Montreal, provides a reading-room and circulating department for its young people.

True, the Montreal Municipal Library, a French institution notable for the stately edifice in which it is housed, has an apartment labelled "Children's Library," reports was being used as a coal cellar!

ORIENT NEEDS COPPER.

British Columbia Mine Operator Advises Development of Market.

VANCOUVER, (B. C.).— (Canadian Press).— The greatest field for future development of the Canadian copper market is the Orient, in the opinion of Charles P. Browning, general manager of the Britannia Mining and Smelting Company.

"The outlook for copper is bright", said Mr. Browning. "Statistics show that consumption of copper increases 60 per cent. every ten years, and while at present we have a copper-producing capacity in excess of the current demand, this may not be the case in a few years.

"The history of the industry unmistakably forecasts that consumption will continue to increase. Imagine, if you will, the industrialism of the Orient and India in the not too distant future, where at present only a fraction of a pound per capita is being used.

"Should this consumption be substantially increased by the progress of civilization and industry, the demand for copper would keep well in advance of production. Copper is a world commodity, imperishable with age, and indispensable in the continued growth and expension of modern life."

Norwood

NORWOOD, April 18.—Mr. John Ferguson started his spring plowing the end of last week. Mr. Ferguson lives on the 8th Line of Dummer on the farm recently vacated by Mr. J. Gallogher.

Miss Druscilla Mee, of Toronto, has been visiting her sister, Mrs. George Bitten.

Mr. and Mrs. R. Pakenham and baby have returned to Toronto.

Miss L. Scott, who has been visiting her sister, Mrs. E. C. Squire, has returned to Toronto.

Miss T. Robson, who has been spending the week with her mother, has returned to Toronto.

Mr. and Mrs. S. A. Sexsmith, of Whitby, are visiting relatives in the village.

Prof. J. and Mrs. Edwards and family have returned from visiting relatives in Niagara Falls, N.Y.

Mrs. George Grover and John have returned to Toronto.

Mrs. White, who has been visiting her daughter, Mrs. H. Beavis, has returned to Toronto.

Mr. Walter Rogers and family have moved into the house on Queen street which they purchased recently from Mr. A. Humphries.

Mr. O. R. Edwards has bought Mr. W. H. Giffen's residence on Queen street and purposes moving into it in the near future.

In New York City are several women who make a business of coaching rich young girls who are about to make their first trip abroad and who desire to learn the ins and outs of social etiquette on the other side. For a substantial fee they are taught many useful things—how to curtsey, how to meet titled persons, and how to dress for every occasion from a shooting party to a Court function.

KNOX MEN HOLD SUPPER MEETING

H. J. McCannan Appointed To Complete President's Term.

The monthly supper meeting of Knox men which was held last evening was marked by a large attendance making a record for the season. The arrangement of the entertainment was in the hands of the members of the A.S.K. Class and they put over a program complete in every respect, much to the enjoyment of all present. The supper itself, prepared by the ladies of the central section, was worthy of special mention, the decorations and favors upon the tables adding much to the brightness of the evening.

Business was carried through with despatch. This included plans for the summer months, and the appointment of H. J. McCannon to fill in the balance of the term as president.

Community singing, special instrumental numbers, and an excellent address by George A. Gillespie provided entertainment for the balance of the evening. Mr. Gillespie's clear and instructive talk on the subject of "Fifty Years of the Dairy Business" proved to be most informing and helpful. He was heartily thanked at the conclusion, especially as he hinted that it might be continued in the next.

Those contributing specially to the program of music were Messrs. Taylor and Clarke on the piano, and Messrs. Robertson, Biggs and F. Clarke, with violin, mandolin and banjo features. Mr. G. Nicholls was the efficient accompanist for the evening.

They're all for Muffets!

You may satisfy some of them, if need be, with other things for breakfast. But if you want to please them all—give them Muffets!

For here's what a Muffet is! Whole wheat, cooked, drawn to a filmy-thin, fine-spun ribbon—wound round and round, layer upon layer, to muffin size and shape. Baked. Toasted butternut brown. Light as a crumpet! Crisp as potato chips.

You serve Muffets with cream and sugar. Or add fruit. Vitamins, calories, bran. Easy digestibility. And—something mighty good to eat!

You can be the discoverer of Muffets for your home. Let your family have Muffets tomorrow!

Does it?

Does your Appetite or Vitality suffer from tell-tale Indigestion?

"My system was poisoned. I was really ill. The doctor advised Fleischmann's Yeast to help clear up the condition. For several months I took it. I began to eat better. My health returned to normal. More than that—my face was entirely cleared of pimples. I cannot praise Fleischmann's Yeast too much and would recommend it to everyone as a tonic and health builder."
MARGARET MAGER, Toronto, Ont.

"Besides being a cartoonist, I also go in for baseball. In the spring of 1926, while training for the baseball season, I suffered from constipation, and this considerably interfered with my activities. One day I happened to be talking with a friend of mine who had been eating Fleischmann's Yeast for three months, and he urged me to try it for my complaint. The results were astonishing. The pep and vitality that Fleischmann's Yeast put into me were more than I ever anticipated, and I think I may truthfully say that the 1926 baseball season was the best of my career. Many thanks to Fleischmann's Yeast."
W. BRAND, Vancouver, B. C.

Languid appetite . . . mental depression . . . sagging vitality . . . These are the commonest symptoms of the commonest ailment of today—indigestion.

The cause is faulty elimination. The intestines are shirking their proper work. Instead of cleansing the body of poisons, they are harboring harmful bacteria.

Intestinal indigestion and intestinal poisoning are the results of the way we live and eat today. We eat soft, fiberless food where palate-tickling flavor replaces the stimulating, nutritive stuff of nature.

Medicine is not the answer. Cathartics are habit-forming. They aggravate conditions they should correct.

The way out is nature's way—through proper food. You do not have to change your diet. You have only to add a food—the one food that corrects constipation and aids in nourishing the body.

This food is yeast—a tiny fresh vegetable, as much a product of nature as a crisp lettuce leaf.

It trains the intestines to clean themselves through its action on the waste matter and the walls of the alimentary canal.

Three cakes of yeast a day—before or between meals—have become in four short years the Great Health Habit of Canada.

Prescribe this diet for yourself. Give it a fair trial. A few weeks will show results in refreshed vitality. Ninety days will bring you the full benefit.

Tell your grocer to add your name to his list for regular delivery of as many cakes as your family requires, three for each member.

A very interesting booklet on "Regaining Health" will be sent to you, gladly. Write to The Fleischmann Co. Dept. 173B, 1449 St. Alexander Street, Montreal, Que.

GUILTY OF CONTEMPT DECLARES JUSTICE

Mr Tilley —"Then my learned friend prefers to try some other action than this one?"

Mr Regan—"Oh; your client is intensely interested in this." A legal argument ensued during which counsel quoted other libel cases to the court. Sir Arthur Currie, Mr. Regan continued is suing for $50,000 damage to his character and reputation as a military commander and in his capacity as principal and vice-chancellor of McGill University.

His Lordship, Mr. Justice Rose, intervened to say that probably the question of reputation, but he was not certain whether the defendants could try to show that Currie had used good or bad judgment at the second battle of Ypres.

Col Currie, who through the discussion stood patiently on the witness stand, intervened at this point "It is too bad," he said, "not to be able to say a word in my own behalf."

Mr. Justice— "You are not being tried."

Witness— "I have been tried for fifteen years."

"Did you see any loss of life," asked Mr. Regan "that should not have taken place with respect to the second battle of Ypres?"

"Yes," Col. Currie replied, before Justice Rose could utter "don't, don't." Col. Currie apologized. The argument continued and Justice Rose ruled the question out.

The witness—"I suppose I may not make a statement my Lord?"

The Court: "You may not make any statement except in answer to questions."

Mr. Ryan: "Will you allow any evidence with connection with this evidence in discovery?"

The Court: "I am not in the habit of ruling on questions until they are put. I cannot now see any that should be allowed."

After consulting with defendants and his associates, Mr. Ryan again tried to put the question about Sir Sam Hughes' speech in the House of Commons but the Court intervened.

"Will you allow this witness to state anything about the character of the plaintiff?" counsel asked. The Judge nodded assent.

Mr. Ryan to witness: "What is your opinion of Currie?"

The Court: "No, no, no."

Regan: "Do you know what reputation he had as a military commander and officer at the time this article was published?"

Witness: "My knowledge is based upon a statement of Sir Sam Hughes."

Mr. Justice Rose: "You will be committed for contempt of Court if you persist."

Col. Currie laughed aloud nervously, and leaned one elbow on the railing.

His Lordship: "I am inclined to commit you to prison now." Mr. Justice Rose glanced around, but the sheriff was not in sight.

Col. Currie, plaintively: "You know I am not a willing witness for you here." This to counsel for the defendants.

The question as to Sir Arthur's reputation was repeated, and Col. Currie said: "His reputation was what his commanding officer gave him."

Mr. Justice Rose: "No, no, no."

Mr. Tilley: "Sir Sam Hughes was never the plaintiff's commanding officer."

Witness: "He was Minister of Militia. You know that as well as I do."

Mr. Justice Rose: "The question is not what any individual below or above him thought about him, but whether you know what reputation he bore."

Witness: "He had none. Like politicians, he had no reputation."

Mr. Tilley announced that he would not cross-examine, and Mr. Regan called Robert Marshall, but changed his mind and recalled Col. Currie to the stand and put a quqestion about the dugout incident, but was shut off by the Court. The witness muttered something that was not audible, and Mr. Justice Rose leaned forward on the bench glared at the witness, and said: "If you do not get out of that witness box, I will send for the sheriff to put you out."

Col. Currie left and his examination was ended.

Duguid Recalled

Col. Duguid, recalled to the stand, said he had not the actual message but a copy, and read:

"From Corps Commander to G.O.C. 3rd Division—Warmest congratulations on having recaptured historic battlefield of Mons before cessation of hostilities."

The exact number of enemy casualties would not be entered in war diary. Armies bury enemy dead where possible, identifying and reporting same. He presumed this was done at Mons. Mr. Regan read from an extract where troops are reported to have entered Mons about 4.30 Nov. 11th, and disposed of German machine gun posts. The witness admitted it would be the duty of the Canadians to bury the German dead.

He could not say whether the records at Ottawa would show the number and identification of the German dead.

Joseph Morgan, of Toronto, was overseas, a private in the 5th Brigade, 2nd Division, in November, 1918. He left Canada with the 159th Battalion, and was in France with the 5th Engineers. He was moving toward Mons November 10th, 1918, and got within about eight kilos. He started for Mons next morning. He heard of the Armistice about 10.30 a.m. He saw two dead Canadians as he entered Mons from the south. The dead were Third Division men.

Mr. Tilley questioned the witness and was told the unit was marching from Valenciennes to Mons. He saw no German dead. The fighting was all over.

William Todd

William Todd, a reporter for The Toronto Star, was the next witness. He went overseas with the Field Artillery in 1914, and for two years served with the 1st Canadian Division in France and then was transferred to the 4th Division under the command of General Sir David Watson. After the armistice he acted as stenographer for General Watson and wrote many private letters, one of which was to a friend of the general in Montreal. It was suggested that in the letter reference was made to the taking of Mons. Mr. Tilley objected to a shorthand letter being submitted as evidence, especially as it was a private letter and did not pertain to anything relevant towards the defence. His Worship ruled that the letter could not be submitted. Mr. Regan then submitted an official book compiled in January, 1919, giving the number of aide-de-camps of the various Allied generals and division commanders.

General Currie was down for three aides, while no army commander had as many. Lawyer for defendant commenced to ask witness to give the number of aides the various commanders had, but His Lordship thought that evidence was not relevant to the case. Mr. Regan claimed that it was, as it showed up the desire for pomp and the ambition of Sir Arthur Currie.

John Overend, of the 38th Battalion, 3rd Division, 9th Brigade, said he knew of the armistice about 8 a.m. on November 11. After learning of the armistice, his battalion went on parade and marched towards Mons, arriving there about 11 a.m. In Mons, 200 yards from city square, he saw the bodies of two Canadian soldiers lying in the gutter and 20 yards farther on the body of a German. At that time the headquarters staff, under the command of Sir Arthur Currie, was being welcomed by the Burgomaster of Mons. Witness said the 7th Brigade had made an attack that morning and the artillery had continued firing until 11 a.m. Mr. Overend thought that the dead Canadians were privates of the R.C.R. At Oburg, six kilometres northeast of Mons, they rested that night, and on the 13th took up their position along the armistice line at St. Denis.

C. B. Beck was called three times by the court crier, but did not appear. Col. Armstrong of the Department of National Defense, placed on the stand. Mr. Regan asked for the record of Private Price, killed at three minutes to eleven o'clock, Nov. 11, 1928.

"256265, Private G. L. Price," said the witness, "is a confidential report." Witness did not object to reading a portion from it. Mr. Regan took the eport and examined it under a magnifying glass. He suggested there had been changes made.

Sniper Active

The witness read: "Privat G. L. Price, 256265, killed in action, 11, 11, 18, by enemy sniper near canal. Shot through right breast, died shortly after being hit, although given every attention. Hit at three minutes to eleven, Nov. 11, 1918."

The witness said that Joyce, previously mentioned, died of wounds and was not found dead on field. Joyce's file was produced and once more Mr. Regan employed the magnifying glass.

Mr. Tilley also examined the file with the aid of a reading glass.

"58085, Joyce, 20th Battalion, admitted to field ambulance; further designated as Acting Corporal W. F. Joyce, gunshot wound in left arm and chest, admitted to dressing station Nov. 10th. The book was made out under stress, the witness said, but under the same conditions as at Passchendale.

The sequence showed the book made out Nov. 10th. The record upon examination, showed two deaths including that of Joyce. The book showed 34 wounded November tenth.

Col. Armstrong said he had prepared a statement of the men killed and wounded for the month of November, 1918, showing the returns for each day. One copy of the report was filed as exhibit.

Referring to the exhibit Col. Armstrong said the list of killed or those who died of wounds, was as follows:

1918	Officers.	Other ranks.
Nov. 1	3	127
Nov. 2	3	28
Nov. 3	2	13
Nov. 4	2	33
Nov. 5	3	33
Nov. 6	4	72
Nov. 7	1	36
Nov. 8	0	17
Nov. 9	1	10
Nov. 10	8	49
Nov. 11	0	1

Other casualties, not fatal, numbered 14 for Nov. 11th.

Col. Armstrong says gas casualties were classed as wounded.

The total loss from Nov. 1 to 11 was 27 officers, 419 other ranks killed or died of wounds.

Col. Armstrong produced the war diary for November 11, 1918, of the 7th Infantry Brigade. It shows:

P.P.C.L.I., one other rank killed, six other ranks wounded, six other ranks gassed.

42nd Battalion, six other ranks wounded.

49th Battalion, five other ranks wounded—a total of 23 other ranks wounded and one killed, November 11.

Counsel argued as to what casualties occurred on the 10th and what on the 11th. The diaries have the appearance of having been kept daily. The reason for the difference in the reports was the care with which the reports were compiled.

Mr. Regan handed the witness Exhibit No. 33, a list of the killed of the Canadian Corps in the vicinity of Mons, November, 1918. The witness did not think the list would include every casualty, as casualties were kept individually.

Mr. Regan asked witness to produce the names of casualties actually occurring on November 11, 1918. He will look up the records of the names submitted. Corporal Fairley and Lieut. Germain were both members of the 29th Infantry Battalion. The witness had not Fairley's documents in Court, but allowed Mr. Regan to see those for Germain. Germain's death occurred on November 10, 1918, instantly by enemy machine gun bullet.

Mr. Regan said the next-of-kin was informed that death occurred on November 11, and a tombstone in Kingston is inscribed with that date.

The witness produced a copy of a letter to Daniel Germain enclosing the report of the death of Lieut Russell Longworth Germain, the same as read to the Court in the previous statement.

The Court adjourned.

TORTURED FOR SIX MONTHS

Maritime Man Completely Relieved of Kidney Trouble by Gin Pills

When kidneys are inflamed or clogged life becomes a misery, as Mr. W. McArthur of St. John, N.B., realized. Fortunately, he also discovered Gin Pills, and gratefully wrote:

"I suffered for six months with kidney trouble. Doctors said I would have to have an operation before I could go back to my heavy work in the machine shops. I was advised to try Gin Pills by the druggist. After taking three boxes I had no more trouble."

Mr. McArthur is not the first person saved from the surgeon's knife by Gin Pills. For years, Gin Pills have relieved acute kidney conditions.

WELFARE WORK IS WIDESPREAD

Metropolitan Life Nurses Give Great Deal of Service.

One of the greatest contributions that is being made by the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company to the cause of humanity is in the field of life extension. This accomplishment was emphasized at the company's triennial convention which was held in Toronto on Thursday, Friday and Saturday of last week. F. L. Ray, the company's local manager, told The Examiner in a resume of the company's strength and progress.

"We have exceedingly impressive figures of our welfare work," Mr. Ray said. "Last year the Metropolitan saved 72,570 lives, representing potential death claims amounting to $22,206,000. Comparison of our mortality experience shows that since 1911 the gain made by the general population in the length of the average life is five years while our policyholders show a gain of eight years. One of the speakers in Toronto said our work in promoting health was parallel with that of the Red Cross.

Another point that was brought out which the people generally may not realize is this that the Metropolitan company is the greatest financial institution in the world. Our assets are more than two billions of dollars, the statement for the year ending December 31st, 1927, listing assets amounting to $2,388,647,636.32. Our income for 1927 was $651,068,588.43, and the gain in income last year was $55,472,082.55. We paid 342,128 policy claims last year. Our total outstanding insurance is $14,803,785,790.00 of which the ordinary insurance is $7,157,922,228.00. These are tremendous figures.

"Another point that impressed me was that the Metropolitan company has invested in Canada $51,000,000 more than is has collected in this country. Its insurance in force in this country totals $769,114,229.00, and it issued in Canada last year insurance to the amount of $194,948,664.00. There are 2,467,927 policies held by Canadians. We had a very successful convention, perhaps the best we had ever had, and one thing it did bring out was the colossal organization the Metropolitan has built up for its policy holders. In our own district here we have a nurse not only at Peterboro, Lindsay and other larger centres, but even in the smaller towns like Campbellford. Our nurse at Campbellford does not give her full time to our company, but she told me that about nine-tenths of her work was for the Metropolitan."

The company's Canadian personnel numbers more than 2,500, of whom more than 600 are employed at the head office in Ottawa.

TRIPLE SCHEDULE IN CENTRAL LEAGUE

Petes Play in Oshawa May 24 —Belleville Here May 26.

OSHAWA, April 18.—According to the information handed out the Central Ontario League will have a sixty-game schedule with the opening games arranged as Kingston at Belleville and Peterborough at Oshawa on the holiday, May 24th. On the next day, Friday, Oshawa will go to the Limestone City to take part in the Kingston twilight opener, while on Saturday, May 26th, Belleville will visit Peterborough for the Liftlock City send off. Deloro's first home game will be on Wednesday, May 30th. The teams finishing first and second in the triple schedule are to play off for the league championship and be ready to enter the first round of the O.B.A.A. senior playdowns on Saturday, August 25th.

For the coming season all five teams, Kingston, Belleville, Deloro, Peterborough and Oshawa are reported as being evenly matched. Many of the players who worked in the Central Ontario League in former years have issued early season announcements that they are retiring, and when the sun begins to shine on both sides of the fence around the diamond of the five places on the circuit many new faces will be seen and the fans are waiting and watching for the list of players which will be passed by the certificate committee at Belleville on May 5th.

YOUNG ARTISTS GIVE RECITAL

Pleasing Program Well Presented at Conservatory Hall.

In their presentation of a pleasingly varied program at the Conservatory of Music Hall last evening, before a fairly large and quite appreciative audience, Kathleen Baker, elocutionist of the Gladys Shibley-Mitchell studio, Toronto, and Geraldine M. Colliris, A.T.C.M. (vocal), from the studio of Dorothy Allan Park, attained something far beyond a passing degree of success. Miss Collins, known to the city's musical circle as a most promising singer, was assisted by Mary Agnes Logan at the piano, while Miss Jean Morgan, pianist, of Lindsay, and Howard Baker, vocalist, contributed to the effectiveness of several of the visiting elocutionist's selections. The teachers of Misses Baker and Collins were present at the recital and in the presentation of flowers were not forgotten. The program:

God Save the King.

1—(a) Elizabeth's Prayer (Tannhauser) Wagner; (b) Softly Awakes My Heart (Samson et Dalila) Saint-Saens—Geraldine Collins.

2—(a) Tom Boy (Parker); (b) A Stenographer's Soliloquy (Swain) — Kathleen Baker.

3—(a) Romance (Rubenstein); (b) Elf and Fairy (Densmore); (c) O Thou Billowy Harvest Field (Rachmaninoff—Geraldine Collins.

4—(a) Lost (Service); (b) Aren't Men Funny (Lane)—Kathleen Baker (Jean Morgan at the paino).

5—(a) Deep River (Negro Spiritual) Arr. by Burleigh); (b) Bird Songs at Eventide (Coates); (c) The Snowman (Pepper)—Geraldine Collins.

6—(a) Madeline Vercheres (Drummond); (b) The Proposals (Russell) (c) A Bundle of Letters— Kathleen Baker— (Vocal refrain by Howard Baker).

7—Two Viennese Folk-Songs (Arr. by Fritz Kreisler) (a) Paradise, (b) The Home Song—Geraldine Collins.

8—(a) Wolverine (Johnson); (b) Little Moccasins (Service)—Kathleen Baker.

So carefully chosen had been the various numbers, and so well had they been grouped and arranged that one found difficulty in determining which contributed most to the enjoyment of the evening. A glance at the above list makes this quite apparent. Each seemed an integral part.

Perhaps Miss Collins was heard to most advantage in the second number of her first group namely, "Softly Awakes My Heart (Samson et Delila(which depicted the final attempt of Delilah to persaude Samson to yield to his love for her that she might betray him to the Philistines: the lighter "Elf and Fairy" of her second group, coupled with "O, Thou Billowy Harvest Field" in which the magnificent music by Rachmaninoff was superbly executed by Miss Logan. "Bird Songs at Eventide" and the two Viennese folk songs were equally as well handled, emphasizing a nice control of voice and keen appreciation of comparisons throughout.

Miss Kathleen Baker, a stranger to Peterborough audiences, won many friends, not by playing for immediate response through use of "best numbers" first, but by a program so arranged as to seemingly develop her scope as it progressed. Possessed of a wealth of elocutionary ability, she followed up "Tom Boy" and "A Stenographer's Soliloquy" with the intensely dramatic Service number "Lost" through which she seemed to become "established" with her audience, continuing with a bit of satire, "Aren't Men Funny" with marked effect.

One of the finest selections of the entire evening was her presentation of "Madeline Vercheres" (Drummond, the costume used and lighted candle setting adding much to the impressiveness of the piece. This followed by "A Bundle of Letters" in which the voice of Howard Baker was heard, seemed slightly to overshadow quite splendid work in "Wolverine" and "Little Moccasins."

Miss Baker is to join the staff of the Conservatory of Music in the fall.

Taken in all, last evening's entertainment was quite up to, and perhaps a little beyond what had been claimed for it, not only reflecting genuine credit upon those taking part, but also upon the teachers of both young ladies.

IMPROVEMENTS IN DIAGNOSIS

While the science of administering medicine to the sick body has not improved very much within the last thousand years, still, the science of diagnosis has reached a very high stage of development in the last century. Some physicians are still willing to diagnose, or attempt to do so by simply looking at the patient's tongue or by taking his pulse, but the doctor who makes such snap diagnosis is rapidly losing his practise to the ones who are more conscientious and scientific, and who keep abreast of the times.

During the last twenty years the x-ray method of diagnosis has improved to such an extent as to make the diagnosis of such diseases as tuberculosis, stomach ulcer, gall stones, kidney stones and many other diseases quite accurate, and the physician can be reasonably sure of his diagnosis of these diseases. Of course, the x-ray by itself is not an infallible method of diagnosis, but should be supplemented by all of the other laboratory methods known to medical science.

The blood count test is also one of the modern developments of diagnostic science, which is of great value to physicians in determining the quality and quantity of the blood. This test will determine the color of the hemoglobin of the blood, and an accurate count can also be made of the number of red blood cells which carry nourishment to the tissues, and also of the white corpuscles which act as policemen in the body. A scientific physician can read the reports of the blood test and arrive at a definite understanding of their significance.

The examination of the urine is of great value to the diagnostician who can by this means discover many diseases in their incipient stage, and by this be able to teach the patient how to avoid further trouble.

The sphygmomanometer, a blood pressure instrument, will show the tension of the arterial walls. This point is of inestimable value in many diseases.

The electro-cardiograph is an instrument which will draw a diagram of the heart action and show the relative strength of the different heart valves.

Metabolism can now be measured by a delicate instrument which will show how far metabolism has become perverted. Readings of this instrument will indicate when a patient has returned to normal health.

These are only a few of the methods of diagnoses which the modern physician uses. As the laymen learn to understand how well equipped the physician is today for diagnosing any kind of trouble, just that much quicker will he seek his doctor's assistance in discovering the early stages of constitutional or functional weakness.

The time will soon come when everyone will feel the value of going to their doctor every six months to have a complete physical examination made the same as they now go to their dentist to have their teeth looked over.

Questions and Answers.

Question: Roy M. asks: "Will you please tell me the name of a medicated healing astringent plaster to use for inflamed kidneys?"

Answer: I do not know of any medicated plaster which will have any effect on inflamed kidneys. Any inflammation of the kidneys is produced either by infection through the genito-urinary organs or from the kidneys being forced to throw out excessive amounts of bodily toxins.

Question: True and Tried writes: "We have your book, read your articles in our paper, and follow your menus. But my husband or I cannot handle the evening meal, so I wish to know if it would be all right to use orange or grapefruit juice in the evening instead of a meal."

Answer: There can be no harm in your changing your meals about so as to use the lighter meal in the evening. Just balance the other meals of the day accordingly.

Question: Very Anxious writes: "My neck is very thin. If I should rub olive oil or cocoa butter into it every night would either or the other tend to nourish it? Or could you suggest something else? Has either one or the other any fattening properties?"

Answer: The actual rubbing will help to increase the circulation, but oils are not sufficiently absorbed through the skin to have any effect in increasing fat in the tissues. The best way to develop your neck is to take suitable exercises for those muscles in the neck. But there is certainly no advantage in making the neck fatter.

HOROSCOPE

The Stars Incline, But Do Not Compel

(Copyright, 1928, McClure Syndicate.)

FOR THURSDAY, APRIL 19, 1928.

If there is anything in astrology this is one of the most fortunate of days, a time when all the stars are kindly in their influence upon the destiny of Earth, man and women.

The early morning may be depressing since there is an aspect that presents troubles to the mind, but this will be quickly dissipated.

All the aspects appear to favor banking affairs and to presage great expansion of financial institutions.

By the stars it is indicated that business will receive great impetus through big alliances.

This should be a fairly favorable day for borrowing money for business promotion, but it is most perilous for speculation.

Women as well as men should benefit from the planetary government that is supposed to affect banks. Officials will be developed, it is predicted.

This should be a lucky day for assuming mortgages and for making investments.

It is a happy wedding day presaging escape from the ills of poverty and the enjoyment of lasting love.

Theatres certainly are to have an eventful year in which the drama becomes a recognized intellectual force in education. Great plays are to be produced and there is promise of success in presenting new dramas on the Pacific coast.

Death will remove men who have long dominated the theatre, it is prophesied, and the year 1928 is to be historic for big achievement.

Poetry and high aspiration again will be presented as attributes of stage characters, it is foretold.

Persons whose birthdate it is have the augury of a year in which fortune smiles on them.

Children born on this day probably will be keen of mind and strong of body. Supreme success is likely.

LYRICS OF LIFE

SPRINGTIME'S CHILD

(To my daughter, on her birthday.)

The Winter's child looked on a world
Wherein the clouds of snowflakes whirled,
And Summer's child beheld a land
Whose roads were dust and rivers sand.
While Autumn's child saw skies of gray
From which the birds had flown away.
But you—no wonder that you sing—
You were the chosen child of Spring.

Yes, you were born in Springtime, you
Looked with blue eyes on skies of blue.
Awakened with a waking earth
Whose rushing rivers sang with mirth.
For Springtime's child is greatly blest,
Seeing the wide world at its best.
The skies all blue, the birds all there,
And every field supremely fair.

The years shall bring you Summers when
The river-beds are parched again,
And Autumns when the birds take flight,
And Winters when the fields are white.
But what will Summers mean to you,
And Autumns, yes, and Winters, too?
You can smile on through everything,
Because you know about the Spring.

DRESS

By MARY MARSHALL

Pleated skirt of printed silk, mounted on a white silk top.

Overblouses and sweaters are all fairly long this season—and that means that skirts may be placed on a fairly long slip top. On the other hand, the apparent length of skirts is greater—almost always they are long enough to cover the knees even when the wearer is sitting.

If you have a skirt that seems too short all you need to do is to mount it on a fairly deep foundation or yoke and then wear it with one of the new longer sweaters or overblouses. If the overblouse you have on hand is too short for this arrangement get a length of wide ribbon or silk and attach it to the lower edge of the blouse, leaving lengths to be tied in a knot or bow, with ends hanging at one side.

If you are making a skirt from new material you may go about it in any one of several ways. If there is no very distinct up and down to the material and it is very wide you may be able to do with a length—just half the required width of the finished skirt. Slit the material through at the center crease. Seam the two pieces together at one end—then have it pleated or press it into pleats yourself. Seam up the other ends and mount the raw edge on the slip.

If you are using one of the new fine tweeds or woolen materials the selvedge may be used for a hem. If you do not want to use the selvedge run some matching seam-binding or a strip of silk along the lower edge and then turn up the material in a two or three-inch hem, stitching the edge of the seam-binding down for the hem before the pleating is done. If crepe de chine or other silk material is used a real hem may be used which is usually better done by hand.

Why We Do What We Do.

No one is born patriotic. We are patriotic because we have love for our country and her institutions as the result of training and emotional experiences.

Patriotism is a sentiment that has to be cultivated. Like all other sentiments, it is an emotional attachment to persons, objects, and situations. We are patriotic because we have come to regard the welfare. The strength or depth of our patriotism is determined by the extent to which we have given ourselves to the country and have become one with her.

Patriotism is a very complex sentiment. It is a stronger motive than life itself. The true patriot gladly lays down his life for his country. However, in dying for one's country a man is dying for himself and his family and countrymen. He is defending his own ideals and institutions and traditions as well as those of the nation.

We are patriotic not only because we have come to have a set of emotional attachments to our native country but also because we see the value of united action. We are bound by ties of tradition. It is the "we" feeling that holds a nation together. What makes a nation is not geographical boundaries. A common language is not what constitutes a nation. What makes a nation a nation is nothing other than common traditions, like cultural background, a fellow feeling, common aspirations, common ideals and mutual understanding.

We are patriotic because we share the life of the nation.

Leafs Open 1928 International Season at Newark To-day

MAPLE LEAFS OF 1928 SHOULD BREAK FAST AT THE BARRIER

Billy O'Hara Has Great Pitching Staff and Heavy Hitting Outfield.

GOOD INFIELD.

All Clubs in International Have Strong Chance For Pennant.

TORONTO, April 16. — Billy O'Hara and his Toronto Maple Leafs arrived in Newark yesterday afternoon for an eight game exhibition while en route from the Albany, Georgia, training camp. In those same eight games Manager O'Hara and Coach Burchell had an excellent opportunity to get a real inside glimpse at the team and outline their campaign of attack for this season.

One thing the Toronto Ball Club will start in their inaugural against Newark a hundred per cent. perfect in harmony, something which they lacked last season. There is not one hold out, and everybody is happy and satisfied with conditions.

Strong in Pitching.

The team this season boasts of a pitching staff that threatens to rival the staff of 1926 when Daniel Phillip Howley won the International League pennant and the Little World Series championship. With Rip Collins, Jess Doyle, Clarence Fisher, John Prudhomme, Don Hankin, Claude Satterfield, Don Songer, and Stan Lucas, ready to face a nine innings ordeal the Leafs of 1928, should suffer little from erratic pitching.

With Billy Phillips on hand to boost up the catching end, the team is just as strong behind the bat as in former years. Renso is much better than last season.

The infield with Cote at short as the only change over last season, possess speed and real hitting ability. Alexander at first is hitting them farther than ever. Les Budke celebrated the final exhibition game with three hits and performing faultlessly at the keystone sack. Billy Webb is considered one of the third basemen in the league.

New Outfield.

The outstanding difference between the team of last season and the present aggregation is in the outfield. Last season with Bratchi, Spencer and Jacobson starting out, the outfield was weak in hitting, and for the biggest part of the season this department lost many ball games because of their failure to hit in the pinch.

Sheedy, Jacobson and Rabbitt are in line for this year, and the Leafs possess an outfield of real hitting qualities. Clayton Sheedy, when with Baltimore, won many a game with his long distance hitting and he will do the same stunt for the Leafs. Jacobson is a new man.

With an illness that threatened to ruin his family last season conquered and salary conditions improved Jake has been going like a house afire in training and is due to have a real season. Joe Rabbitt is not only fast on the paths, but has hit himself out of the clean up position. Rabbitt can pound them for some length and extra base hitters have no business leading off.

Strong for Reserves.

Reserve strength finds the Leafs well fixed this season. Sexton and Burdine formed the outfield utility candidates and Bedore is the sole infield candidate with the team at present. Brown, Fraser, Lucas, Rail and Bobo are the Rookie pitchers.

According to despatches from New York City, the International League is evenly matched this season. Newark, with their all star line up of ex-Mayor Leaguers are figured by many to have the edge, but the other seven cities think differently.

Newark's Veterans.

While Newark has relied upon veterans of former years for their strength other clubs have built up with younger players. Rochester, with their many St. Louis Cardinal rookies will always remain a threat. As the Syracuse team of last season, the "Red Wings were only defeated by Buffalo for the pennant after a series of ill luck breaks. Then Jack Dunn at Baltimore has to be reckoned. He is starting Vince Barton, the Toronto sand lot star, at first base in the opening game.

Billy Clymer and his Buffalo Bisons are losing little time in claiming the pennant again this season, but outsiders can't see the Bisons this season after the many changes they made during the winter season. But Clymer always has three teams signed up, one playing, one going, and one coming, so no one can tell just what he is going to do.

Montreal and Reading are expected to cause a few upsets with their good players. Jersey City has Frank Gilhooley at the helm and he should have little trouble in finding a nice resting place near the top of the second division.

Baseball critics, after a star vote, have picked them as follows, to finish the season

First, Toronto; second, Newark; third, Rochester; fourth, Buffalo; fifth, Baltimore; sixth, Reading; seventh, Montreal; eighth, Jersey City.

OPENS TO-DAY.

(By Fred Turbyville, for the Associated Press.)

NEW YORK, April 18 (Associated Press). — To-day the eight most evenly matched clubs in modern International League history will start off on a 168-game baseball race that should break all records for attendance.

Half a dozen managers honestly believe they have a chance at the pennant, which is most unusual in this or any other league. No one of the eight clubs is so weak that it does not entertain hope of getting up around the top.

On the eve of the opening, several of the clubs are still trying to obtain players. Jersey City needed a shortstop and has signed Johnny Mitchell, a fast man, brilliant fielder but light sticker.

The neighboring Newark Club is after a catcher, and a trade is pending now in which Newark will part with one of its good outfielders for a capable backstop.

Bisons at Baltimore.

The Buffalo Bisons, champions of 1927, open at Baltimore, and Jack Dunn will send his right hander, George Earnshaw, to the mound to check the champions in the first game. Dunn has pitching, but so has Buffalo. Bill Clymer will use either Curly Ogden or Eurie Proffitt. The latter is a southpaw. Buffalo looks strong and the Orioles are stronger than a year ago.

The much-heralded Newark Club will start with Toronto as its guest. The Leafs have wonderful pitching this year, as good as any in the League. Jess Doyle is Manager O'Hara's choice to pitch for the Leafs against Al Mamaux of the Bears. It is expected all attendance records will be broken for opening games at Newark to-day.

Walter Johnson is not yet able to be about, and George McBride will handle the Bears. Fans of the circuit and many experts have made the Bears the favorites to win this year, with Fournier, Johnson, McQuillan, Lamar, Lutzke, and other additions to last year's team. But rival managers are conceding nothing. They're out to whip the Bears.

Have Strong Entries.

Over in Jersey City, the Skeeter fans will look upon the strongest entr ythey have had in years under the management of Frank Gilhooley. He will send either Thormahlen, a southpaw, or Horne, to the mound against Rochester, another recognized contender.

Billy Southworth, another new new manager, has not let it be known who will pitch. He has very good pitching this year. Both Southworth and Gilhooley are playing managers, and both will be in to-day's game.

Reading entertains the Montreal club, a new entry in the John Conway Toole circuit. Harry Hinchman says his Reading Club is a hundred per cent. stronger than last year's aggregation, which finished a bad last.

George Stallings bought the Jersey City Club of last year, and moved it to Montreal. But he has added much to it, and now has a formidable lineup. Just the other day he secured Walter Beall from the Yankees. Bob Shawkey is in shape and should be a winner.

President Toole will be present at the Newark opener, which promises to outdraw all other games for the day.

CITY LEAGUE MEETING

Baseball clubs and fans in this district must not forget the City League meeting scheduled for to-night in the Chamber of Commerce rooms. A big attendance is necessary for a successful season.

On Saturday afternoon twelve bowling teams from the Canadian General Electric will travel to Toronto to compete in a tournament with the Davenport employees. A few weeks ago the Davenport bowlers played the bowlers of the local plant, and on Saturday the return games will be played. They will be met at the Union Station by the Toronto crew and will then proceed to the Victoria Hotel where a banquet will be held. Immediately after the banquet the tournament will begin. The bowlers representing the local plant are the high-average men of the league which have been going strong all season, and some real high scores have been rolled.

Since the organization of the associationa few seasons ago the Deloro boys have made vast strides in baseball activities, and this year have graduated into the Senior ranks. Carl Woods and Lambert Collins, both former Peterborough boys, are on the Deloro line-up, and will form the nucleus of a snappy battery. Bob Elliott is manager of the team and is also second vice-president of the O.B.A.A.

A meeting of the City League Baseball Association will be held in the Chamber of Commerce rooms to-night at 8 o'clock to elect officers and discuss other matters pertaining to the drawing up a schedule. This meeting is very important and all managers and prospective players are asked to be present.

CUBS DEFEAT CARDINALS 3-2

Cleveland Unable To Hold Chicago in Final Game of the Series.

GAMES POSTPONED.

NEW YORK, April 18 (Canadian Press). — Making his second start in his eighteenth National League season, Grover Cleveland Alexander met more than his match in the Chicago southpaw, Percy Lee Jones, and the Cubs defeated the Cardinals at St. Louis yesterday, 3 to 2, in ten innings in the final game of the series.

Jones himself scored the winning run in the tenth when, after singling to start the inning, he came home on English's sacrifice and Cuyler's single.

Earl Webb touched Alex, for a home run in the second, but the Cardinals bunched hits on Jones in the third for two runs. The Cubs tied in the fifth on Kelly's double and Butler's single, and the pitchers battled on even terms from that point to the tenth. Neither hurler gave a base on balls.

Charlie Grimm, Cub first baseman, again was out of the game with a lame back, and his place was taken by Kelly.

TUNNEY BOUT FOR NEW YORK

Tex Rickard Names Battle Site For Heeney-Tunney Fight.

HELD ON JULY 26TH.

NEW YORK, April 18. — Canadian Press. — Tex Rickard returned from Miami, Fla., yesterday and named New York as the site for the heavy weight title battle between Gene Tunney and Tom Heeney this summer. Although no definite date was set, the bout probably will take place in the Yankee Stadium on Thursday night, July 26.

The promoter gave up all idea of taking the bout to England, because of the excessive taxation abroad.

Rickard believes the match will draw $1,500,000 in New York. Although the gate receipts probably would be as large in London, with the mammoth Wembley Stadium available, Rickard classed the foreign project as "too much of a gamble."

Tunney will fight but once this year, the promoter said, and if he retains his championship will battle but once for Rickard in 1929. The New Zealand challenger if victorious over Tunney, has agreed to fight only once next year and then under his auspices, Rickard said.

Heeney won the challenging position partly on his good record but primarily through fear that a bout between "Honest Tom" and Johnny Risko of Cleveland, the other outstanding contender, might result in an unsatisfactory draw.

"In that case I wouldn't have any challenger," Rickard said.

"Now I have two and Risko will grow even more formidable with another year of experience."

JACK JOHNSTON KNOCKED OUT

Defeated By Omaha Negro in Scheduled Ten-Round Bout.

SHARKEY IN TRAINING.

TOPEKA, Kansas, April 18.—Another of the few knockouts charged against Jack Johnson in nearly three decades was on record here to-day. The former heavyweight champion who fell before Jess Willard in 1915, was knocked out in the fifth round of a scheduled ten-round fight here by "Bear-cat" Wright, Omaha negro.

Entering the ring weighing 235 pounds as compared to the 220 he scaled in his championship days from 1906 to 1915 Johnson held Wright on nearly even terms for four rounds. In the fifth the Giant negro fell victim to a solar plexus blow followed by a right upper cut and remained down for the full count. Wright weighed 211.

Johnson was 50 years old March 31 last. He showed much of his old dash and at time appeared to have plenty of drive in his body punches. However, the footwork that proved a factor in his knockouts over Bob Fitzsimmons, Stanley Ketchell, Jim Jeffries and more than a score others was largely lacking.

WELTER TITLE.

NEW YORK, April 18.—Sergeant Sammy Baker of Mitchell Field may be given a chance against Joe Dundee, welterweight champion, as the result of the little soldier boy's victory over Billy Alger in ten rounds at the St. Nicholas Arena last night. Baker did not win by any wide margin, however, the crowd manifesting its displeasure with the judges' decision.

WALKER—HUDKINS.

CHICAGO, April 18.—The "Nebraska Wildcat" Ace Hudkins, will add a few pounds and tackle Mickey Walker for the middleweight title here either late in June or July, Promoter James Mullen has announced. Walker and his manager, Jack Kearns signed three weeks ago. As a welterweight, Hudkins has been a picturesque scrapper, but his increasing poundage has forced him into the middleweight class.

COMPETING IN THE ONTARIO OLYMPIC TRIALS

ABOVE are seven of the Ontario amateur boxing title-holders competing in the Ontario Olympic trials. These boys won their titles at London in March and are eager to prove that their wins on that occasion were not of the "flukey" variety. (1) "Bobby" Crothers, of Stratford Y.M.C.A., 118 pounds, who defeated Vince Glionna of Toronto who was the favorite. (2) "Red" Melville, of St. Thomas, who surprised the talent by defeating Harry Cobb of the Air Force, for the light-heavyweight title. (3) Harry Hills, University of Toronto, heavyweight protege of Larry Gains. (4) Willie McGrath, Broadview Y.M.C.A., lightweight who was one of the only two champions to repeat. The other being (5) Sam Hackett of the Classic A.C., featherweight (6) Willie Ferguson, Lion's Club,. St. Catharines flyweight, who has been Stephen Rocco's closes rival in previous tournaments. (7) Ray Smillie, St. Agnes A.C., middleweight champion, a former holder of the Ontario and dominion welterweight crown.

BUNION DERBY.

CHELSEA, Okla., April 18. Canadian Press. — Back in his native county where he used to race a horse to school daily, Andrew Payne, 26, of Claremore, Okla., yesterday turned on a burst of speed in the cross-country Marathon, swept through his home town first, amid the plaudits of thousands ,and recaptured the derby elapsed time lead from Peter Peter Gavuzzi, of Southampton England.

Payne was first into the night control point here, the halfway mark on the run last night from Los Angeles. He negotiated yesterday's stretch of 49 miles from Tulsa in 7:23 for an elapsed time of 279:10:52 for the 1669.6 miles.

Gavuzzi was forced behind by Payne's torrid pace but the long lap had a sizzling finih when John Cronisk of Saskatoon Sask and Harry Rea, of Long Beach Cal., finished less than 20 seconds behind Payne in 7:23:41. Cronick's elapsed time is 325:01:25, and Rea's 322:58:53.

SOX LEADING BROWNS 3-2

Make It Two Out of Three By Taking 4 To 2 Victory.

NEW YORK, N.Y., April 18 (Canadian Press). — The White Sox made it two out of three from the St. Louis Browns at Chicago yesterday by hitting behind Ted Lyons' pitching for a four to two victory. St. Louis found Lyons frequently, but not in the pinches, and left nine men on the bags. McNeely, Barrett, and Kamm starred at the bat, each getting three hits. McNeely's double was on the only extra base hit of the contest.

At Detroit, Cleveland grouped hits with Tiger misplays yesterday to win the closing game of the series, 6 to 4. It was Detroit's sixth defeat in seven starts this season.

Bob Fothergill, veteran Tiger outfielder, was benched by Manager George Moriarty before the game because of a batting slump. Paul Easterling, recruit from Seattle of the Pacific Coast League, took Fothergill's place, and drove out three clean hits in four times at bat.

Jack Tavener drove a home run into the right field stands in the second with Easterling on base. This hit gave the Tigers a lead which they could not hold because of faulty defence.

The Fightingest Oil

that ever tamed heat

—the new line of super heat-resisting Veedol Motor Oils

THE new high-speed, high-compression motors present a new and difficult problem in lubrication. To solve that problem Tide Water has reformulated the entire line of Veedol Motor Oils. These new oils are heavier, tougher, longer-lived than ever. They not only lubricate the new type motors safely and correctly but they are better oils for any motor.

These new Veedol oils give:

1. Greater motor protection (heavier body and added heat resistance).
2. Greater mileage (being heavier, they last longer).
3. Greater economy (they cut operating costs and reduce wear, tear and repair on the engine).

Let the new Veedol oils prove those claims. Stop today at the first orange and black Veedol sign you see. Have your crankcase drained and refilled with Veedol. Then watch results.

The NEW VEEDOL Motor Oils are Here!

EAST RIVER BARGE BOY RISES TO ENGINEERING FAME IN SCREEN TALE OF NEW YORK

John Breen first saw New York from the deck of a brick barge called the "Cavalier." He loved it then as he was to love it all his life because it challenged him. To him it meant a place to dream great dreams and see them through to final accomplishment. The instinct to dream, and to accomplish was very deep in this boy born on the East River. The dreams he had inherited from Gilbert Van Horn, his father, and the only son of an old and distinguished New York family.

The vitality to make his dreams come true came from a strain of common stock. John's mother had been a servant in the Van Horn mansion on Park avenue. When she had to leave it she had married Tom Breen, the captain of the "Cavalier" John was 16 years old on the foggy night when it collided with another barge and sank near Brooklyn bridge. He was the only one aboard it to reach the shore.

Plunged headlong into the colorful turmoil of the city, he began a career of fighting and accomplishment which led him through the slums of the Ghetto, up Fifth avenue to Harlem, to the luxury of Park avenue, and back again to the slums. Throughout the story the life of the growing city is traced through the lives of the men and women whose lives touched him. There was "Pug" Malone, the trainer, who started him on his pugilistic encounters. There was Judge Kelley, friend of Gilbert Van Horn, who finally told him of his real identity, and Harboard, close friend of his college days at Columbia, where he studied engineering. There was little Becka Lipvitch of the East Side, who gave him the most he ever knew of real happiness, perhaps because her love demanded so little and left him free to carry on the work which always came first in his life. Josephine Lambert, the ward of Gilbert Van Horn, was another woman who loved him in her fashion—but it was a selfish love, which could not endure bacause it could not give.

Through all his adventures, there ran a thread of destiny, a destiny which demanded that John—last of the Van Horns—should pay back to New York in labor and accomplishment, the debt contracted by his ancestors who had dreamed through generations of leisure. Coming to the Regent Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

AT THE CAPITOL.

"BRINGING UP FATHER."

"For laughing purposes only!"

This caution certainly applies to "Bringing Up Father," Cosmopolitan's hilarious assemblage of the adventures of Jiggs, Maggie and Dinty Moore and the rest, now playing at the Capitol Theatre.

The fact that the new picture is based on George McManus' famous cartoon comics presupposes laughs—but even this gives no idea of the utter hilarity of the picture. It is simply a collection of chuckles, guffaws and howls, bound together with a little heart-interest story. There are moments when the picture tugs at the heartstrings, it's true — deft little touches of human interest that only make the comedy funnier—but in the main it is one hundred per cent. comic entertainment.

Marie Dressler and Polly Moran, the first feminine comedy team in history, garner the bulk of the laughs. As Maggie and Mrs. Dinty Moore, sisters-in-law, they battle their way through dozens of uproarious incidents and adventures. J Farrell McDonald, as Jiggs, also proves an expert at collecting laughs. The famous character star of "The Iron Horse" is a natural comedian, and as the hero of the comic supplement pictures he has one of the greatest opportunities in his career.

The bulk of the story was taken by Frances Marion direct from the comic pages. Jiggs and his corned-beef-and-cabbage adventures, the episode with Maggie's French poodle, Maggie's social climbing, and Dinty Moore's resort, beloved by Jiggs, all figure just as they do in the comic pages. Miss Marion, in fact, collected most of the incidents in the cartoons, and worked them into a connected plot.

Jules Cowles, a character actor known for his work in "The Scarlet Letter" and other plays, proves a perfect Dinty Moore, and adds generally to the hilarity. Gertrude Olmsted makes a very pretty daughter for the redoubtable Jiggs, and Grand Withers, as her lover, proves a clever actor. Andres de Segurola, the opera star, as the Count, David Mir as Oswald, the social secretary, and Rose Dione as the social leader at Maggie's reception, are adequately cast, and Bull Montana, Bobby Mack and others add comedy touches. Jack Conway directed the picture with a deft appreciation of comedy touches, and the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios gave it an elaborate setting.

Mrs. Edwards Gives Address To Members of Trinity W. M. S.

The regular monthly meeting of Trinity W.M.S. was held in the Reid street hall on Thursday afternoon, April 17, with a good attendance. The president, Mrs. A. Bookdance. The president, Mrs. A. Bookdance. After the usual business Mrs. Heal's group took charge. After the singing of a hymn Mrs. Heal led in prayer. Mrs. J. F. Allan gave a short reading on "Christian Stewardship." Mrs. Liddle sang two pleasing solos, accompanied by Miss Clarry. A Bible reading was given by Miss Beatty.

Mrs. Edwards, president of the local council of women, gave the Easter message and stressed the great need for all to get in closer touch with Christ

Mrs N. D. Seaton moved a vote of thanks to the speaker and soloist. The meeting closed with prayer

LADIES' AID HOLDS SUCCESSFUL SOCIAL

Dinner and Concert at Mark Street Church Well Attended.

The Ladies' Aid of Mark Street United Church served a very appetling and satisfying dinner to about one hundred people. Mrs. A. J. Throop received the guests. A number from other congregations in the city were present and heartily congratulated the ladies on the delicious meal which they had served.

The concert was given in the auditorium of the church where an orchestra under the leadership of Wesley Boorman entertained those who had dined until the regular concert program began. Rev. A. E. Thornley acted as chairman and Miss Nellie Boorman presided at the piano for the orchestra and the various vocal numbers.

Rev. R. Bamforth, a former minister of Mark street, was the first speaker. After relating some humorous experiences of his early ministry, he congratulated the congregation on the church building enterprise so auspiciously begun, and imparted inspiration for a successful consummation of the enterprise by referring to a church building experience which he had in his early ministry.

Mr. Wheeler delighted the audience with a trombone solo entitled "Joy Wheel," and generously responded to an encore.

Rev. J. V. McNeely of Bridgenorth, the next speaker, proved himself to be an adept at telling humorous stories.

E. Rowe sang "Shipmates of Mine" by Wilbert Sanderson, and responded to an encore with "An Old Fashioned own."

Rev. William McDonald of Knox United Church, after some pleasant introductory remarks, entertained the audience with a reading in Irish dialect entitled "The Silent Dog."

Rev. Mr. Sutcliffe of Murray Street Baptist Church sang with very pleasing effect "At Dawning," and responded to an encore with a few appropriate and humorous remarks.

Rev. J. W. Gordon of St. Andrew's United Church, with some introductory remarks, read from Canadian poets, "The Convict" by Beatrice Redpath, and "The Little Dog Angel" by Nora Holland, which thrilled and pleased the audience.

After another selection by the orchestra, Rev. David Wren of Trinity United Church, in his own inimitable and humorous way, philosophized concerning some of his early experiences as a Methodist minister and brought to a happy conclusion a program which had been thoroughly enjoyable and had held the attention of the audience for more than two hours.

SAY TRIAL MARRIAGE OLD

Companionate marriage is arousing only mild interest in Scotland because the Scotch say that the idea is the same as "trial marriages" which were common in that country before the Reformation. The ceremony was called "handfasting", and Sir Walter Scott refers to it in "The Monastery", where he makes Sir John Averel say, "We take our wives like we take our horses—on trial. When we are 'handfasted,' as we term it, we are man and wife for a year and a day. That space passed, each may chose another mate, or at their pleasure may call a priest to marry them for life." It has been suggested that the Scotch custom emanated from ancient Rome.

What CAN a Man Believe?

By BRUCE BARTON

Author of "The Book Nobody Knows," "The Man Nobody Knows"

XXVII—Millions Worship Confucius

SO it had come, but the whole nation rose up to make him its spiritual master.

There was religion in China before the days of Confucius, but he took little account of it. In some parts of his teachings he implies a belief is deity, as when he says:

"The great God has conferred even on inferior people a moral sense, compliance with which would show their nature invariably right."

But other of his teachings seem almost to deny the supernatural. He discouraged prayer and did not enjoin any sort of religious observance. He was always modest regarding his own character and attainments, acknowledging four shortcomings, like Buddha, one of which was too much fondness for wine.

"The Master said: 'In letters I am perhaps equal to other men. But the character of the superior man, carrying out in his conduct what he professes, is what I have not yet attained to.'"

If he fell short of his own ideal, however, he had four great points of strength to which his disciples testified:

"There were four things from which the Master was entirely free. He had no foregone conclusions, no arbitrary premeditations, no obstinacy, no egotism."

He taught the characteristics of the superior man. The ordinary man is partisan and not catholic: the superior man is catholic and not partisan. The superior man does not set himself for or against a given course, but what is right he will do. The superior man is not anxious in the fear of poverty, but is anxious lest he fail to learn the truth.

"In the Book of Poetry are three hundred pieces, but the design of them all can be embraced in one sentence, 'Have no depraved thoughts.'"

He taught the brotherhood of mankind. "Within the four seas all men are brothers." He taught the "silver rule," which is negative as contrasted with the Golden Rule of Jesus, saying, "What you would not have another do to you, do not do to him," but is a noble precept none the less. He taught the value of the family and human nature's unrealised capacities for self-improvement. But his interest was in fitting men for better citizenship, not in the founding of a faith.

It would have amazed him to be told that millions would one day render him worship.

Yet for at least twelve hundred years in the temple of Confucius in Pekin the emperor has twice a year offered sacrifice. Twice a year in fifteen hundred and sixty temples similar observances have been carried on for more than a millennium. Less elaborate ceremonies take place twice every month, and no less than sixty-two thousand six hundred and six animals are said to be slaughtered annually in these sacrifices.

"China has produced no other figure who has been so intensely admired. The result of the centuries of devotion paid to him is that the character of the people has been more nearly the creation of this one great teacher than is the case with the people of any other single country in the history of the world."

So says a modern scholar, but the gentle old philosopher himself never dreamed of such immortality. He walked humbly, bemoaning the fact that no one would listen, and regarding his life as a failure; he died worn out and discouraged.

JACK MINER AND THE BIRDS

AND SOME THINGS ABOUT NATURE

A Republication of the Book by Permission of the Author, Jack Miner of Kingsville, Ont.

CHAPTER XIX.

My Last Distinguished Family of Pet Ducks.

At the present time I have only one grey duck of my own. She is pinioned and lives in the park. In the spring of 1919 she paired off with one of the wild drakes that came here, built a nest and laid eleven eggs.

I have a pair of Egyptian geese in the park, and of all the web-footed devils I know of on earth, these Egyptian geese are the worst. I know full well I must not let this duck hatch her young there, so a few days previous to their hatching I stole the eggs and put them under a domestic fowl. She hatched the whole eleven and in about twenty-four hours I moved them all to the north pond, shutting the eleven pets in a playground about two feet square which I made in front of their own stepmother. The third day I gave them their liberty by quietly removing the three boards, but of course left the hen in the permanent coop. I sat for a few minutes and watched them as they saw water for the first time. Finally all apparently lined up along the sloping bank of the pond, looking and peering sidewise as they slowly advanced to the edge of the water, where all stood still for a few seconds, then as suddenly as anything could possibly be, they dove into the water, just like eleven frogs, and equally as quick, some of them coming up fully ten feet from shore.

The first week I fed them a little custard, then gradually tapered off to oatmeal, throwing the feed in the shallow water so they would have to tip up to get it.

They grew quite rapidly, but the thirteenth was their unlucky day for a snapping turtle took one. Fortunately three other wild ducks were raising their families there, and these old ducks gave the alarm and I arrived just in time to see this little duck's finish; but the other ten got along O.K., for that was the last meal that old mossback ever required.

In about a week I heard these old ducks' alarming cries again. I hustled back and shortened the career of another snapping turtle, but this time my nerve was not very steady and I missed his head, but the ball split the roof of his house, causing it to leak, letting in the water that gradually pushed his life out, leaving him just strength enough to walk to shore.

About a week later I again heard these old ducks' call of distress, saying "Help, help! Help, help!" and this cry continued until I arrived with the glittering rifle in my hand; then it ceased. All were standing on the shore, and, best of all, my ten had learned the alarm and had also come out of the water; the forty or fifty ducks, young and old, were on their tiptoes, each with one eye directed towards the middle of the pond. So I hid myself in the growing rye surrounding the pond. Finally the three old birds ventured in the water about twenty feet in front of me, and just as I was about to give up watching they all three raised their heads and said "Quack! Quack! Quack!" and they swam quickly towards me and their young who were preening their baby feathers on the bank. I could not see a thing. Yet they continued the alarm, as much as to say, "There he is!" Now what could it be? Finally I saw a little speck not much larger than an ordinary bean projecting above the calm surface of the water. I watched it closely and it still grew larger until I was sure it was the periscope of one of these old four-legged submarines. The ducks having my nerves keyed up to the highest tension, I wanted to make a sure shot. When this speck was as large as my two thumbs above the water I slowly cocked the high-powered rifle, took a steady aim and pressed the button, and I have never seen that turtle's head since.

But here is what is interesting: Of these three old ducks two were tagged in 1916, and have migrated and returned three times to my personal knowledge, and have undoubtedly been shot at time and again; one has part of her foot shot away. Yet when this rifle cracked, right above the three, not one attempted to fly, but all rushed right up to the muzzle of the gun. This was only a starter of them exposing their knowledge for ten minutes later each took her family right out into the water. Whether they knew I had killed the turtle, or if it was the calmness and safety brought about by the crack of the rifle the two previous times that gave them confidence to go out into the water, I do not know; only this, that they did go out with the appearance of perfect safety. Moreover I had no proof that I had killed the turtle. But time told that tale; the weather was very hot and on the second day and about the eleventh hour he arose, but minus a head.

Well, to return to the ten little ducks, I was trying to make them grow as fast as the old ducks did their broods. In other words I was racing with the old duck, but I was like Dad's fast horse, just fast enough to lose. Fortunately one day mine followed me towards the house and found the mulberries. These trees were only five years old and therefore hadn't much fruit, but the ducks ate every berry almost before it touched the ground. Now I had the old ducks a-going some, for these Mulberry ducks outgrew theirs. For three weeks they ignored me, but as the weather was dry and hot the bulk of this fruit gave out and the Mulberry family, as we called them, were glad to come back to their old stepfather.

They were hatched on May 25th. The day they were eight weeks old they arose and flew the full length of the pond, two hundred and forty feet. At nine weeks old they were going over the top of the whole premises including the seventy-five foot chimney at the drain-tile factory. On July 14th we caught, tagged and named each one. I put two tags on each duck so I could see how many returned in the spring without catching them, the one being the usual tag that I put on any duck; the other was a little narrower and contained just the initials of the duck's name. Their names were as follows: Agnes Mulberry, Ruth Mulberry, Mabel Mulberry, Flossie Mulberry, Nellie Mulberry, Joseph Mulberry, Woodrow Mulberry, John Mulberry, Theodore Mulberry, Peter Mulberry.

In August the pond dried up and most all of my ducks went away. Mr. William Scratch, Kingsville, Ontario, shot Theodore Muiberry on September 1st, at Cedar Creek. Later on, in October, seven of them were home again, and all migrated on December 2nd. On December 13th, Joseph Mulberry was shot by Mr. August Holstein of Columbus, Ohio. Mr. Holstein shot the drake near that city, and on January 3rd, 1920, Mr. H. C. Leiding of Charlestown, South Carolina, killed Mabel Mulberry near that city. In the spring at least three of them returned, but strangely I haven't any proof of what happened to any of the rest; possibly some may be alive yet.

It may seem strange to you that I enjoy keeping a history of different families of birds, but if you were to do the same I am sure you would enjoy it far better than tracing your own family history, for in tracing the history of the birds we are not so apt to find out things we wish we had never known.

CHAPTER XX.

Ducks' Love Soon Ceases.

During the last few years I have received letters from different men in America questioning about wild ducks' ways, and I have promised to answer in this book.

Yes, wild ducks, as well as geese, all go through an annual moult, their wing feathers all dropping out within a few days, leaving them unable to fly for from four to six weeks, according to the healthy condition they are in to produce new wing feathers.

The drakes have nothing else to do for the summer months, and they moult the latter part of June. Their wing feathers shoot out so fast they usually are flying again in about a month. But the ducks, as I have previously stated, are the most faithful mothers on earth, and neglect themselves for their families, not moulting before the young are full grown and have been flying at least two weeks. Then her wing feathers drop out, and because she cannot fly with her family they all desert her, and she sneaks away in the rushes and is seldom seen until she is able to fly again. By this time her family have completely forgotten all about her. I have never seen them pay any particular attention to her afterwards; in fact they pay just as much attention to a drake who possibly might have been their father, and by the first of October the whole family may be scattered and become comparative strangers to each other, seldom two of them ever being together. This is pointed out plainly by the ducks with tags on being dotted here and there among a flock of hundreds. Further proof of this is that only two or three sportsmen throughout America have ever reported killing over one; yet they will often say, "a flock of ducks came into our decoys we killed so many among them was this one with the tag on," and so forth. And as I have previously stated, we have never noticed two tagged ducks return together.

We often hear sportsmen speak of seeing floppers in the marsh on the first of September, apparently believing these are young ducks. I have never seen a young duck in my life that could not fly on that date. They usually all fly by July 20th. Sometimes an old duck will lay a second setting if the first nest is destroyed this will put her back five or six weeks. The floppers that are seen in September are old ducks. We had a duck we called "Old Lamey" she had part of her foot shot away. After raising her family she did not moult until August, and it was October 5th before I saw her flying.

One gentleman writes me, "If a duck loses her mate will she pair off again that summer?"

This all depends on the variety of duck. Wood ducks pair off and if one is killed the other is a failure for at least that season, but black and grey ducks will pair off the very next day. I have known a black duck to hatch some black and some half-grey ducks, all from the one setting of her own eggs.

During the spring months one often sees three ducks flying here and there all over the marsh. This is a pair of ducks and a strange drake interfering. Now I have never seen a case of this rough and ready Brighamy where the duck was the least bit to blame. The drakes are all the same, like barn rats. The less said the better.

The Kiwanis Show

BY AN AMATEUR REVIEWER

Who Knows Nothing About Shows.

He: "You used to let me kiss you——"

She: "Let you! . . . I had to help you!"

That's what Lenora James said to Jack Roach last night in one of the prettiest love scenes ever seen in Peterborough—and there have been many interesting, both public and private.

This one is public because the billing and cooing couple are members of the big cast in Kiwanis Minstrel Revue, which opens in the Grand Opera House to-morrow night for a two-day run.

The amateur reviewer — which is me—went to the rehearsal in Victoria Hall last night just to see what it's all about, and he—I—saw plenty, believe us.

"It's the finest chorus we ever had." I was told by a man who has been in every Kiwanis show, and I could quite believe him. The opening is unusual in its setting and its numbers, and I didn't hear a single one of the old-time songs or wise-cracks. It's original —it's unique—and . . . peppy. The sea-side scene is a humdinger. There are twenty bathing beauties in the chorus—snappy scenery, peppy girls, gingery dancing. Then into this more or less Eden-like setting gracefully step the contestants, looking, to the amateur reviewer, like accidents going somewhere to happen. The contestant who has won the prize in the rehearsals, by popular vote, is inclined to rotundity and finds the intriguing dance just a little difficult, especially when it is necessary in the high kick for the beauty to reach over and touch a toe. This scene is a scream, and the elephantine beauty prize-winner is half of it. This beauty has much the grace of a steam roller caressing a June bug.

Then there's another big scene: "Shot at Sunrise," in which Norm Laing takes the part of the Sergeant Major and Vern Morphet is the Dumb Soldier. Vern fills the part to perfection, his big difficulty being that he has only a couple of hands. It's a good thing for somebody that at the rehearsal he had only a broom stick for a gun, or somebody would surely have been shot or bayonetted, or whatever it is that dumb soldiers do. Into this scene totters Art Moffatt as the insurance agent. He looked last night like a wooden Indian who has lost his cigar store, but it is rumored that the producer intends putting a real insurance prospect out there to-morrow night to add interest. Art is busy to-day getting the policy ready.

One of the pretty scenes is in Act II where Evelyn Armstrong and Adele Picard are statues. Some wise guy once wrote, "Frailty, thy name is woman!" but he wasn't talking about the girls in Kiwanis show, especially thees two. They can dance, dance, dance, and are always ready for more—and if they do take a rest in this

GROTTICH—WHITWORTH

A very pretty wedding took place at the home of the bride's parents, 122 Dublin Street, on Saturday afternoon, April 14, when Gladys Ivy, third daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Whitworth, became the bride of Leonard George Grottick, only son of Mrs. George Tuck, of Campbellford.

The ceremony was performed by Ensign Green, of the Salvation Army.

The bride entered the parlor on the arm of her father, wearing a gown of mauve georgette trimmed with mauve velvet, wearing a bouquet of ophelia roses and fern.

The bridesmaid, Miss Helen Whitworth, sister of the bride, was dressed in mauve georgette and carried roses and fern. Mr. Cecil Church supported the groom.

After the ceremony a wedding breakfast was served to the immediate relatives of the bride and groom. Mr. and Mrs. Grottich will reside in Peterborough.

CURTIS—DOUPE

A very pretty wedding was solemnied at St. Luke's Church on Saturday last, by the Rev. G. J. Bousfield when, Amy eldest daughter of Mr. Bruce Doupe and the late Mrs. Doupe, was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Floyd, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. George Curtis. The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, looked charming in a dress of royal blue silk crepe trimmed with peach. Her hat was of sand crocheted straw with pink flowers, sand stockings and black shoes. Her bouquet was of roses and lilies of the valley. Miss Gertrude Doupe, sister of the bride, acted as bridesmaid, wearing a dress of pink georgette trimmed with lace, with hat and shoes to match, and carried a bouquet of roses. Mr. Stan. Curtis supported the groom. During the signing of the register Mr. W. Saunders sang "Until," after which the Wedding March was played by Miss Muriel Davies. Ushers were Mr. Gordon Maniece and Mr. Raye Pammett, cousin of the bride.

The happy couple left amid showers of confetti on the 8.35 a.m. train for Montreal and points east and on their return will reside in Peterborough.

JOHNSTON—HARDWICK

A quiet but pretty wedding took place at ten o'clock this morning, when Rev. J. H. Sutcliffe M. A., pastor of the Murray street Baptist church, Peterborough, united in marriage Robena Jean, daughter of Mr. George T. Hardwick, and the late Mrs. Hardwick, to Frank H. Johnston, of Peterborough.

They were attended by Miss Edith Hardwick and Mr. Stuart Fleming.

Immediately following the ceremony the young couple left for Rochester and other United States cities. On their return they will reside at Alexandra Apartments, 543 George street.

MISSION CIRCLE PROGRAM GOOD

Young Ladies of St. James' Church Have Enjoyable Meeting.

On Monday evening Miss Edith Wright and Miss Zetta Wood were joint hostesses, at the latter's home on Lansdowne street, to the X.L Mission Circle of St. James' Church at its April meeting. A splendid program was presented to an exceptionally large attendance. The meeting was opened by the Circle President and the Watchword repeated in unison.

A stewardship service of worship, 'The Earth is the Lord's" in which Mrs. Ernest Kitney led the singing, was both interesting and inspiring, all taking part in the exercise.

Miss Mabel Dulmage gave a very comprehensive talk on Chapter 5 of the Study Book. She dwelt particularly on the situation in China, presenting it from an angle entirely new to most of her listeners.

A beautiful Easter reading was given by Aileen Rose, and Edith Patterson also gave a very impressive reading, "The Dying Missionary."

The musical program was greatly enjoyed. It included vocal solo by Geneva Sedgewick, and vocal duets by Jean Rose and Eleanor Gibson, with ukulele accompaniment.

The envelope system of giving has been adopted by the Circle and the treasurer's report for the first quarter was most satisfactory.

After the meeting had closed with the Mizpah Benediction, a social hour followed. A clever contest was entered into heartily, the prizes being carried off by Aileen Rose, Marjorie Dudgeon, and Greta Welbourn.

The service of dainty refreshments by the committee in charge, Edith Wright and Zettta Wood, brought to a close a very enjoyable evening.

Mrs. E. Kitney and Miss Ethel Dudgeon will be the hostesses for the May meeting of the Circle.

The Working Man

Good health is the working man's most valuable possession. If you are half-sick and just dragging around, you are decidedly inefficient and are not doing justice to either yourself or your employer. If you are satisfied to drift along in this manner you may loose your job. To be half-sick and out of work is a very discouraging proposition. Wouldn't it be better to devote some attention to conserving your health and strength than to take a chance on getting down and out. Chiropractic is a splendid

JUNKERS PLANE BREMEN WILL CONTINUE FLIGHT TO NEW YORK WHEN REPAIRS ARE COMPLETED

Fitzmaurice Announces Plans of Fliers On Arrival at Lake St. Agnes.

AWAIT REPAIR PARTS.

Plane Not Badly Damaged in Forced Landing on Island.

LAKE ST. AGNES, Que., April 19 (Associated Press). — The German Junkers plane Bremen, forced down at Greenly Island, Straits of Belle Isle, will be repaired on the spot and the flight continued to New York, Major James Fitzmaurice declared here yesterday.

Major Fitzmaurice arrived here from Natashquan, Que., yesterday afternoon completing a flight from Greenly Island in a plane piloted by Duke Schiller. The Irish member of the Bremen crew announced his future plans and the future plans respecting the Bremen, in an interview shortly after his arrival.

Not Badly Damaged

Major Fitzmaurice said that the Bremen was not badly damaged in the forced landing last Friday after its historic flight from Ireland to Canada. The propeller was snapped, as was also the top of the landing gear. One tire was punctured.

Spart parts for the Bremen, he said, are now in Montreal and will be brought to Lake. Ste. Agnes and taken by air to Greenly Island.

Major Fitzmaurice announced that he would remain here until the spare parts arrived and would return with them to Greenly Island and rejoin Baron von Huenefeld and Captain Herman Koehl, German members of the Bremen crew, who made the flight with him from Ireland. Major Fitzmaurice added that he expected to take off on the return trip to Greenly Island within two or three days. He was not able to say when he expected the Bremen would be ready to complete its journey to New York.

He hoped, however, that it would not be more than three days till the needed parts would reach Greenly Island.

"It is possible," he added, "that the Bremen may land at Murray Bay on the first stage of its flight to New York, but this will depend on conditions existing at the time the Bremen is ready to leave Greenly Island."

Major Fitzmaurice, although reticent about the details of the Bremen flight over the Atlantic, said that it had furnished some very valuable data concerning airplane flights from Europe to America.

This information, he said, would not be available for publication until it had been gone over and checked up with Baron von Huenefeld and Captain Koehl.

Asked whether on the flight they had been able to arrive at any conclusion as to what happened to their ill-fated predecessors in the attempt to blaze the East-to-West passage across the Atlantic, Major Fitzmaurice said he could give no reason why the other planes had failed to make the journey.

Companions Left Behind

Major Fitzmaurice landed here after an adventurious journey from Greenly Island during which the relief plane had encountered unfavorable weather. The plane, one of the fleet operated by the Canadian Transcontinental Airways, left here last Saturday to bring the crew of the Bremen to Murray Bay should they desire to leave the island. The return trip with Major Fitzmaurice was made in three stages—Greenly Island to Natashquan; Natashquan to Clarke City, and Clarke City to Murray Bay. When the relief plane left Murray Bay, it carried, in addition to Schiller, another experienced pilot, Doctor Louis Cuisinier. He remained at Greenly sIland to assist the crew of the Bremen in making repairs to the trans-Atlantic plane. A mechanic, R. Thibauld, also made the trip to Greenly Island and remained with Dr. Cuisinier.

Given Ovation

Major Fitzmaurice had a taste yesterday of the acclaim which awaits wherever he should choose to go. This little settlement was in a state of excitement and had spent the hours waiting for him in improvising flags showing the orange, green and white colors of the Irish Free State. They fluttered everywhere as the relief plane came in sight and swooped down to a clean landing. Cheers rent the air as the gallant Irishman stepped from the cabin. Cameras clicked, news-reel photographers ground off yards of film, reporters rushed forward and Major Fitzmaurice was all but mobbed to death. He took it all smilingly and seemed in a happy mood.

KING'S HORSE WINS.

Scuttle, Three Year Old, Wins Brandon Handicap at Newmarket.

NEWMARKET, England, April 19 (Canadian Press). — King George won his first race of the season today. His three-year-old Scuttle captured the Brandon Handicap over nine furlongs from seventeen others.

Hint At Appeal Given By Defence Counsel

COBOURG, April 19 (Special by Staff Reporter). — The first inkling that if the defence lost the famous Sir Arthur Currie $50,000 libel suit against W. T. R. Preston and F. W. Wilson, proprietor of the Port Hope Guide, an appeal would be entered, was given by Frank Regan, defence lawyer, yesterday. Mr. Regan, when trying to put in his evidence the "dugout" episode, asked His Lordship's permission to give it to the court stenographer, as it might be used in the future.

The court ruling was against Mr. Regan. "If you are thinking of an appeal, Mr. Regan, the appeal judges can obtain it if they so desire," said His Lordship.

Plowing Hill Field Surrounded By Water

SPRINGVILLE, April 19. — John Whitfield was the first plowman on the land in this part of North Monaghan The land he plowed is on a hill, and quite dry. It is a sod field, and is being prepared for early potatoes. The land surrounding the hill is still under water, as the river is high.

Ship Has Rough Trip When Cargo Escapes

NEW YORK, April 19. — Canadian Press. — The steamship Ecquador arrived from South America after one of the roughest trips ever. The roughness was not due to the weather. There was a lot of monkey business aloft. Some of the cargo of a thousand parrots, three hundred monkeys five hundred lovebirds, twenty five flamingos and twenty four sloths escaped.

HIGHWAYS OPEN BUT VERY ROUGH

Roads To Port Hope and Lindsay Passable—Other Roads Soft.

TRAVELLING HEAVY.

The Peterborough-Port Hope and Peterborough-Lindsay highways are now passable though rough, according to a bulletin issued this morning by the Peterborough Automobile Club to its members On Wednesday the latter highway was quite dry save in spots, but gave promise of trouble to motorists who attempted to traverse it after heavy rains. The frost does not appear to be all out as yet.

The Lakefield. Norwood, Hastings and Havelock roads are also open at present, though quite heavy in places and unless travel by car is very necessary, motorists would do well to avoid travelling over them for a few days.

WELL-KNOWN MEN WILL SPEAK HERE

He will be the chief speaker at this event, which takes place in the Empress hotel on the evening of April 26, starting at 6.30.

Another distinguished guest will be William Birks, of Montreal, who is chairman of the executive of the Canadian Chamber.

TALK ON SCHOOL WORK.

Mrs. W. R. Morris Tells of the Work Among Sub-Normal Children in Toronto.

Mrs. Ada Craig, president of the King George Home and School Association, presided over the meeting held on Tuesday evening in the school, when a very interesting talk dealing with the conduct of schoo's for sub-normal children in Toronto, was given by Mrs. W. R. Morris.

An enjoyable program included piano solos by Phyllis Starr and Marion Jaquith, a vocal solo by Miss Phyllis Rome and a reading by Ruth Ellis.

Arrangements were made for holding a concert next month.

TALKS ON MISSIONS GIVEN W.A. MEMBERS

Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Cuttle Address Meeting at All Saints'.

Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Cuttle of Toronto were speakers in All Saints' parish hall last evening, at a meeting held under the auspices of the Women's Auxiliary of the church. Rev. J. D. Paterson occupied the chair for the gathering, which was well attended.

Mrs. Cuttle, who is diocesan treasurer of the W.A., gave a very interesting and illuminating address on the work done by the organization in the Indian schools of the province, showing pictures illustrative of the efforts of the organization.

Mr. Cuttle's address was based on the world call to the churches, and was, like Mrs. Cuttle's talk, on missionary lines of endeavor.

OIL TANK EXPLODES.

Damage Amounting To $40,000 Done On Tank Farm Near Lethbridge.

LETHBRIDGE, Alta., April 19.—(Canadian Press.)— Forty thousand dollars' damage was caused last night when a 25,000 barrel tank on the Imperial Oil Company's farm at Coutte, Alberta, exploded. I. Coover, a guager, who was on the tank when the explosion occurred, was blown 75 feet and seriously injured.

HON. MARY ELLEN SMITH CHOSEN PRESIDENT AT CONVENTION

First National Assembly of Liberal Women Brought To a Close.

ELECT HONORARY OFFICERS.

Association To Be Known as National Federation of Liberal Women of Canada.

OTTAWA. Ont.. April 19.—(Canadian Press.)—Hon. Mary Ellen Smith, M.L.A. Vancouver, was yesterday unanimously chosen by the First National Assembly of Liberal Women as their president.

In answering the applause which greeted her election, Hon. Mary Ellen Smith said: "I thank you from the bottom of my heart."

She went on:: "There was a feeling throughout the country that the women were being chloroformed. But we refused to react to the anaesthetic. I did not want the presidency. But now that I have it, and that you have set up the machinery to make this a permanent organization I am going to stay until that machinery is in smooth running order, and I shall welcome criticism. From now on we women want to go on record as being constructionists."

Miss Carrie Carmichael of New Glasgow, Nova Scotia, was chosen as honorary vice-president, and Mrs. Norman Smith, Ottawa, as honorary president.

Brought To a Close.

After two days' sitting. the Liberal women's convention concluded business late yesterday afternoon. The last sitting had its strenuous moments. Debate over a constitution was lively and keen. Objection was first made that the formal draft was not printed in both languages and put in the hands of the delegates. Finally a compromise was arrived at by Dr. England of Montreal, reading the English version and Mrs. Pierre Casgrain, also of Montreal, giving from the chair the French version.

The association will henceforth be known by the name, "National Federation of Liberal Women of Canada."

The objects of the Federation are defined as:

"To encourage the organization of Liberal women throughout Canada; to uphold the cause of Liberalism; to raise the status and advance the political education of women; to aid in securing and maintaining good government and to encourage a broad spirit of Canadan nationality within the British Empire."

Machinery is provided, in the greatest detail in the constitution for local clubs, provincial clubs, and national federation.

Objection was made to the complicated character of the constitution. A motion to refer the constitution back to the provinces without action by the assembly was defeated. Each item was voted on clause by clause.

Professor Carrie Derick, president of the Central Club of Liberal Women of Montreal, several times attempted to restore order.

"A constitution," said a member from Quebec, "is always a contentious matter and always will be. It is an important matter in the life of our Dominion, but let us keep our feet warm an dour heads cool." Laughter

PEOPLE SPOIL TURF IN PARK

Walk Beside Paths in Victoria Park, Causing Damage To Grass.

SOFT AT PRESENT.

Persons crossing Victoria Park, not wishing to walk on the paths, which are very soft at this season of the year, have been walking on the banks of grass on each side, and have damaged the turf. At present the grass is soft and easily worn off, leaving bare patches, which will be unsightly later in the year, points out Ald. J. M. Greene, chairman of the Parks Committee of the City Council, who asks that those living in that section of the city refrain from crossing the grass for the present.

DOUBT CONFESSION BUT INVESTIGATE

Police Prepare Thorough Inquiry Into Story About Hall-Hills Murder.

SOMERVILLE, N.J., April 19 (Canadian Press). — Although disinclined to believe the confession of a prisoner in El Reno, Okla., Jail, that he was the slayer of Rev. Edward Hall and Mrs. Eleanor Mills near here in September, 1922, the authorities to-day prepared to make a thorough investigation. Elwin Allen, held in Oklahoma City, said he killed the couple with the aid of his common law wife.

Discuss Details Of Franchise Bill

LONDON April 19. Canadian Press. — The House of Commons yesterday discussed details of the Franchise Bill, giving votes to women at the age of 21 years, and rejected a proposal from a Conservative member to raise the age to 25.

The House also considered a Labor proposal reducing by a penny per head of the electorate the maximum expenditure by candidates allowed at elections. Sir William Joynson Hicks, Home Secretary, promised to report the debate to Premier Stanley Baldwin and it was adjourned.

ARMISTICE DAY FIGHT JUSTIFIED HOLD PRESSURE, SAYS CURRIE

Reading of Examination For Discovery Takes Up Much Time To-day.

2,000 QUESTIONS READ.

Despatches and Orders at End of War Discussed By Witnesses.

COBOURG, April 19 (Canadian Press).—Further progress was made with the reading of the record of the examination of Sir Arthur Currie at to-day's sitting of the Supreme Court hearing General Currie's libel action against W. T. R. Preston and F. W. Wilson. At 4 p.m. about two thousand of the two thousand and seven hundred questions and answers in the record had been read. In it exhaustive interrogation of General Currie brought forth his statement that the Armistice day fighting was justified by the advantage in keeping up pressure on the enemy.

Reporter Baffles Defence.

A newspaper reporter's adherence to the ethics of his profession baffled the defence this morning.

The incident aroused Mr. Regan, counsel for Mr. Wilson, and he asked His Lordship for an order making R. Warbarton, a reported from Kingston, divulge the name of a military officer who had confidentially shown him a "cease fire" message sent out by Col. Caldow, of 38 King Street, Toronto.

Mr. Warbarton had taken a photo of the message, and it had later appeared as a picture in the Toronto Daily Star. He said that the copy was held by a Kingston officer of the Canadian Army who was still serving and who feared dire results if his name was made public, as he is not allowed to have such a document in his possession.

Mr. Regan, in introducing this evidence, was seeking to show the jury that this "cease fire" message had been sent at an earlier hour on the morning of November 11 than the plaintiff's witnesses claimed.

Examination Resumed.

T. F. Hall, K.C., Associate counsel for Mr. Wilson, continued reading the examination for discovery. In it Sir Arthur denied having any correspondence with Sir Robert Borden, then Premier of Canada, in connection with the taking of Mons. In the attack on Mons a small British squadron was connected to the Canadian unit. General Currie admitted having heard that a British officer of this squadron was killed during November 11.

Q.—Is it a sound principle to defeat an enemy instead of capturing ground?

A.—If to defeat the enemy is the aim.

Q.—Looking back on the capture of Mons, do you think that the taking of that city affected the war?

A.—It was part of the general operations.

Q.—Paragraph 2 of the article in the guide charged that there was much waste of human life during the war, involving a great loss of life which should not have taken place.

A.—I agree with it.

Q.—In what battles or places was there this kind of thing?

A.—I cannot say.

Q.—I want you to say.

A.—I won't say—it always has been an understood thing that there has been needless loss of life in all great wars.

Mr. Hall then reached a point in his reading where all the individual battles had been menticned with regard to the general loss of life.

Mr. Tilley submitted that this evidence was not relevant to the issue of the case.

Mr. Regan endeavored to get the evidence put in. He wanted to get the evidence put in in order that the jury might see at Valenciennes there was not loss of life, and if the same principle had been followed at Mons there would have been no loss of life.

His Lordship ruled all comparisons could only be done by experts, and could only be done after the fullest evidence had been submitted, "which I think is impossible in this case. I

Benzol Shipped For Bremen Plane

MONTREAL, Que., April 19.—Canadian Pres. — Three hundred gallons of benzol were shipped from Montreal last night to Murray Bay, for transportation by airplane to Greenly Island, where the German transatlantic plane Bremen, was forced to land after crossing the Atlantic.

The fuel was shipped in steel drums, on a special car attached to the regular Canadian National Railways train, which will arrive in Quebec this morning. It will be transferred to the Murray Bay train, and should reach its destination at 7.30 in evening, unless, as is expected, arrangements can be made to have it transported from Quebec in a special train.

A number of five gallon cans were also shipped with the fuel in order that it could be transported over the remaining distance to Greenly Island by airplane.

Bottom Falls Out Of Tripe Market

PARIS, April 19 (Canadian Press).—Tripe, the taxicab driver's delight, disappeared from Paris menus to-day because the bottom dropped out of the market yesterday. A hundred tons of the ancient flooring at Les Halles, the sanctum sanctorum of bird, beast, and fish, fell through into the basement of the public markets. The tripe department practically suspended operations for twenty-four hours.

241 MEN START IN BOSTON RACE

Weather Conditions Ideal When Historic Marathon Begins.

ROADS ARE DRY.

BOSTON, Mass., April 19 (Canadian Press).—Clarence De Mar, 39-year-old Melrose sprinter, won the Boston Marathon to-day for the sixth time. Pressed hard most of the way by Joie Ray, veteran middle distance runner, attempting the marathon distance for the first time, De Mar ran a heady race, and was out ahead all the way after pulling out of the ruck of the 241 starters. Jimmy Henigan was second. De Mar's time was 2:37:07, a new mark for the course.

BOSTON, April 19 (Canadian Press). — Under ideal weather conditions, 241 of the 285 entries in the 32nd annual Boston Athletic Association Marathon left the starting line at Hopkington at twelve o'clock noon. The sky was overcast, but the roads were dry.

At South Framington, about five miles from the start, William Simons, Needham Heights, Mass., was in the lead. He overed the distance in 31 minutes, 20 seconds, almost a minute faster than last year's time. Demar, who won out, and William Wilson, Philadelphia, were close behind. William Taylor, Sydney Mines, was fourth; and Billy Reynolds, Galt, ninth.

At Wellesley Square, about the midway point of the run, Demar and Wilson were still running neck and neck, having covered the distance from the start in 1 hour, 10 minutes, 45 seconds. This was more than two minutes better than Demar's time to this point last year.

Around the City

At 5.00 p.m. on Wednesday, the fire brigade received a call owing to a grass fire which had started underneath the Hunter street bridge, on the west side of the river near the Quaker Oats factory. It was not of a serious nature however, and was easily extinguished.

This morning at 11.31 a chimney fire and overheated pipes caused alarm at 260 Wescott street, resulting in another run for the firemen. Bank clearings for the week totalled $862,425.

Fourth Set of Twins For Local Family

Twins, a boy and a girl, augmented the population of the city by two additional citizens when they arrived on Tuesday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Peter De Carlo, 583 Downie Street. This is the fourth time that twin babies have made an addition to the family of Mr. and Mrs. De Carlo, the last pair arriving last year. Sixteen children have been born in this family, ten of whom are living.

TILLEY CALLS REGAN'S ACTION IN MAKING PLAINTIFF ANSWER CERTAIN QUERY VERY IMPROPER

Verbal Battle Ensues While Defense Counsel Reads Report of Examination.

815 QUESTIONS READ.

Tactics of Last Few Days of War Reviewed—Ordered to Maintain Pressure.

(Special to The Examiner by Staff Reporters.)

COBOURG, April 19. — W. N. Tilley, K.C., of Toronto, chief counsel for Sir Arthur Currie, in his $50,000 libel suit against W. T. R. Preston and F. W. Wilson, proprietor of The Port Hope Guide, characterized the action of Frank Regan, counsel for the defendants, as very improper when he forced Sir Arthur Currie to answer several questions in the examination for discovery by obtaining an order from Judge O'Connor.

The incident arose out of a verbal battle between Mr. Regan and Mr. Tilley. T. F. Hall, K.C., associate counsel for the defendants, was reading the examination for discovery to the jury. When he came to the question where General Currie was asked about borrowing money from his brother and the plaintiff was unable to recall the incident, Mr. Tilley objected to the question being read, as it had nothing to do with the case. R. H. Parmenter, K.C., of Toronto, had been present at the examination in the interests of General Currie and Mr. Tilley exclaimed, "If I had been here you never would have been told."

Mr. Regan replied: "I may have done the same with you as I did with Mr. Parmenter. Got Judge O'Connor to make an order."

Mr. Tilley: "Very improper."

Major Nickle was the only witness called by the defence during the afternoon, and all the rest of the time was taken up with Mr. Hall's reading of the examination for discovery, when Sir Arthur Currie was asked to answer 2,834 questions about himself and his war actions. When the evening adjournment arrived, Mr. Hall had succeeded in reading 815 of the questions. Last night the two lawyers got together and dropped out many of the questions that were not relevant to the case.

A stubborn battle is being waged by Mr. Regan and the two legal minds are battling with all the subtlety at their command. Question after question has been asked by Mr. Regan, only to have Mr. Tilley object, and His Lordship on one occasion exclaimed, "I hate to be ruling every moment."

Mr. Regan during the day attempted twice to make public the "dugout" episode, but on each time he met with failure. In the investigation this episode is known as question

Establish Sanitarium In Eastern Ontario

OTTAWA, Ont., April 19 (Canadian Press).—Representatives of the six counties in Eastern Ontario, meeting here yesterday, took the first step towards the establishment of a tuberculosis sanatarium to serve the needs of Eastern Ontario. Wardens and Reeves present indicated their personal sympathy with the project.

The outcome of the meeting was a decision to have representatives of the Canadian Anti-Tuberculosis Association appear before the different township councils concerned in June, outlining the idea for a sanatarium and endeavor to gain the approval of each council towards polling an assessment for the maintenance of the proposed santarium.

The Provincial Government will be asked to contribute half the cost of the building, which is estimated at $200,000.

BREMEN'S CREW SEEING THINGS

Eyes Deceived Them Many Times About Coast, Says Baron Huenefeld.

TRIP UNEVENTFUL.

NEW YORK, April 19 (Canadian Press).—Baron von Huenefeld, in a signed, copyrighted story in the New York American to-day, discloses that all three members of the crew of the monoplane Bremen frequently were deceived by what they believed to be villages along the Labrador coast but which proved to be figments of their weary eyes and brains.

Until the fog banks off Newfoundland were reached, he said, the trip was uneventful, and he sat back in the plane the greater part of the time, sleeping when he could, sometimes writing poetry, and sometimes wondering what would ultimately happen to them.

Relief Flight Delayed

DETROIT, April 19 (Canadian Press).—Bernt Balchen, who with Floyd Bennett, plans to pilot a relief plane to the aid of the German trans-Atlantic monoplane Bremen, damaged and isolated on Greenly Island, announced to-day that the flight probably would be postponed until tomorrow because of necessary minor adjustments to the relief plane.

Wait for Spare Parts

MURRAY BAY, Que., April 19 (Canadian Press).—Major Fitzmaurice, who landed here yesterday following a trip from Greenly Island, arose at ten o'clock this morning after a good night's rest. There was no activity here to-day, it being necessary to wait for spare parts which are due tonight by train from Quebec.

WILL BUY PIANO FOR SCHOOL USE

Confederation Home and School Association's First Effort Begins.

A piano was the first ambitious purchase of the newly-formed Confederation Home and School Association, this being decided at the last meeting of the society held on Monday evening, after a piano had been sent down on approval and the evening's program of music tested out on it. The organization will make a special effort to pay for the instrument, and are also welcoming public donations to the fund.

The meeting, with Mrs. J. A. Seger, the president, in the chair, was favored with an interesting report on the recent Easter Home and School Federation meeting held in Toronto, given by Mrs. W. H. Andrews, president of the King Edward Home and School Association.

A talent tea will be held at the home of the president, Mrs. Seger, on Monday next.

The items on the program, which follows, were heartily applauded. Dainty refreshments were served later.

Violin Selection, Miss Milby and Mr. White; Address, Mrs. H. Clare; Solo, Miss Curtis; Hawaiian Guitar Selection, Mr. Wells; Comic Song, Mrs. L. Bugg; Reading, Mr. J. John; Accordion Selection, Mr. J. A. Seger; Quartette, Misses Payne, Dickens, Dudgeon and Milby.

Hawaiian Guitar Selection, Misses Hamilton and Messrs. Hamilton and Clayton; Solo, Miss E. Harrison; Mrs. King, pionist.

Will Fly in Bremen.

LAKE STE. AGNES, Que., April 19 (Canadian Press). — That the three fliers would fly in the Bremen to New York as soon as repairs were effected, was stated by Major Fitzmaurice, the Irish member of the trans-Atlantic flight, here yesterday.

BIG APARTMENT HOUSE ASSURED

Will Erect Building Here This Summer, Says Kenneth McLeod.

LOOKS OVER SITES.

Kenneth McLeod, president of the York Apartments, Limited, was in Peterborough yesterday looking over possible sites for the apartment which his company and the Atlas Finance and Development Comapny are building. Mr. McLeod states that there are several locations under consideration, and that final choice will be made in a few days, and plans made for the erection of an apartment house costing about $125,000. During his visit here he also investigated rent conditions.

NEW POST-CARDS VERY ARTISTIC

Series Dealing With Peterborough Subjects Are Hand-Colored.

In view of the fact that a locality is very often judged by the pictorial post cards that visitors send to their friends, it is of importance therefore that such cards should be of high quality and of a nature that fairly represents the most picturesque features of the district. This being so, the fact that the Roy studio has just issued a new series of cards, using a new hand-colored process that gives almost the effect of an oil painting to the scenes reproduced, is of general interest. These cards, the subjects of which have been carefully chosen, include Peterborough and Kawartha Lake views and will undoubtedly be greatly coveted.

While the marriage rate in England is rising, that country had the lowest birth-rate on record during the last quarter of 1927.

AGED RESIDENT GIVEN HONORS

Mrs. Thomas Gillott Observes Her Ninety-third Birthday at Millbrook.

RECEIVES FLOWERS.

MILLBROOK, April 19.—The community evidently has a pride in its oldest citizen, Mrs. Thomas Gillott, judging by the number who called at her home on Tuesday, the occasion of her ninety-third birthday, and also by the number of letters and cards received from friends here who were unable to convey congratulations in person, as well as from former residents and friends living at a distance.

Considering her advanced age Mrs. Gillott was in good health on Tuesday, and throughly enjoyed the opportunity of visiting with her many callers. A beautiful plant, covered with blossoms, from the ladies of Grace Presbyterian church, and several boxes of candy, were among the gifts received.

During the year, from time to time Mrs. Gillott is remembered with beautiful bouquets of flowers by a number of her friends.

United Church Ladies' Aid

Mrs. I. E. Needham was hostess for the April meeting of the Ladies' Aid of the United Church on Tuesday afternoon, the attendance being large and interest in the work evidently well sustained.

Miss M. E. Needham was in the chair and among the general business transacted was the decision to send out cards to each woman in the congregation asking that three articles be donated toward the bazaar next fall; this was done two years ago with excellent results.

The committee detailed to look after the purchase of new tables for use at the church when social events are in progress reported that same will be ready in time for the annual garden party in July. W. Tremaine has the matter in charge. The committee appointed to buy a quantity of new silverware reported that no action has yet been taken, but that this item also will receive attention in the immediate future.

The treasurer, Miss M. Duncan, reported about forty dollars cleared from the tea in February, and a substantial sum in the bank at present. No immediate action will be taken in making changes in the church kitchen, the matter to come up for further consideration. Some needed alterations in the parsonage have been cared for financially by the Aid, the lowering of the bathroom ceiling being one of these. The new 'treasury bags' which are in future to be used in holding the church funds each Sunday, and which have been found necessary since the adoption of the duplex envelopes, will be donated by the Aid Society, the president, with one or two assistants, looking after their purchase and making.

The Aid will hold a work meeting at the church some time in May, following its usual custom of renovating the auditorium in preparation for Mother's Day on Sunday, May 13. Usually the congregation is exceptionally large that Sunday morning, the Sunday School beginning its morning sessions then by a joint service with the church. After that date the school will continue to meet at 10 a.m. until the end of September or possibly October.

The usual social hour was enjoyed at the close. The next meeting will be at Mrs. J. McKnight's home, the first Tuesday in May. Mrs. George Locke, a member who is constantly active in the interests of the Ladies' Aid Society, was welcomed at Tuesday's meeting after an absence of two or three months. The president also, who has been away all winter, was warmly greeted as she once again assumed duties of her office.

Personals

Miss M. E. Needham, who has been taking a course at the Technical School, Toronto, this winter, has returned home.

Mrs. George Locke, who has been making an extended stay with her son, Mr. Norman Locke, Hamilton, and her daughter, Mrs. Harry Lang, Toronto, came home this week.

Miss Nellie Ingram, of Peterboro is visiting her cousin, Mrs. W. Wilkinson, at present.

Form Brotherhood Automobile Workers

WINNIPEG, Man., April 19.—(Canadian Press.)— The formation of an International Brotherhood of Automobile Workers at Oshawa, Ont., the first union of its kind in Canada, was announced at yesterday's session of the Division Four, American Federation of Labor, biennial convention being held here. With a membership of 4,000 workers, the Oshawa local is the largest in the Dominion.

A resolution asking that old age pensions be put into effect in all provinces where they are not already in existence, was passed by the convention. A protest was registered against the age qualifiaction of 70 years. It was suggested that this be reduced to 65. Two hours, with pay, for the purpose of attending polls at election time was asked in another resolution proposing amendments to the Federal, Municipal and Provincial Election Acts. The present law provides for two hours from work without pay.

A protest against the influx of immigrants at present coming into Canada was also registered. It was stated by several delegates that a large number of these men are displacing railway and other workers at their accustomed employment.

CAVAN RESIDENTS TO HAVE POWER

Communication Received By Council From Hydro Electric Power Commission.

MILLBROOK, April 19. — A communication was received by the Cavan Council from the Hydro Electric Power Commission with a by-law and contract giving the commission power to supply electric light and power to dwellers of the township, a number of whom having already signed for it.

Communication was also received from the Sawyer-Massey Company stating that the grader would be shipped on April 15, and asked the council to make arrangements for taking care of it at that time; from the Manvers Council proposing certain arrangements for the adjusting of boundary accounts.

A number of ratepayers from different parts of the Township waited on the council complaining of the very bad condition of the different roads. They were assured that when the council made their annual tour of inspection that all complaints would have consideration.

A bill was received from Martyn Brock asking for the sum of $150 as recompense for the loss of a horse struck by a C. N. R. train on March 22. After giving this claim careful consideration it was decided by the Council that no action should be taken. This was one of four horses hitched to the snow plow and plowing the roads at that date.

The following bills were ordered paid: Hillard Lang, $250.; A. Coulter, $150.; The Millbrook Telephone Co., $2.67; W. J. E. Gillott, $31.; J. Kennedy, $15.; J. W. Hamilton, $12.75; H. J. Hubbeard, $2.50; J. A. Vance, $6.; J. W. Perrin, $53.25; J. L. Moncrief, $57.50; J. A. Morton, $250; L. M. Brock, $27.63; H. Morton $11.25; I. Lowes, $13.75; W. Nill, $18.50; M. Ward, $31.20; J. Seymour, $36.13; R. A. Wood, $54.52; E. Carveth, $14.25; Treasurer Hope Township, $9.84; A. Coulter, $1.13; G. McDonald, $26.75; F. W. Fallis, $49; B. Olan, $32.80; J. H. Sanderson, $13.; L. Jackson, $35.25; L. H. Gibson, $54.27; J. N. McGill, $37.50; Com. work, $32.

Council adjourned to meet on May 9.

SPRING WORK IS DELAYED

Extremely Cold Weather Prevents Any Progress in Cavan District.

RECEPTION SERVICE HELD.

CAVAN, April 19.—On Sunday evening at Cavan United Church there was a reception service for sixteen new members. The following were received into the church on profession of faith: Doris Tinney, Mary Tinney, Dorothy Cobbly, Verda Braithwaite, Harry Kennedy, Mac Newton, Trevor Braithwaite, Joyce and Gearldine Wood, Pearl Richards, Marguerite Wyndram, and Susie Byers; and the following were received by letters from other churches: Mrs. Albert Tinney, Mrs. Lloyd Newton, Mrs. F. Moore and Mrs. S. Richards. The pastor, the Rev. J. A. Totten had charge of the sermon.

The Rev. C. C. Otton, of Goodwod, will preach on Cavan Circuit next Sunday, while Mr. Totten will take his charge.

Spring Work Prevented

The extremely cold weather of the past week has prevented any progress in the spring's work. Farmers are busy finishing up odd jobs such as getting in a supply chop, getting seed grain ready, and finishing up the wood pile. The fall of snow on Saturday will provide protection for the wheat and seeds.

Personals

Mr. William Stark went to Cobourg on Monday to serve as juror.

Messrs. J. Stark, A. Matchett, and James Paul were visitors to Peterborough on Saturday.

TORTURING NEURALGIA

The Cry of Starved Nerves For Rich, Red Blood.

Most peole associate neuralgia with a pain in the head or face, but neuralgia may affect any nerve in the body. Different names are given to it when it affects certain nerves. Thus neuralgia of the sciatic nerve is called sciatica, but the character of the disease and the nature of the pain are the same; the cause is the same and remedy, to be effective, must be the same.

The pain of neuralgia is the cry of starved nerves for nourishment. Normally the blood feeds the nerves, but if it is thin and weak, it cannot do so. Hence neuralgia and other nerve disorders. Build up and enrich your thin blood with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and you are attacking neuralgia at its root. These pills supply to the blood just the elements that the nerves need, and they have been proved to be the best possible remedy for the treatment of neuralgia, sciatica, neuritis and in fact for all diseases that owe their origin to weak nerves.

Send your name and address to The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co. and they will send free a little book, "Building Up the Blood." You can get Dr. Williams' Pink Pills from any medicine dealer or by mail at 50 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

AUTO RUNS 59 MILES ON GALLON OF GAS

Automobile engineers who worked for years in an effort to reduce gasoline consumption have found the solution in a marvelous invention that fits all cars. An actual test made by one of the engineers showed 59 miles on a gallon of gas. Thousands of car owners have already installed this new invention. They not only report amazing gas savings but are also surprised to find quicker running motors and disappearance of carbon. E. Oliver, 999-632 S. Third St., Milwaukee, Wis., for a limited time is offering a free device to those who will help introduce it. He also needs men everywhere to make $100 weekly in their own territory taking care of local business. Write him at once for free sample and big money making offer.—Adv.

MRS. McCAFFREY TO HEAD W.C.T.U.

MADOC, April 19. — Mrs. J. McCaffrey was elected president of the Madoc W.C.T.U. at the annual meeting held at the home of Mrs. E. West, recently. Psalm 138 was read by Mrs. S. Ashley, and the subject, "Foundation," led by Mrs. Milne, was given by Scriptural readings, in which Mesdames Smith, Blair, Wickham, West, Harris, Fair, Ashley, and Miss Sanderson took part.

A short prayer for guidance for the day and meeting was offered by Mrs. George Harris. The reports of the different departments were given. Mrs. George West reported a bank balance of $43.34; temperance in Sunday Schools was reported by Mrs. S. Ashley, who said that excellent work had been done by means of addresses and pledge signing, one hundred and seventy-eight pledges being signed in the schools against the use of alcohol; and forty-three against the use of cigarettes and profane language.

Essay work was begun in the schools, and thirteen essays were handed in by Fourth Book pupils on "Why I Decided Not to Smoke Cigarettes." The Third Book pupils handed in eight essays on "Good Health," and all were exceedingly well done. Prizes are to be given to the two best

Three Nuns Miraculously Cured Of Paralysis In Quebec Village

MONTREAL, Que., April 19 (Canadian Press).—In a news despatch from St. Hyacinthe, Que., about 40 miles from Montreal, La Patrie, local daily newspaper, says that three nuns, members of the Order of Mary, were "miraculously cured of paralysis recently." The statement which is credited to a report emanating from the convent in which the nuns are stationed, states that the "cures" were effected through the intercession of the recently beatified Jesuit Fathers, martyred by the Indians, some 300 years ago.

The clergy and the convent authorities are very reticent in giving details of the "cures," the despatch adds. It is known, however, that other persons were made well and that their "cures" were attributed to the same source. Documents have been sent to Rome giving a detailed description of the maladies of those persons who have been reported "miraculously cured" and a definite pronouncement is awaited eagerly from the Vatican Court on the matter. Sanction by the Vatican that the reported cures were really of a miraculous nature must be given before recognized by the Roman Catholic Church.

The Montreal Star Saturday reported that three Montreal girls had been similarly cured at St. Hyacinthe.

BLACKSMITH SHOP CHANGES HANDS

S. Elliott, of Sine, Purchases Property From Clayton Tucker.

STIRLING, April 19. — Mr. S. Elliott, who owns the general store at Sine, four miles north of here on the Marmora road, has purchased the blacksmith shop from Clayton Tucker, and has moved it from its foundation to the north of his store. Mr. Elliott has had the shop rented for the past couple of years, but as Mr. Tucker is enlarging his poultry business, the change was necessary.

This shop was built over eighty years ago and many a cwt. of iron has been wrought into shape by the forge in this shop all those years, some of whom might be mentioned: Messrs. Butler, Heagle, Foster, Seely Morton, Elliott, and others.

The property was owned by the heirs of Thomas Butler until 1876, when R. N. Morton purchased it and his death in 1925. One of those three and is in his 91st year, when a resident in that section, he assisted Mr. Morton a great deal.

Farm News

Percy Craighead has put new metal roofing on his barn buildings.

The farm formerly owned by Geo. Kingston, 2nd Concession of Rawdon, was sold on Saturday to Thomas Montgomery.

The farmers are patiently waiting for the spring weather to come and remain, so that the work of seeding may begin.

Several of the cheese factories have begun the season's business.

The council are asking for tenders for the purchase of the old town hall, as it is no longer needed for corporation purposes.

Piano Purchased

Mrs. Mosher who recently was severely burned about the body, due to her clothing catching fire while she was working near the stove, is somewhat improved but is suffering considerably yet.

Mr. George Vandervoort, son of Mr. and Mrs. Vanervoort, who formerly was one of the staff of the Montreal Bank here, and for the past five months, at Bowmanville, has been transferred to Calgary, Alberta.

Mr. and Mrs. Jackson Moore and family have moved to Belleville. Mr. Moore is a traveller for automobile accessories.

Mrs. B. Belshaw returned from Toronto, where she spent the week with friends.

Mrs. J. D. McGee is in Toronto for a couple of weeks.

Dr. and Mrs. Hume Bissonnette, who visited the former's mother, during Easter week, have returned to their home in Hartford, Conn.

Mr. Allan Meiklejohn arrived home from Queen's University and will spend the summer here.

Charles Pearce, who visited his aunt, Mrs. Joseph Reid last week, has returned to his home in Toronto.

Mrs. Mary Tulloch, of Toronto, is visiting at the home of her daughter Mrs. D. Green.

Millbrook

MILLBROOK, April 19. — Alfred Jodoin, of Oshawa, paid an official visit to Windermere Farm this week, conducting the R.O.P. test with W. Fred Fallis' herd of fully-accredited pure-bred Holstein cattle. The result was as follows:

Cavan

CAVAN, April 19.—Mr. H. I. Seymour spent the week-end with friends in Western Ontario.

Mrs. Harold Kincade spent Sunday with her uncle, Mr. Bigelow in Manvers.

Mrs. Gordon Hill and son Jack, of Peterborough, spent Tuesday with Mrs. Hill's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Swain.

Mr. B. Sharpe is in Cobourg this week on the jury.

GOOD PROGRAM GIVEN.

May's Home and School Association Hears Two Good Addresses.

A very pleasant evening was held by the May's Home and School Association on Monday, April 16. There was a short business meeting from 7.30 to 8 o'clock, after which a program was given. Mrs. J. McColl, president, was in the chair.

The program was as follows:

Piano solo by Miss Johnston; readings by Miss Jessie Tully; vocal duets by Mr. and Mrs. E. Rowe.

Mrs. W. R. Morris addressed the meeting, her address being principally on Home and School Association work.

S. T. Harris of the Horticultural Soceity gave an account of flower and vegetable growing at other schools.

A number of new members joined at this meeting. Refreshments were served at the close.

DECISION DAY IS OBSERVED

Rev. A. Poulter Addresses Sunday School of Bethany United Church.

MOTHERS' DAY PROGRAM.

BETHANY, April 19.—Decision Day was observed in the United Sunday school service on Sunday afternoon.

The Rev. A. Poulter pastor, was present and addressed the school centering his remarks on the golden text of the lesson found in John XIV-5, "He that abideth in me, and I in him, the same bringeth forth much fruit; for without me ye can do nothing", many signified their desire to unite with the church and a reception service is planned in connection with next Sunday evening's service.

Evening Service

The Sunday evening service in the United Church on Sunday last was held in connection with the Women's Missionary Society. The Rev. A. Poulter, pastor gave the address which was of interest to the hearers as he told of the beginning of the women's work in the Presbyterian, Methodist and Congregational churches before their union and of the pledge made at the time of the uniting of these churches. He pointed out also how very necessary it was not only for the Missionary work but for the help of the local church that a band of christian women doing missionary work, were.

The regular choir under the leadership of Mr. Alfred Driver sang a missionary chorus.

At a meeting of the Sunday school executive on Monday night in the class room, it was decided to observe Mother's Day program in connection with the evening church service in the United Church, May 13.

Lease Expiring! We Will Not Renew It!

GIVING UP BUSINESS

A year ago our lease was extended for 12 months and will soon expire. On account of poor health, we will not renew the lease, and have only a few short weeks to sell out our fine clean stock of Boots and Shoes. We mean just that, as it has come to a time when we can't hesitate, but must act and act quickly. There's $20,000.00 worth of high-class footwear to dispose of, and only a short time to do it in. To move it lively, we are marking every pair of shoes in the store down to rock bottom. Hundreds of pairs away less than cost—so low that it will pay anyone to buy a good supply for future needs. Leather is advancing rapidly. In this sale you save a big margin on present value, and forestall a certain rise in future prices.

$20,000.00 STOCK OF FOOTWEAR

Thrown On Market For Immediate Disposal

Lease Nearly Out

We just began to realize how short the time was before we would be required to give up the store. It nearly caught us napping, but if Peterboro City and district wake up to the magnitude of this opportunity we will not have a single pair of shoes left when our time is up.

No Time To Lose!

Everything Must Go

This is not simply a sale of surplus stock or slow moving goods—it's a genuine and absolute winding-up sale, due to ill-health and expiration of lease. Our finest shoes are all included in the price slashes, and the savings are prodigious. Nothing like it ever seen in Peterboro.

R. M. GLOVER, Managing Director.

THURSDAY, APRIL 19, 1928.

COURTESY TO OUR VISITORS.

Hon. W. D. Euler's instructions to customs and excise officers having business with the public at border points to exercise courtesy and tact in the carrying out of their duties will strike most people as sound common sense.

Rude and discourteous officials can by their attitude toward visitors to this country set at naught and render meaningless a whole campaign of tourist advertising and propaganda.

Admittedly there are occasions when even the most mild-mannered official has difficulty in restraining himself but the Minister is right when he declares that "it must be borne in mind that discretion, tact and courtesy go hand in hand with the proper performance of those duties" and that "there is no place in the service for an officer who is rude or discourteous."

By the way they are treated here our visitors judge this country and they are entitled not only from customs officials but from everybody else to friendly and courteous attention, first because they are good neighbors and therefore deserve hospitable treatment at our hands, and second because they represent one of Canada's greatest sources of revenue and it is good business to see that their impressions of us are favorable.

PUT SOME TEETH IN THEM.

"I am absolutely tired of fining these transport companies", declared Magistrate Davidson of Mimico in the Highway Traffic Court there on Tuesday.

The Magistrate's protest is not hard to understand when it is realized that he heard some 100 cases concerning over-loaded trucks and imposed forty fines, netting a total of $1,000.

It is evident that if the provincial roads are to be spared from being seriously damaged every spring by heavy trucks the penalties will have to be drastically increased.

When a hundred cases materialize in one court the conclusion is inevitable that transport companies are refusing to take the regulations seriously and that the fines are not heavy enough to make violations of the law expensive.

Such violations are expensive to the people of this province in the repair bills they occasion and they should be made so expensive to the transport companies that the latter will be compelled to respect the regulations.

It is folly to spend millions of dollars each year on good roads and then let a few firms break them down simply for the sake of their own pockets.

If the penalties are not severe enough now to protect the roads the authorities should put some teeth in the regulations covering this point.

ENLIGHTENING THE PUBLIC.

For the means they have adopted to explain the income tax problems to the people of this country The Examiner feels that Hon. W. D. Euler, Minister of National Revenue, and C. S. Walter, Commissioner of Income Tax, deserve a general vote of thanks.

Many phases of the income tax collections are a mystery to the public and the Minister and the Commissioner in adopting newspaper advertising as the best means of throwing light upon the subject have done much to clarify the situation and enlighten the people as to the tax, the regulations governing it and the various steps that must be taken in regard to making returns, etc.

This is a business like and common sense way of keeping the people informed, and it will be popular.

The old method of publishing a new act in the official Gazette and then expecting the public to know all about it was never satisfactory and in some cases was responsible for injustice and harsh treatment that could have been avoided.

The advertisements that are being published by the Department of National Revenue are simple, complete and easy to understand, and both those who are liable to taxation and those who are not will appreciate the clean-cut outlining of the law in regard to this important matter.

The publication of this information is a very real service to Canadians.

IT HITS FAMILY BUDGETS HARD.

'Cost of government" is a phrase that may not mean much to the man-on-the street when he hears it—but even though it may be unrecognized, cost of government forms a very important part of the average family budget.

How important a study of a bulletin on "The Cost of Government in Canada," issued by the Citizens' Research Institute, readily shows.

The Institute finds that in 1926, taking the returns for seventeen Canadian cities, the cost of government Federal, Provincial and Municipal, to a family of five people was on the average of $470.90.

Were deficits on Federal trading enterprises to be taken into consideration the figures representing average governmental costs for a family of five would be $471.15.

That is a lot of money—is it all necessary?

Is there not overlapping in the services rendered and are not the same sources of taxation frequently tapped more than once to maintain the services?

The Citizens' Institute believes that such is the case and is satisfied that the cost of government will be lowered when the citizens are determined that it shall be done.

Intelligent business men, in order to keep down their cost, will scrutinize, analyze and prune every item of business expenditure under their control.

When will the same method be applied by the taxpayer to his bills from his governments?

Would not the same keen insight now applied to personal business problems, if applied to governmental business problems by the people who pay the bills in both cases, make it good policy to effect economy in government?

There's bound to be fair weather for Mr. Price's "blue sky" legislation.—Hamilton Herald.

ONLY TWENTY-FIVE YEARS TO GO.

It is appalling to learn that since the arrival of the white man in Canada, forest fires have destroyed 60% of her primeval forest wealth. Four or five times as much timber has been burned in this country as has been cut for the uses of man and the requirements of commerce. Dissipation of our accessible timber supplies within a period of twenty-five years is forecast.

To bring home to the minds of Canadians before it is too late, the tragic loss that will result to this country if our forest areas are totally destroyed, Canadian Forest Week has been set aside. In the press, in the schools, in clubs and public gatherings, the importance of Canada's forest and Canada's forest industries will be drawn to public attention. If everybody in Canada realized that thousands of families and millions of dollars of capital are dependent upon the Canadian forests, everybody would think twice before throwing down lighted matches or cigarette stubs, or lighting fires in dangerous places and leaving them to spread on or below the surface of the ground. Carelessness has destroyed 60%. The axe has taken 13%. Only carefulness will save the 27% of our forest wealth that remains.

Hon. Charles Stewart, Minister of the Interior, has to do with Canada's forests, and it is encouraging to note his activity in arousing public opinion as to the situation and the imperative need for care in preventing forest fires.

THE CANADIAN ACCENT.

Somebody has been criticing the Canadian accent, and Mr. Reade has written some interesting interviews, on the subject for the Toronto Star. If a Canadian were to go to England and criticize, say, the London accent, he would probably be told, more or less politely, that the accent was good enough for Londoners, and that they were not particularly anxious about outside opinion. A little more of this sturdy spirit might be shown here. This is not to say that our accent is perfect. But improvement is to be sought, not in servile imitation of others, but in considering what the real defect is and trying to remove it.

One defect which might appear is the over-accenting of one syllable or a word and the slurring over of others. In the word education, for instance, we hear a little too much "kay" and not enough of the rest of the word. The remedy is to be sought in privately practicing pronounciation, enunciationg the words slowly and precisely and making every syllable distinct. The effect would perhaps be too precise and pedantic for conversation or public speech, and these purposes a certain relaxation and latitude might be allowed, but in course of time the private practice would correct the error to which we have referred. In the same way, handwriting which has been learned by rigid adherence to models is modified in practice. It may be plain, and yet distinctive.

Imitation may produce some grotesque results. In vain does the imitator strain his facial muscles in trying to say "pawss" and "glawss" if he also avows that he lives in "Tronta." a specimen of the carelessenss to which we have referred. Then, if imitation is resorted to, what is to be imitated—Oxford or London, Somerset or Lancashire, Edinburgh or Aberdeen, Dublin or Belfast? One may hear speakers whose accent is excellent, and yet shows at once that it is distinctly English, Scottish, or Irish. These little differences are pleasant and add picturesqueness to human intercourse. Be as correct as you can, but "be yourself," as the young people say.—London Advertiser.

DOMESTIC SCIENCE.

Various controversies arise between the native Canadian and the newcomer. The customs of the old and the new countries differ; and each one thinks that the thing he is accustomed to is right, and the other thing wrong. At a meeting of a Conservative women's club in Toronto, complaint was made that Old Country domestics use Canada as a stepping-stone to the United States. A "male domestic" writes to the press laying the blame at the Canadian door. A woman accustomed to domestic service in Great Britain, he says, is expected to do here work which would employ three people in her old home, and does not find relief in labor-saving devices. Wages are no better than in Great Britain, a dollar being equal only to a shilling in purchasing power.

"She finds that after being required to produce unimpeachable testimonials as to character and first-class abilities, she is expected to serve, work for, and wait on, a family which for knowledge of etiquette, deportment, social standing and general breeding, does not even begin to approach the average highly trained Old Country domestic."

Canadians need not be depressed by this indictment. A person accustomed to trans-Atlantic ways would be shocked to see the head of the household cleaning away the snow, shaking and filling the furnace, cutting and watering the grass. An English gentleman in Toronto was discussing a proposal that domestic servants should have regular hours of work, and be free at night. "What would you do," he asked, "if you wanted a glass of water at night?" A Canadian householder would go to the tap and get the drink himself, and if hungry would make himself a meal out of the food in the pantry or the refrigerator. Such conduct would horrify a person accustomed to a household with a large staff of servants.

The problem of domestic help in Canada and the United States is being solved in part by labor-saving devices. Another reform that is coming is the change in the relation expressed by the words master or mistress and servant. The domestic assistant would be no longer attached to the household, but would come in and perform certain specified duties and then leave, perhaps to serve other customers in the same way. This practice would give more freedom both to the employer and the employed. Wealthy people may afford suitable quarters for servants, but for those of limited means the old-fashioned relation is as uncomfortable for the recipient as for the giver of help.—London Advertiser.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

Empire buyers are Empire builders.

The charge that women are not interested in politics does not fit in very well with an attendance of one thousand at the National Assembly of Liberal Women at Ottawa.

Britain still leads the world in ship-building. No signs of decadence there.

The Chamber of Commerce should go ahead with its plan for a Dominion Day celebration. Public opinion will be behind the movement.

Right Hon. Arthur Meighen is spoken of as a candidate in the by-election that will be caused by Sir Henry Drayton's resignation. The Federal Government is not likely to do anything to induce the former leader to throw his hat into the ring.

CATTLE, GRAIN AND PRODUCE

TORONTO LIVESTOCK.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, April 19 (Canadian Press). — The only business of importance transacted on the Montreal grain market yesterday was a sale of 40,000 bushels of No. 2 Canadian Western oats for export account at 82c per bushel, c.i.f. Montreal.

Owing to the further advance in oats futures and in the premiums for cash grades a strong feeling developed in the spot market here, and prices were marked up two to five cents per bushel.

Prices for all grades of spring and winter wheat flour were well maintained under a moderate demand.

The demand for all lines of millfeed continued good and a fair amount of business was done at unchanged prices. The undertone to the market for standard grades of rolled oats was stronger on account of the further strength in the raw material and an advance in prices is predicted in the near future.

Little business was transacted in eggs ,but the undertone to the market was firm and prices were unchanged. The receipts were 2,711 cases.

The potato trade continued quiet, but prices ruled steady.

A fairly active business was done in imported beans, and prices were unchanged.

The weakness that developed in the butter situation on Tuesday was again in evidence, and prices scored a further decline of ¼c to ½c per pound. The demand continued dull. The receipts were 487 packages.

The trade in cheese was quiet, and the undertone to the market was weaker for fodder made goods at 18½c per pound. Western grades were unchanged. The receipts were 123 boxes.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

CHICAGO, April 19 (Canadian Press). — Wheat, rye, corn and oats all took a surprising upward shoot yesterday to new high price records for the season. Big speculative buying developed in every kind of grain, with particular notice being taken of an official report that the last week has been one of the most favorable in years for farm crops in Iowa.

The entire grain list finished buoyant at virtuallp the day's topmost level, with wheat 2½ cents to 3¾ cents net higher, corn 2⅛ cents to 2⅞ cents up, oats showing ¾ cent to 2¾ cents gain, and provisions varying from 7 cents decline to a rise of 12 cents.

Among the late developments which put wheat up more swiftly than other cereals were indications that serious damage had been done to spring wheat already seeded in the North-West, and that much re-seeding would be required, because of prolonged alternate freezing and thawing. Earlier, there were continued reports of excessively dry, windy weather, together with predictions of unseasonable low temperatures, south-west and west. Besides, authoritative advices were at hand that European winter crops are showing more damage as they develop, the winter killing in trans-Atlantic countries appears to have been heavier than usual, and that very severe rust damage in the northern part of India is confirmed.

Corn and oats were especially affected by the radical bullish character of the Iowa official report, Iowa being the banner corn state, the fact being pointed out that oats are Iowa's second largest crop. The report said the oats situation in Iowa is probably the worst since 1921, and that preparations for Iowa corn planting are at a standstill owing to the abnormal weather. Under such circumstances, No. 2 white oats available for immediate use brought 70 cents a bushel in Chicago yesterday, the highest figure since 1920.

Provisions were easier as a result of selling on the part of packers and by houses with foreign connections.

STERLING EXCHANGE.

MONTREAL, April 19 (Canadian Press). — Sterling exchange rates were quoted here yesterday as.

AGAINST PARKING BY-LAW.

The Editor of The Examiner.
Dear Sir:

My! my! but the city fathers are getting careful of our merchant's health. The boy really rides too much, ought to walk more, so the fathers prohibit him the use of his car to come up town to his store or office. Uh huh, he's better walking, it's healthier, and the way they take to stop the unhealthy riding is to close all available parking space to anyone who wants to park longer than one hour. Of course, if the lazier ones insist on bringing a car up town, they must just take their punishment and at 10 o'clock and 11 o'clock come out and move the car six inches one way or the other. Serves him right for breaking the prohibition that is intended to be so good for his health. What? Park on the Market Square? That's a joke. Tehre's 4,00 0cars in Peterborough and the Market Square will perhaps hold 200 if double-decked. No! I guess city fathers have us beaten and walking will be the only way for the up town car owner to come to work. It's fine exercise, great health giver. Too bad we don't like what is evidently so good for us.

MARMORA, April 19.—Mr. F. R. Wells was called to Brockville on Monday owing to the death of an uncle.

The family of Mr. Percy Gray are moving to Bancroft this week.

Mrs. C. J. Leonard is visiting her daughter Mrs. Barber, at Deseronto.

Mr. George Kerr made a business trip to Toronto on Tuesday.

GOD'S MINUTE

Let the people praise Thee, O God let all the people praise Thee. Then shall the earth yield her increase; and God, even our own God, shall bless us; and all the ends of the earth shall fear him.—Ps. 67: 5-7.

Our Father in Heaven, we thank Thee for this day and all its opportunities. Help us to show our gratitude by the use we make of it. May Jesus Christ so dwell in our hearts that we shall be kept from sin. Wilt Thou rule and bless our home this day. We pray Thy blessings on friends and neighbors. May we so live before them that we may honor Thy Name. Bless, we pray, the poor and sick and suffering. May their need be to us a call to service.

We pray for Thy blessing on our church. May we strive to win men to Jesus Christ. We pray for town and state and country, that righteousness may prevail. We pray that the Gospel message may speedily go into all the world; that wars may cease; that sin and greed may no longer rule. To this end may we give as Thou hast blessed us. May the peace of God dwell in our hearts this day. We ask it all in the name of Jesus Christ, our Saviour. Amen. Roger Leavitt, Cedar Falls, Iowa.

A movement is under way in England to abolish the act of 1623, still in force, which prohibits cricket matches on Sunday between teams of different parishes, but permits those of elevens of the same parish.

¶ That Peterborough has a future that may be brightened and broadened by the co-operation of every citizen.

¶ That Peterborough has advantages that make it worth my while to live here, work here and boost here.

¶ That because I earn my livelihood here I should buy my goods here, when merchants give the same service and value as is obtainable elsewhere.

¶ That if I spend my money in Peterborough I have a chance to get it back, whereas if I send my money out of town it has no more chance to benefit me.

¶ That if I expect the city to be proud of me I must be proud of the city; that Peterborough is made up of men and women like myself; that if all the other men and women sign this creed as I am doing, Peterborough will progress.

Northerners Retreat.

PEKIN, April 19 (Canadian Press).—The collapse of the Shantung defence before the onslaught of the Nationalists who recently opened a drive on Pekin, has caused the retreat of the Northern armies on all fronts.

CANADIAN NIGHT GREAT SUCCESS

First of Series of National Programs is Presented at S. A. Temple.

ENGLISH NIGHT NEXT.

A fanfare of trumpets heralded the entry of the Canadian contingent at the Temple on Monday evening, when the first of a series of national nights was held, and to Mrs. S. J. Richardson, the organizer, considerable credit must be given for the clever program presented. Miss Canada and little Jack Canuck then entered ,and a court of the provinces was formed ,each province being represented by suitable dress and its natural products or its mineral resources or industry, while seated amongst the 150 Canadians who formed the band and choir were representative cities of each province.

Quebec, snowshoe girl; New Brunswick, fisher girl; British Columbia, fruit and flowers; Prince Edward Island, potatoes; Ontario, electrical power; Manitoba, home of the emigrant; Alberta, coal; Nova Scotia, apples; Yukon, trapper and miner.

A stirring march, "Canada West," played by the Canadian-born members of the senior band, mustering fifteen, was rendered very ably under the conductorship of Master Willie Brooks. The privilege of being Canadian-born was told in poem by Miss A. Moore, while Miss O. Prest gave a brilliant rendition of "Rondo Brilliante," a pianoforte solo that seemed to take the audience over rapid, by beautiful cascade and charming lake ,and made them hold their breath as they seemed to gaze at the towering Rockies. Little Arthur Jones told the story of Alexander Graham Bell and his telephone, a truly Canadian invention that has gone right round the world. The audience was then suddenly taken to the glorious 12th by the appearance of a fife and drum band, whose melodies and drumming resounded loud and joyous. A Made-in-Canada Fair, in which samples of Canadian products were displayed by small boys and the audience enjoined to get their samples at the door.

The story of the Indian squaw's sorrow at the departure of her man to fight the new white chiefs was dramatically given by Mrs. R. C. Braund, while a French-Canadian story, "Little Bateese," was told with naive accent by Miss Nellie Boorman, and Mr. Rusaw gave a fine violin solo. "The Chimes of St. Ann" and "The Canadian Boat Song," sung by a trio of female voices, with a handbell accompaniment, led up to an ensemble finale, "May God Preserve Thee, Canada,' 'and as a tribute to the Motherland, "Brave Old Britain on the Sea," was heartily rendered, and brought the first national night to a close.

The second of this series will take place on St. George's Day, April 23rd, when the English program will be given, and on April 30 the Scottish program will be presented.

The oval in the illustration above shows the British Museum, which contains in four million volumes the world's finest reference library. The cream of this vast storehouse of information is contained in the 12 volumes of Harmsworth's Universal Encyclopedia.

Have the World's Knowledge at Your Elbow

Here is a great opportunity for Knowledge-Lovers who seek to gain more Knowledge in the most modern way—in the home—by the fireside—in the evening—and at odd times when inspired to do so by newspaper reports and references to subjects on which further knowledge is desired.

You know how, in business and social life, the ignorant man is at a discount, but respect and success are won by the man who is sure of his ground. In "Harmsworth's Universal Encyclopedia," you can get at once authoritative, complete information on any of fifty thousand topics.

It is a modern work. In every branch of knowledge it records the vast changes for which the second decade of the twentieth century is conspicuous. These volumes give you in compact form, the finest mental training in the world. With them you broaden your knowledge of the hundred and one important matters touched on in your daily life—you follow up lines of thought that present themselves to your inventive mind—you keep a firm grip on the things that matter today and stimulate your imagination so that you seize the advantages every opportunity offers you.

HARMSWORTH'S UNIVERSAL ENCYCLOPEDIA

BLACK AND WHITE PROOF!

The Montreal Daily Star, Montreal:
It is the ideal encyclopedia for the busy man or woman .... best and latest information on every subject under the sun. Its Canadian articles are splendid.

B. W. Rice, R. B. Rice & Sons, Toronto:
It has already proved to be worth many times its cost. .... The children are delighted with the volumes .... a real achievement and a decided asset to any library.

Rev. R. Moorhead Legate, B.D., Burlington:
Containing the "meat" of every subject of interest under the sun, it forms a most valuable addition to my library .... a real help to a minister or public speaker.

Library of Parliament, Ottawa:
It embraces in its scope a somewhat larger series of subjects of a more or less important character than those customarily dealt with in an encyclopedia.

Dr. D. Whyte, Principal, Normal School, Hamilton:
A concise yet comprehensive Encyclopedia, well suited to the needs of Public and High School classes .... being free from unnecessary technical terms.

The Globe, Toronto:
It is a work of rare value and completeness and a production of which the publishers may well be proud.

Dr. A. C. Casselman, Principal, Normal School, North Bay:
Harmsworth's is indeed "Universal" because there has not some up any topic that cannot be found in it.

The Spectator, Hamilton:
The treatment accorded technical and scientific subjects is practical and strictly modern, the articles being the work of authorities.

Dr. William Prendergast, Principal, Normal School, London:
I know of no work in which that short form of information or history can be got as in "Harmsworth's Universal Encyclopedia."

Librarian, Westmount Library, Westmount, Que.:
"Universal" seems to be the correct adjective. So far, your encyclopedia meets our needs in a wonderful manner.

The Border Cities Star, Windsor:
It is giving excellent satisfaction in our office .... no one could ask for anything more substantial in either binding or contents.

The Canadian National Railways, Montreal:
Maintaining as we do an extensive reference library, we have found it invaluable in our work.

Harmsworth's Universal Encyclopedia will lighten the load you try to make your memory bear.

YOUNG PEOPLE MEET AT NORHAM

"Slang and Cheap Talk" Subject of Discussion on Program.

NORHAM, April 19.—The Young People's League held its monthly citizenship program on Monday evening. Miss Lulu Mitchell and Claude Palmatier took part in the devotional part, while Gordon Mitchell had charge of the citizenship topic, "Slang and cheap talk." He gave a general talk on the dangers of slang and cheap talk. Several boys had prepared five-minute talks on question. Those speaking being: Norman McCubbin, "Which is the more harmful, to inflict a physical wound or to tell a false story about another person"? Hoyden Newman on "Is there any use in slang? Should slang terms be inserted in the dictionary?"; Blair Huyke, "How may we improve our speech"?; Rex Lean, "Should ministers or others, in telling stories, use the very words of the author, even if slang terms are used"? These talks were very helpful and interesting, and after each speaker had given his opinion on the question, the matter was given open discussion, which brought out different phases of the questions.

After a game prepared by the citizenship committee, the meeting closed.

Personals

Miss F. McCready, has returned from Belleville to renew teaching in Norham Public School.

Messrs. F. Huyke and N. Gummer were called to Cobourg on the jury on Monday.

Mr. L. Palmatier and his brother motored from Oshawa on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Crealock visited friends in Morganston and Castleton last Friday.

Mrs. Q. Isaac and daughter Lenore, have returned from Harwood where they were visiting Mrs. Isaac's mother.

Miss Helen Runnals is still supplying at Pine Grove school in place of Miss Della Diamond.

There are a couple of very bad spots between Norham and the Campbellford road. These are causing much difficulty to drivers.

Those who attended in Campbellford the debate of the Inter-League series for Bay of Quinte Conference, last Monday night were Mr. and Mrs. H. Curtis, Miss Jennie Dilworth, Rev. D. R. and Mrs. Clare.

Mr. R. McCann was taken suddenly ill and rushed to Belleville hospital on Thursday, where he was operated on for appendicitis. Many friends are pleased to know that reports of his condition are favorable.

FLEW ROUND WORLD WITH EMPTY PURSE

Friends Helped Out Costes and Lebrix at Many Stopping Places.

PARIS, April 19.—Dieudonne Costes and Joseph Lebrix flew all the way around the world broke. Most of the time they did not have enough money to buy fuel and pay their hotel bills, although other fliers have made large sums from successful flights such as theirs.

During their long tour, the terrors of the air often took second place in their thoughts beside the problem of how they were going to feed their plane and themselves.

A personal friend of Costes paid for the gasoline with which they took off from Washington for New York. Rene Fonck, the French ace, paid their New York hotel bill.

Manicurists of Manila are complaining that tips are very scarce and very small.

"It's— CATCHING"

CLEAN UP-PAINT UP

When you see your neighbors getting busy in every possible way, it should put the urge to "go and do likewise" in your own breast. Springtime is being-busy-time around homes. Bill Smith says: "Land sakes, I was shavin' this morning when it suddenly occurred to me that my lawn needed a shave, too."

Follow good examples—make the old home look as if it had just come out of a bandbox.

NEW BRITISH BUDGET WILL AID INDUSTRY

Churchill Expected To Provide $150,000,000 To Relieve Railways of Municipal Tax.

FREIGHT CUT AIDS OTHERS.

Trade Revival May Then Reimburse Government—Cotton and Sugar Duties Affect U. S.

LONDON, April 18. — A year's struggle by the interests connected with what are known as Britain's basic industries, supported by that considerable section of the Government which believes in tariffs, for an expansion of the present "Safeguarding of Industry" duties to the proportion of a fairly comprehensive system will end when Winston Churchill, Chancellor of the Exchequer, will present his annual budget.

It is understood the struggle will end happily for the basic industries, but in the defeat of "protection" or at most only a few minor victory

This may seem a paradox, but everything connected with tariffs and protection is paradoxical in England. Politically, Britons are still free traders, and they give every indication of remaining so, while economically they have been forced by the pressure of post-war circumstances to impose a good deal of protection in one form or another. British motor cars are protected in the home market, for instance partly by the imposition of an annual tax on horse power. This falls lightly on the low-powered English automobile, but heavily on heavier engined American car. It has incidentally caused the production here of a type of car which has proved unsuitable to conditions elsewhere in the empire, and has led to agitation in the trade itself for a transfer of the tax from horse power to gasoline, so British manufacturers can turn out a product which will sell as well abroad as the American makes.

Relief For Steel and Other Groups.

Another form of protection lies in restrictions on trade marks and on the use of preservatives necessary to allow foreign food products to be imported. The 'Safeguarding of Industries act" is, of course, protection pure and simple by another name.

A determined effort has been made by British iron and steel manufacturers, who have been wallowing for four years in the slough of despond, for an extension of the "Safeguarding" provisions to their products. It is understood, however, that Mr. Churchill decided that to give them relief by a tariff would be too dangerous politically. So the iron and steel, coal cotton and agricultural industries and the railways, all of which have been suffering, are to be helped in another way, by an amelioration of the burden of local rates. The rates, or local taxes, rose in some London boroughs a few years after the war to fifteen and even twenty shillings in the pound. Everywhere throughout the country they press heavily on the depressed industries.

An inquiry was held some time ago into the incidence of the rates on agricultural land, railways, mines, quarries, steel and iron works and blast furnaces, shipbuilding mills and manufactories ,gas and electricity undertakings, and it is understood there will be a scheme for their reduction which eventually will cost the Exchequer $150,000,000 annually. It is understood the rates paid by the railway companies will be reduced in return for a reduction in freights on coal, iron and steel and other commodities.

The Government hopes thus to give an impetus to agricultural and trade revival, and reap in increased income tax returns what it loses otherwise.

Hopes To Aid Trade Revival.

There will, however, be several new "safeguarding" duties, and one of them, if imposed, will somewhat seriously affect one category of American exports to Britain. This is cotton hosiery and knited wear. The imposition of duties on silk and rayon in 1925 caused a 50 per cent. drop in imports, and American exports of cotton hosiery will probably be hit if cotton is similarly "safeguarded."

Ameircan exoprters of refined sugar, who increased their shipments here last year by 400 per cent. compared with 1926, will also be hit by a reduction of 2 shillings per hundredweight in the tax on raw sugar imports which it is reported the Chancellor of the Exchequer will make. This, it is declared here will result in the virtual exclusion of foreign refined sugar.

Mr. Churchill has been justified for his last year's budget by the realization of a small surplus. But he is now believed to have exhausted all possibilities of fiscal jugglery such as those with which he astonished the financial pundits last April, and it is expected this new budget will be safe and sane to pave the way for pre-election reductions in taxation next spring.

INDIGESTION Troubled Him For Two Years

"THE MESSAGE OF THE CARILLON"

By Mackenzie King Prime Minister of Canada (Reviewed by a Conservative).

The book of addresses which Mr. King issued as a memoir of the Jubilee of Confederation is replete with instances of his application of the sceintific method. Science teaches only one thing, after all. It teaches us to state what we think are the facts and to put our prejudices to one side. It is a great lesson truly and makes for the unravelling of many mysteries, one being the mystery of nationhood. Here is what to my mind is a fine instance of distorting facts to suit our own ideas. A genial Canadian of Irish extraction remarked to me that the Irish of Ireland are the finest-looking people in the world, strong, healthy and ready for a bit of a shindy by way of diversion. "But", he said with a terrible sigh, "they drink too much. It's something shocking the number of public houses and the quantity of liquor consumed."

"What would you do about it?" I asked.

"Do? I'd prohibit it."

"And yet these people are the finest looking people in the world! In face of that fact you would alter their diet. You are a strange reasoner".

"What would you do then?" he asked scornfully.

"I would advise you to take something", I observed slyly.

Now while it does not follow that drink is a good thing it certainly does follow that we cannot point to the ideal products of certain conditions and then attack those conditions. That is not logical or scientific. There is a flaw in the reasoning somewhere. Where it it? We cannot build up a nation on bad reasoning. Nature will not be dictated to, says Dr. Mayo, and the sooner we recognize that fact the better for us. Buckle applied this law to civilization and its development is a natural condition. We must be very careful of providing our own remedies for things, for after all we are not the creators and finishers of the world. If each of us would attend more to himself we would be vastly better. It is a mistake to lay down laws for other people. Society must be defended against the criminal and we must help the weak but laying down a new order of civilization is beyond us. Again the "Message of the Carillon" reminds us that conciliation and kindness are better instruments than the club and the jail. If this be not true then all should adopt the method of force which the blindest amongst us can see would utterly destroy that which we are trying to build up. It was not the message of the Gospel. It is not "The Message of the Carillon". Force binds nothing. It breaks asunder. Upon the soldiers and a nation prostrated by burden of war leaped a large body of strange men and women declaring more war. For the sake of argument let us say both wars were just and righteous wars.

Nevertheless are we not calling even the Great War just in every particular as it was a hateful thing since all methods of settling difficulties by force are hateful. But if one why not the other? If one which concerned our very national existence why not one about which there is a very considerable difference of opinion and at best but partial in its bad effects? When we come to think of it we are a long, a very long way from reaching the goal of a perfect or even half-perfect civilization. Again Mr. King's "Message" shines like a soothing light amid the encircling gloom. The old English motto of "Take it easy" and the Scottish one of "Hand your hand" and the Irish one "Howld yer howld till I spit on me hands" are just as wise as ever and besides they eliminate that nasty element of sneakiness and unfair surprise which produces more damage even than bad whiskey and surely that is unnecessary.

Mr. King's idea of good government evidently is so to maintain the balance amongst all the elements of our national population that the peace resulting will give us time and inclination to work out gradually our destiny. It is a wise as well as kindly policy. Prize-fighters can speak well of each other and surely we can.
